All Resources Ordered Into Storm Aid Battle; Meat Losses Serious

Truman Authorizes Unlimited Spending; Generals Fleming, Pick in Command

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday ordered mobilization of the full resources of the Federal Government for relief of the snowbound West.

He authorized Secretary of Defense Forrestal to spend unlimited funds to help South Dakota, Nebraska, Nevada, Utah and Wyoming keep their people and cattle alive, and get their roads open.

The President also named Gen. Philip Fleming, Federal Works Administrator, as Federal coordinator of blizzard relief. Fleming immediately got in touch with the Army chief of engineers, who began to deploy Army resources into the battle.

Royall, From Alaska, Urges All-out Relief

Secretary of the Army Kenneth Royall phoned Washington from Fairbanks, Alaska, shortly after midnight today urging immediate aid by the Department of the Army to the storm-stricken West regardless of "lines of authority or legalistic implications."

Secretary Royall, who is en route to the Far East, notified Acting Secretary William H. Draper, jr., to "spare neither manpower nor money" in rushing aid to the stricken areas.

First result was that Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, who directed wartime construction of the China-Burma road, was placed in direct charge of storm relief in all the Missouri Basin area except Montana.

Biggest Job Since Ledo Road

Pick called the job "the biggest bulldozer operation since the Ledo Road."

He was given what amounted to a blank check, and defense officials estimated that several millions of dollars would be used in blizzard relief.

Mr. Truman told Forrestal, in a special directive, the disaster "makes it imperative that the full resources of the Federal Government be mobilized immediately to furnish such emergency assistance as can be made available through the Federal agencies."

"This is an all-out effort to give the maximum relief to human suffering and to get the cattle out," one Army official said.

The new White House order legally unlocks the armed forces' huge store of vehicles and supplies all over the United States for use in the stricken areas.

In addition, Mr. Truman asked Congress to appropriate $500,000 more for relief to add to a similar amount it approved earlier and which was allocated yesterday to Fleming. The President originally asked for one million dollars and his request was to round out that sum.

No Ceiling on Amount Authorized

No limit was set on the amount Forrestal was authorized to spend from existing river and harbor, flood control and other funds.

In a letter to the defense head, the President said he will ask Congress to replace "such funds" as may be used. Mr. Truman specified that funds could be used "without regard for existing apportionments."

Forrestal was authorized to act through anyone in the military establishment he designated. Detailed requests for the funds will be made by Fleming.

As the tempo of military relief operations was stepped up, 60 bulldozers were en route from Granite City, Ill., to the storm zone. Another 46 were readied for shipment.

With some 60 snow-traveling "weasels" already in use another 150 were being prepared for ship-

Kefauver Acts To Speed Up Home Rule Bill

District Suffrage Measure Timed for Senate Debate April 1

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), chairman of the Senate Home Rule Subcommittee, has charted a legislative timetable aimed to have a Washington home rule bill ready for Senate floor debate by April 1.

Outlining his schedule for hearings and drafting a city self-rule bill, Kefauver also told The Washington Post last night that:

"I sincerely believe prospects are pretty good this year for congressional approval of home rule legislation—if we work calmly and slowly feel our way along in a cooperative spirit."

He hinted his subcommittee may report out an abbreviated bill dedicated primarily to giving residents a chance to elect city officials without attempting a complete District government reorganization in "one package."

Home Rule Is Chief Goal

The Auchincloss bill, in addition to providing an elected city council, calls for a top-to-bottom reshuffling and consolidation of the local government setup.

Kefauver emphasized that he was vitally interested in seeing both a complete streamlining of the District government organization and extending national representation to District residents.

"But our chief goal this year," said the Tennessee Democrat, "will be home rule suffrage. We must keep in close touch with the thinking of the majority and minority leadership so we can bring out a bill that will have a real chance of getting past both houses."

Timetable for Bill

This is how Kefauver, the Senate's chief home rule strategist, proposes to speed his legislation to Senate floor action:

1. He and his other two subcommittee members—Matthew W. Neely (D., W. Va.) and Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.)—already have begun studying last year's lengthy testimony of the Auchincloss bill hearings and other previous District suffrage data. Both Representatives have expressed sympathy to the home rule idea.

2. James R. Kirkland, Senate District Committee counsel, has been instructed to brief down this same past testimony with particular reference to the most contested aspects of previous and pending home rule proposals. When it is completed he will present his brief to an executive session of the home rule subcommittee.

3. Kefauver then plans to hold

Livestock Deaths Of Up to Million Head Estimated In Survey of West

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The American meat supply, which has been severely limited for the last four years, has suffered a serious new blow from Old Man Winter throughout the great grazing States west of the Missouri River.

How great the loss will be is anybody's guess. Reports from Nebraska, Colorado, Utah, South Dakota and Montana indicate that most ranchers don't know their individual losses.

Estimates of the direct loss of cattle range from 250,000 head, by one of Chicago's great meat packers, to a million head by a Denver cattleman.

Losses to Be Heavier

But all cattle and sheepmen agree on one thing—the losses will be a great deal more than will be apparent in the livestock deaths due to the cold. This is why:

1. The cold weather plus the heavy snows that have kept cattle from both feed and forage, have caused a tremendous shrinkage in the weight of range animals. Experts throughout the range country told The Washington Post last night that this shrinkage probably will amount to several times the loss by death.

2. The calving season begins in about two weeks in the southern portion of the range area and extends until early in March in Nebraska, Colorado, Utah and South Dakota. Until that period is over, the individual cattleman cannot make any estimate of what his loss will be. Weakened condition of the cows will undoubtedly result in a great decline of calves this spring.

Sheep Situation Similar

Much the same situation exists in regard to sheep, which already are at the lowest point in numbers since just after the Civil War.

3. Many other animals in the plains herds are expected to suffer from frozen feet, and other cold damage which probably won't become evident until later.

The serious feature of the situation is damage to the country's breeding herds. Animals destined for the dinner table within the next few months will come out of the Midwest feed yards which haven't been seriously affected by the storms. But the losses to the breeding herds will mean that the effects will be felt for several years. It takes three to six years to rebuild a depleted breeding herd for cattle, and three to four years for sheep.

The winter has been the worst in the Great Plains area in history.

Rescue Operation

Both State and Federal agricultural workers have been working with volunteer forces, Army units and local volunteers, trying to break through to areas where cattle and sheep have become isolated from their feed.

In western Nebraska, where 29 counties with 1,684,000 head of cattle valued at $252,266,000 are in the center of the worst storm area, the snow is 60 inches—5 feet—deep.

The snow is in layers. One blizzard followed another, until five were reported in four weeks. After each heavy snowfall there was a thaw. The top layer of the snow melted and then froze, and another layer fell upon it.

The result, Farm Editor Coffey of the Omaha World-Herald told The Washington Post, is 5 feet of snow in 5 layers with thick ice separating each layer.

"It is so hard that Army bulldozers, trying to make trails through the snow to the isolated

White House Is on Verge Of Collapse

Rebuilding of All But Outside Walls Held Only Solution At Cost of 7 Millions

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The White House may collapse at any time and certainly would do so eventually without extensive rebuilding, engineers revealed yesterday.

Sagging under the burden of its 150 years, and weakened by repeated alterations and makeshift modernizations, the historic structure can be restored only by ripping out its interior to the bare outside walls and rebuilding from the ground up. This work will cost a great deal more than the four million dollars included in the budget. The estimate given yesterday was seven million.

Completion of the work, engineers predicted, will take 15 to 18 months.

Disclosed by Chopping

The critically dangerous condition of the building was revealed only after walls and floors had been chopped away to get at the load-bearing portions of its structure. Previously hidden conditions then came to light which led to the conclusion that nothing short of complete demolition and reconstruction of the interior could save the structure as a national shrine.

Reporters were taken yesterday on a two-hour tour of the White House and were shown in detail the ravages of time and improvisation. Two experts, Loreno Winslow, architect of the White House, and C. W. Barber, chief structural engineer for the Public Buildings Administration, explained the magnitude of the job of restoration.

Huge Load on Soft Clay

The newsmen learned that:

1. Progressive failure of load-bearing interior walls has thrown a weight of 180,000 pounds on one small section of one wall which rests on soft clay with no foundation. Bricks in this wall already have been crushed, and its failure would plunge the roof and all the interior to the basement.

2. Ceilings in many rooms have sagged as much as 6 inches. In the famed East Room, Winslow said, the heavy ceiling with three huge chandeliers would probably have fallen "within an hour" if it had not been braced immediately after discovery.

3. An 18-inch wooden beam above the state dining room had been cut through to make way for a steel I-beam during a previous "strengthening" job. This left only 5 inches of wood supporting the weight for which the 18-inch beam had been designed, with the result that the wooden beam had split for 4 feet from its juncture with a wall.

4. All interior walls carry heavy loads but all were built on soft clay with no foundation under them.

Many Walls Cracked

5. Many walls have cracked, the ancient lime-and-sand mortar has lost all cohesive power, some walls have pulled away at the corners as much as a hand's breadth, bricks have split or crumbled in many places.

6. Floors throughout the building have sagged and sloped in all directions.

7. Workmen on previous repairs have left piles of wood shavings and chips between floors and the ceilings of rooms below, creating a fire hazard which has existed more than 45 years.

To restore the building so it will be safe, livable and certain of many more years of existence as a public shrine, Winslow and Barker said the primary necessity is to replace the failing interior walls. To do this, all those existing must be torn down and new

Truman Labor Bill Submitted; Ends Anti-Strike Injunctions, Closed Shop Ban, Red Oaths

One-Package Law Depends on Findings Of Boards to Curb National Walkouts

By The Associated Press

The Truman Administration urged Congress yesterday to throw away the weapon of court injunctions for blocking national emergency strikes and called instead for a voluntary cooling off procedure.

Formally submitting legislation for revising basic labor laws, the Administration demanded repeal of the Taft-Hartley Law and a restored Wagner Act bearing "improvements" President Truman wants.

Erasing the Taft-Hartley Law also would junk these familiar union restrictions:

The requirement that union officials must swear they are not Communists if they wish to deal with the National Labor Relations Board.

The prohibition against political spending by unions.

The ban on the closed shop, which requires employers to take on only union members.

Fight Already Begun

Supporters of the Taft-Hartley Law already have begun a fight to keep those and many other provisions on the books.

The question of how to deal with "national emergency" strikes is one that has given officials charged with drafting the new bill considerable thought.

The Taft-Hartley measure dealing with labor-management relations lets the Government get 80-day court orders to prevent strikes that imperil the national health or safety—while mediators try to work out a settlement.

Administration officials debated for weeks whether to keep the injunction provision. Organized labor protested vigorously against it. The idea finally was dropped.

Writs Only for NLRB

In national emergency strike threats, the new bill would depend mainly upon the moral force of recommendations by emergency boards—as in the Railway Labor Act. While the boards are at work and for five days thereafter—a total of 30 days—the bill says both labor and management shall continue operations. But no injunctions or penalties are provided in case they don't.

In fact the only injunctions allowed under the entire bill are those which the National Labor Relations Board can get to enforce its "unfair labor practice" findings.

Certain boycotts and strikes of a "jurisdictional" nature (in which a union seeks to beat out another union to do certain work) are made "unfair labor practices" under the new bill. A union conceivably could be subject to injunctions in those cases—but only after the NLRB had found them guilty of violations.

The new bill was sent to the Capitol by Secretary of Labor Tobin. He will discuss it Monday before the Senate Labor Committee.

Mr. Truman's drive to get rid of the Taft-Hartley Law already has stirred furious debate in Congress. Backers of the present law

Reds Demand Chiang Arrest Immediately

President Li Warned To Act or Expect Harsh Punishment

Nanking, Jan. 29 (AP).—The Chinese Communists coldly told Acting President Li Tsung-jen today he must arrest Chiank Kai-shek as a war criminal or "you will be punished" without mercy.

The Communist radio in North China accused Li of "conniving" in the flight of government leaders from Nanking. It wanted all other government officials on the Red list of "war criminals" arrested.

Since Chiang and almost all others on the list long since have gone south, it is impossible for Li to comply, even should he wish.

The Communists demanded a prompt reply, but there was no official public reaction. Acting President Li, inside his strongly guarded home, was the only responsible official left in the capital. Not a single cabinet member could be located.

The victorious Communist armies were idling on or near the north bank of the Yangtze at many points. Coupled with this, the new political demands plunged Nanking hopes of a negotiated settlement to new lows.

The Communist broadcast, by an unidentified spokesman, also angrily demanded rearrest of Lieut. Gen. Yasutsugu Okamura, last Japanese commander in China. He was acquitted of war crimes be-

Plea From Army

State Dept. Rule Urged For U.S. Zone

The Army, appealing to President Truman, wants the administration of the United States zone of Germany turned over to the State Department as soon as possible, it was learned last night.

Army Secretary Kenneth C. Royall urged the switch in a formal recommendation to the White House.

Neither the White House nor the State Department, however, wants to rush through any quick change in the American setup in Germany, a political and economic battleground in the cold war.

General Lucius D. Clay is reported again pressing officials here to be allowed to retire as military governor, but President Truman is represented as anxious to keep him on the job a while longer.

Responsible officials said disposition of Royall's proposal will turn largely on the advice to be given President Truman by Secretary of State Acheson. Acheson, in office little more than a week, has been swamped with other matters.

Moreover, insiders regard it likely that he would want an exhaustive review made of the whole German problem, including the specific inssue of administration.

Royall's recommendation to Mr. Truman, with copies to the Secretary of State and other interested officials, is reported to have been made in mid-January. He returned from a tour of Germany January 3. Yesterday he left Washington for a visit to Japan.

The recommendation does not constitute any new Army policy.

Some informants said that what lends a quality of urgency to the present situation is that General Clay has become more emphatic in expressing to Royall and others his desire to retire. This, in Royall's reported opinion, apparently made it timely to raise the whole problem of civilian versus military control again.

Israel Is Cool To Recognition By Britain

'Complete Downfall' In Their Policy, Foreign Minister Says

NYHT News Service

Tel Aviv, Jan. 29.—The de facto recognition of the state of Israel by Britain today met with a cool reception from government officials and private citizens here. There was little indication British-Israeli relations would improve at once.

Foreign Minister Moshe Shertok said he felt the British decision represented a "complete downfall" of the British policy regarding Palestine.

Britain, Benelux Recognize Israel

London, Jan. 29 (AP).—Britain recognized Israel today, giving the Jewish state the recognition of all the Big Four.

Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg also climbed aboard the bandwagon.

The United States and Russia recognized Israel when the state was formed last May. France extended recognition Monday.

Britain's recognition is de facto, or qualified, as was that of the United States. It means recognition of existence of the state.

Joseph Linton, acting representative of the Tel Aviv government, called on Foreign Secretary Bevin soon after the British move was announced. He was with Bevin 25 minutes. Later he described the meeting as cordial.

Welcoming the decision, Linton said he trusted "it may lead to the earliest establishment of normal and friendly relations between Britain and Israel."

A Foreign Office spokesman quoted Bevin as saying he looked

New Russian Plan On Berlin Money Studied in U. N.

NYHT News Service

Berlin, Jan. 29.—A new Soviet proposal for solving the East-West currency dispute in Berlin has been submitted to the United Nations "neutral" committee of experts at Geneva and has made an initial favorable impression on the French and British, according to French circles in Berlin.

The Soviet plan is a counterproposal to the compromise solution of the "neutral" committee and has been under study by the committee and the Western powers for more than a week.

Sources in Berlin say it is impossible yet to give a final judgment on the Russian plan, which was submitted by the Soviet financial adviser, P. Maletin, because he announced amendments are still forthcoming.

American economists say the plan contains "hookers" which would result ultimately in giving the Soviet Union an economic stranglehold on Berlin.

Disabled on Return Landing

B-36 Drops 42 Tons of Bombs On Non-Stop 2900-Mile Flight

Fort Worth, Tex., Jan. 29 (AP).—A Consolidated Vultee B-36 today carried the greatest bomb load ever lifted—42 tons—and was disabled on its return landing at Carswell Air Force Base.

As the plane returned at 7:30 p. m. (CST) from dropping two giant bombs on a California bombing range. A propeller bit into the concrete runway when the main landing gear under the right wing collapsed. Sparks set off a small grass fire alongside the runway.

"No one was even scratched and there was no serious damage to the plane except to the landing gear and the right wing," Ray O. Ryan, convair division manager, said.

The B-36 was piloted by Maj. Stephen P. Dillon, deputy district chief of the air material command.

The B-36 took off from Carswell Base, Tex., flew to a bombing range at the Muroc (Calif.) Air Test Base, and returned to the Texas field, ordinarily a round trip of 2400 miles. However, additional time over the target and other deviations in the route brought the total distance to 2900 miles.

The weight of the two 42,000-pound bombs lifted by the six-engine Consolidated Vultee plane was equivalent to that of a wartime B-17 Flying Fortress. At take-off the bomber, its bombs and fuel load totaled over 300,000 pounds.

On the nonstop flight of 2900 miles, the bomber averaged more than 250 miles an hour. Its air speed as it released the missiles was better than 350 miles an hour.

The first bomb was released at above 35,000 feet. The B-36 then climbed to over 40,000 feet and dropped the second missile. The Air Force said that over 40,000 feet is the normal bombing altitude for the B-36.

Both the bombs were carried in normal manner within the huge bomb bays of the B-36, one in each bay. In previous tests the 42,000-pound bombs have been dropped by B-29s, each carrying only one bomb and this shackled to the underside of the airplane because it was too large for the B-29 bomb bay.

The spectacular feat was described in the announcement as "a normal test flight."

Vishinsky Disclosed as Ill With 'Grave Nervous Disorder'

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Jan. 29 (AP).—Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky is "gravely ill from a nervous disorder," a staff member of a Russian army sanatorium at Karlsbad said tonight.

"Mr. Vishinsky is unable to concentrate on anything," the staff member said. "He cannot be seen by anyone."

The sanatorium is in the Hotel Imperial one of the show places of Karlsbad, an ancient health resort 70 miles west of Prague.

Staff employes and a nurse made no secret of their concern over the condition of Vishinsky, one of the top figures in Soviet diplomacy.

The statement of his illness was the first official disclosure that Vishinsky was in Czechoslovakia. It was given out after a conference with one of his attendants.

Rumors circulated here Thursday that Vishinsky had been "trouble shooting" in Czechoslovakia.

There had been mutterings that President Klement Gottwald, dubbed by some Czechoslovak refugees as a "good Czech," had been veering into what Moscow might consider deviationist ways similar to those which brought Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia into Soviet disfavor.

Vishinsky, 66, headed the Soviet delegation at the last meeting of the United Nations General Assembly in Paris. He has been one of the most vigorous defenders of Soviet foreign policy in all international assemblies.

Mrs. Gizycka Reported Given Lump Sum in Will Settlement

The Patterson will contest has been settled with a lump-sum payment to Mrs. Felicia Gizycka, only daughter of Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, late publisher of the Washington Times-Herald, it was learned last night.

The settlement, according to an informant, did not give Mrs. Gizycka any voice or interest in the Times-Herald. As a result of the Friday agreement, management of the newspaper is expected to pass out of the hands of the Riggs National Bank, court-appointed collector, sometime next month, and be turned over to the three executors named in the will.

Exact amount of the lump-sum payment could not be determined, but a source in a position to know said it ranged between $400,000 and $500,000.

Mrs. Gizycka, it was reported, waived her claim to a life income of $25,000 a year provided under the terms of the Patterson will.

One of Mrs. Gizycka's attorneys, William A. Roberts, charged in District Court on January 14 that the will was so drawn as to preclude any payment to Mrs. Gizycka under the $25,000-a-year clause or to any charity, charitable beneficiaries and pensioners named in the will. He said the money would be consumed in preserving the tax-exempt status of the Times-Herald bequest and to meet other specific bequests.

Two New Rockets Can Be Redirected

The Air Force said yesterday it has developed two new high altitude rocket guided missiles, with controls which can aim them from the ground at a target while in flight.

One of them, the 774, was described as "potentially capable of attaining altitudes of more than 100 miles." This, the larger of the two, is 32 feet long, compared with the 45-foot length of the wartime V-2 rocket of the Germans.

An Air Force spokesman said that "these are true guided missiles, which can be launched in one direction, then changed in their flight to hit another target."

The formal announcement referred only to control of the rockets by four movable fins. This did not explain how the fins are actuated from the ground. Air Force experts said that presently the degree of control is not great, but it does exist.

Major Objectives

(This has been one of the major objectives in the guided missile program. Neither the V-2 nor the earlier V-1 "buzz bomb," which was not a rocket but a jet-powered flying bomb, could be aimed after launching had occurred except for a device to cut off power and start the missiles into a descending flight pattern.)

The other new rocket, called the Nativ, is about 13 feet long. Designed for study of air foil design, development of control systems and training of rocket launching crews, the Nativ has an altitude trajectory of about 10 miles. The Air Force said both rockets had been successfully test fired but did not disclose the altitudes attained by the big 774.

A total of $26,500,000 allocated to the Air Force since last fall will be used to purchase guided missiles and allied equipment for training and experiments, Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force chief of staff, said.

Supersonic Speeds Reached

The Air Force said both the new rockets "have reached supersonic speeds." The speed of sound is 763 miles an hour at sea level at a temperature of 59 degrees Fahrenheit; at 40,000 feet, about 660 miles an hour.

The Air Force said liquid-fuel rocket motors are used in both new models. (Experiments with various types of liquid fuel have been made, some of them mixtures of alcohol and liquid oxygen.)

Hazards From Atomic Wastes Now Under Control, AEC Says

The Atomic Energy Commission is satisfied that hazards from disposal of radioactive wastes from AEC plants, nuclear reactors and other installations are now being sufficiently controlled to assure public safety.

This was the substance of a partial transcript of a seminar of 57 leading members of the sanitary engineering and waterworks professions, public health, military and other groups held at commission headquarters last Monday and Tuesday.

The report did not indicate that all problems are solved. It emphasized that some are solved for the time being, but that future questions must be answered as they develop.

"The waste disposal problem is a part of this general business of learning to live with radiation," David E. Lilienthal, chairman of AEC, told the seminar.

Warns of Hysteria

"The way we have learned to live with things before was to learn as much as we could about them; to keep our shirts on; not to get overly emotional or hysterical; not to escape from things by emotional outburts.

"This is not the way we have acted in every instance. I am sure that the first tornado ever observed, certainly the first great fire and many natural phenomena, have led those who saw them to seek some kind of escape, usually in describing these things as magic.

"Radiation is just as much of a natural phenomenon as anything else. The fact that we have multiplied it by intelligence does not change that fact. I am sure there will be a good deal of shock, at first, as we get used to these facts. But I am sure also that just as we were able by our intelligence to conquer other things, we will conquer this as well."

The atomic energy installations and processes that are sources of radioactive wastes were described by two AEC officials, Roger S. Warner, director of engineering, and Arthur V. Peterson of the production division..

The amounts of waste produced at the various sites vary in great degree.

"A clinic treating a person with radioiodine, or a research laboratory using small amounts of radiophosphorus in biological tracer work, will create a small problem, provided the physician or research worker takes normal known precautions," Warner said.

"The larger research laboratories such as the Argonne National Laboratory, the Brookhaven National Laboratory and the Oak Ridge National Laboratory, produce considerably greater quantities of radioactive materials, but the low permissible limits for radioactivity discharged into soil, air or water are usually met through techniques of dispersion and dilution and use of normal industrial decontaminating devices such as filters and scrubbers.

"The radioactivity produced at the great atomic energy production centers—particularly at Hanford, Wash.—is of another order of magnitude."

Very high-level wastes at Hanford, Warner explained, are held at the site until the radioactivity decays, or the material is reprocessed for its highly valuable components—or they are held in properly protected underground storage indefinitely.

The seminar, with United States Weather Bureau officials attending, discussed measures taken, particularly at the Brookhaven plant, to study and protect the air from contamination by radioactive fumes. Methods of discharging wastes into rivers—after its radioactive elements have been dissipated—were discussed.

Lilienthal told reporters that radioactive wastes from the Oak Ridge plants were discharged to the Clinch River. Afterward, he said, "the level of radioactivity in that river was found to be considerably less than that in Pluto Water.

Radiations from the atomic bomb itself were not discussed. What the engineers were concerned with was the peacetime problem of preventing radioactive contamination of the air, soil and water supplies of communities where atomic projects are carried out. Wartime destruction of atomic reactors by bomb hits and "accidental spills" are hazards that may have to be contended with.

You also can forget about those atomic clouds left over from the Bikini bomb tests. They don't exist Lilienthal said.

Periodically since the 1946 tests, rumors and reports have been published to the effect that clouds of radioactive particles are endlessly circling the earth.

Lilienthal explained that radioactive "fission products" let loose in the air by atomic blasts are thoroughly diffused into the atmosphere. He said they could not form clouds that would keep their form for any long period.

Air Force Held Likely to Win Annual Battle for More Planes

By the United Press

The Air Force appeared last night to be winning hands down its second annual battle for more planes.

Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee was swinging House leaders behind his plan to earmark for extra air power 800 million dollars which President Truman wanted appropriated instead for universal military training.

"If that isn't enough to support the second year of a 70-group Air Force program, we will scrape around and get the rest somewhere else," the influential Georgia Democrat told reporters.

Vinson put his plan before Speaker Sam Rayburn. Rayburn, indorsing it by implication, told reporters afterwards that "Vinson is a man who usually gets what he wants."

House members generally favor the plan.

The question has not come up yet in the Senate, where members were reluctant to commit themselves in advance. Senator Brewster (R., Me.) called the Vinson plan "very interesting."

Congress has no intention now of setting up universal military training. Therefore the funds Mr. Truman allowed for UMT in his spending plans for fiscal 1950 could be spent for planes without adding anything to the overall budget.

Vinson said he believes the UMT item will be enough to keep the five-year 70-group program going. If it isn't, he said, some other "nonessential" item in the President's budget can be shifted to the Air Force.

As one such item, he suggested the 20 million dollars proposed for the St. Lawrence seaway. Vinson says this can wait another year or two if necessary.

Mr. Truman's $14,268,000,000 defense budget provides for an Air Force of only 48 groups—reduced from the present 59 groups.

Congress last year ordered a 70-group force and voted almost unanimously to cough up 822 million dollars above what Mr. Truman wanted to get it started. Few members seemed to have changed their minds.

Vinson pointed out that Mr. Truman's new budget provides for buying 1669 new planes for the Air Force in the year starting July 1. They would cost $1,700,000,000. At the same cost per plane, the UMT fund would boost purchases by 800 planes. Actually, the figure probably would be higher, since first orders are most expensive.

"One way or another we will get the money to keep the air power program going," Vinson said, "and we will do it without adding a cent to the President's (overall budget of) 42 billion dollars."

Canton, N. Y., Jan. 29 (AP).—A $10,000 fund to establish scholarships for men and women students at St. Lawrence University has been established by Mr. and Mrs. Jesse H. Jones of Houston, Texas.

Blandy Calls For Readiness

Newport News, Va., Jan. 29 (AP).—The commander in chief of the Atlantic fleet said today America's "fighting force must be able to act in any part of the world."

World War II is over "but this is not yet a peaceful world," said Admiral W. H. P. Blandy in a speech at ceremonies commissioning the heavy cruiser Newport News.

"It is still a world," he said, "in which aggressor nations can and do impose their wills upon their weaker neighbors, trying to gain some advantage in the way of natural resources, industry or commerce; or trying to force an unwanted political system upon the weaker nation.

"The latter may be another step in a campaign to convert the whole world to communism . . . The way to block such aggression is for peace-loving and nonaggressive nations like our to help the weaker nations to resist, by giving them financial aid, by showing them the benefits of true democracy, and backing it up by the possession of a strong fighting force, which is the argument aggressors understand best."

The 17000-ton Newport News is a larger, faster ship with greater fire power than any previous heavy cruiser.

Russia Asks Stand Of Norway on Pact

Action in March

2 Billions In Arms Aid Seen in Pact

By the United Press

American officials yesterday shrugged off Russia's attack on the North Atlantic security alliance and went ahead with their plans.

They revealed the treaty will be submitted to the Senate for ratification in mid-March, along with a bill to provide up to two billion dollars in arms for non-Communist nations, including nations outside the alliance.

Overwhelming Senate approval of the pact was foreshadowed in the angry reaction of key Democratic and Republican Senators to the new Soviet outburst, which came in a white paper early yesterday.

Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee wrathfully denied Moscow's charge the proposed alliance is an Anglo-American bid for world domination.

He said American foreign policy still aims at strengthening the United Nations. And he asserted that this country will do nothing, either in the North Atlantic treaty or otherwise, to weaken the U. N.

"If Russia will join us in our effort to strengthen that organization (the U. N.), there is strong hope of success," he said.

Connally's reaction was echoed by such key Republican Senators as Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, Bourke Hickenlooper of Iowa, William F. Knowland of California, and Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., of Massachusetts.

Lodge said in a speech at Baltimore that he indorsed the security pact. But he laid down conditions which he said should be met before the Senate ratifies it. These included:

Proof the Pact signers can and will fight if it comes to a showdown.

Approval by American combat commanders with a "comprehensive strategic and tactical plan"; and elimination of Communists from all the Allied governments.

Diplomatic sources disclosed the treaty, originally scheduled to go before the Senate next month, will be held up until mid-March in the hope other European powers such as Sweden, Norway and Denmark may be ready to enter the pact by that time.

Navy sources said the United States Navy is slowly shifting its main strength from the Pacific to the Atlantic, in an apparent move to bulwark the Western alliance. Officially, however, the Navy had nothing to say.

London (Sunday), Jan. 30 (AP).—Russia has asked Norway to declare whether she is joining the projected North Atlantic Defense Pact and planning to furnish military bases to the western powers, a Tass dispatch from Oslo said today.

The official Soviet news agency dispatch, broadcast from Moscow, said Russia has formally requested the Norwegian government for an explanation of its attitude toward the pact.

The Soviet statement called attention to the common frontier between the two countries.

(The Scandinavian Foreign Ministers are debating defense plans in Oslo.)

Yesterday, in Moscow, the Soviet government issued a 34-page white paper asserting the proposed Atlantic union pact is intended to establish British-American domination of the world by force. Russia called the pact a plot against the United Nations, and said she would fight it.

(American officials in Washington said Saturday the Russian attack on the Atlantic plan appears to be a major propaganda move, aimed partly at discouraging the Scandinavian nations from joining it.)

Scandinavian Parley Report Likely Today

Oslo, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—Prime Minister Einar Gerhardsen of Norway said tonight a statement on the progress of Scandinavian defense talks probably will be issued when the talks resume Sunday.

The Scandinavian Prime Ministers adjourned their meeting today after an eight-hour session, without announcing any agreement.

U. S. to Teach Women to Keep Germany in Line

Berlin, Jan. 29 (AP).—Could German women keep their country on a peaceful democratic path, without slambang wars every 25 years?

The Americans propose to find out.

An experiment is being undertaken by the United States Military Government at some expense. Eight German women with reliable backgrounds are being sent to the United States for three months, beginning in February, to see how American women look at government and politics.

Then, it is further hoped, they will return and spread the gospel that American women keep a wary eye on their Nation's affairs, ready to let out a screech if they start going wrong.

The Germans will tour New York, Washington, Chicago, Syracuse and Ithaca, N. Y.; Boston, Hartford, Conn., and Ann Arbor, Mich.

Mindszenty Trial Feb. 3

Budapest, Hungary, Jan. 29 (U.P.). The peoples' court prosecutor announced today the trial of Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty, who was the nation's highest Catholic clergyman, and his "accomplices" will start February 3.

Greece Scorns Rebels' Terms

Athens, Jan. 29 (AP).—The Greek government today pledged relentless war on Communist-led rebels until they lay down their arms.

This was the reply of Press Minister Michael Alianos to reports the government had accepted a cease-fire proposal from the rebels.

Alianos said the government "never thought of and is not now considering any counter-proposals" to the rebels' broadcast of peace terms. He termed the broadcast "obviously a propaganda move."

U-Boat Yields Bodies of 70

Hamburg, Germany, Jan. 29 (AP). The bodies of more than 70 men, women and children have been recovered from the hulk of a sunken German U-boat in Kiel Bay.

The submarine apparently was carrying refugees fleeing the advancing Russian armies in 1945 when it was trapped on the surface and sunk by Allied aircraft in the bay, known as "the graveyard of the German navy."

Most of the people were from Danzig. Bodies of 54 have been identified. Records are being checked to identify the others.

West Europe May Activate Council Soon

London, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—The Parliament of Europe, whose formation was announced yesterday by the five western European treaty states, may begin to function as early as this summer, informed sources said today.

The foreign ministers of Britain, France, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg, who approved the plan during their regular quarterly meeting here, lean toward Strasbourg, France, as the parliamentary capital, these sources said.

The four ambassadors in London will start work at once on the details. Representatives of Italy, Denmark and Norway, all of whom have indicated their desire to join, also may take part.

Although the announcement said they had agreed on the parliament "in principle," these informed sources emphasized all major differences had been settled.

Plunge Kills Soviet Clerk

London, Jan. 29 (AP).—A Russian Embassy clerk plunged to his death from a third-floor window of Hammersmith Hospital last night.

The clerk, Anatoly Kapilkin, 39, was reported by the hospital to have been delirious after an operation for appendicitis. He broke away from his nurse and ran to the window.

Scotland Yard said an inquest would be held. A Soviet Embassy spokesman said dimplomatic immunity would not be claimed to block an inquiry.

The Russians claimed immunity and blocked an inquest after a fire in the Soviet Consulate killed the 3-year-old daughter of one of the officials two weeks ago.

Americans Caught In Burma Fighting

Rangoon, Burma, Jan. 29 (AP).—United States and British embassies sought tonight to rescue their nationals, including five Americans, stranded in a civil war battle zone 100 miles west of Rangoon.

The Americans are missionaries, whose names are not known here. The number and identity of the Britons was not reported. They were trapped when their plane was grounded by weather at Bassein, on the Irrawaddy delta. The city fell to Karen rebels yesterday.

No word has been received of the foreigners since they landed. Bassein has been cut off from radio contact with other sections.

A Government spokesman said tonight the Karen thrust apparently followed a surprise linkup with well armed Communist troops. The Karens and Communists both seek to establish their own independent states, and the Karens also are thirsting for vengeance. They contend Burmese military police massacred 200 Karens in a church last Christmas Eve.

Military observers said the thrust seemed designed to isolate and put the pinch of hunger on Rangoon itself, rather than to storm it.

The Government reported fighting along a 40-mile front on the Rangoon-Mandalay Railroad. The rebels have seized Toungoo and Pyu on the line.

The Communist forces are the so-called White Flag Communists, led by Thakin Than Tun, who last year attempted to set up his own government over a part of that area.

5 U. S. Soldiers Dead, 10 Missing in Fire Near Tokyo

Tokyo (Sunday), Jan. 30 (AP).—Five American soldiers burned to death and 10 others were believed missing in a fire which swept the two-story barracks at the Yokota Air Force base early today.

At least 15 others were injured, five of them seriously.

Smoke and heat awakened Staff Sergt. Carl R. Nilson of Tacoma, Wash. He sounded the alarm, but flames already were licking through the barracks, which housed 90 men.

Headquarters said five bodies, none immediately identified, had been recovered. Search was under way for 10 more believed missing.

The base is about 20 miles west of Tokyo.

New Seizures Laid to Dutch By Indonesia

Batavia, Jan. 29 (AP).—Indonesian Republicans accused the Dutch today of making a new police roundup of Republican leaders. They charged the arrests openly defied the United Nations' most recent orders.

The U. N. renewed at Lake Success last night its demand that the Dutch release Indonesian leaders and reinstate the Republican government.

A delegation of Republicans protested to the U. N. Good Offices Committee that the Dutch, instead jailed their press officer, W. Latumeten, and an officer of the Republican information ministry named Sastrosuwignjo; confiscated documents and office equipment, and possibly arrested others yesterday.

The Good Offices Committee met in its new role as the U. N. Commission for Indonesia.

Cost of Haiti 'Fair Deal' Put At 30 Millions

Lake Success, N. Y., Jan. 29 (U.P.). The United Nations blueprint for developing Haiti, which is expected to set the pattern for President Truman's global Fair Deal, will call for investment of between 30 and 35 million dollars, informed sources revealed today.

U. N. observers looked on the Haitian experiment as a test of the workability of Mr. Truman's program to inject scientific and technical know-how into the stagnant economies of backward areas through U. N. machinery.

The final report on last fall's U. N. survey mission to Haiti will be made public early next month.

It was believed it will take about three years for the pilot program to show its full effects. The U. N., meanwhile, is planning to dispatch three more survey teams within the next two months.

July Set for Conclusion Of Japanese War Trials

Tokyo, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters hopes to wind up the last case against Japanese war criminals by July 1, it was made known today.

A spokesman estimated that by then, nearly 6000 suspects will have been tried for atrocities and other crimes.

Up to now approximately 5700 defendants have been tried and at least 70 per cent have been sentenced to death or imprisonment.

Israel Cool to British Move forward "to good relations between the two governments."

The recognitions by Britain and France are expected to open the way for Israel to become a member of the United Nations, possibly at the General Assembly meeting at Lake Success in April.

China, which has not recognized Israel, is the only one of the five powers that could veto Israel's application for membership, although 7 of the 11 votes in the Security Council are required for recommendation to the Assembly. Israel failed to make it in Paris last fall.

Israeli Score Coup In Cease-Fire Pact

Rhodes, Jan. 29 (AP).—Egyptians remained insistent today upon reestablishment of October 14 lines in Palestine, although Israel appeared to have scored a tactical coup in the armistice talks.

High-placed United Nations sources said Jewish negotiators gained a significant edge under the cease-fire agreement formally signed here five days ago, because it specifically states no movements of any kind, civilian or military, may be taken by either side.

The full implication of the "complete and enduring cease-fire" apparently escaped observers at the time.

U. N. sources said the phrasing projects the cease-fire beyond the conference here, regardless of whether an armistice is reached. They said the agreement was an international one, signed at top government level and fully binding.

2 Destroyers Join B-29 Hunt

London, Jan. 29.—Two United States destroyers sailed from French ports today to assist an intensive air search for an American B-29 Superfortress that disappeared two days ago with 15 persons aboard.

The search centered in Atlantic waters off the northwest African coast, where two shore direction finder stations reported hearing emergency Morse code signals.

Weather in the area continued good. A spokesman said the Air Force is hopeful that survivors of the missing plane will be rescued.

Thirty American, British and French planes are participating in the search.

Reds Demand Chiang's Arrest

fore a Chinese government military court Wednesday.

The Communist statement declared:

"We hold that your present activities are a scheme to use hypocritical peace negotiations as a cover for regrouping your forces and war preparations, including a plot to bring the Japanese reactionaries to China to join you in butchering the Chinese people."

The statement suggested that the local surrender at Peiping January 22 was a pattern for similar bit-by-bit settlements covering Nanking, Shanghai, Canton, and all other government-held territory.

It made clear, however, that the Reds' eight-point surrender demand of January 14 must be met first.

First of these eight points was "punishment of war criminals."

"Chiang Kai-shek is especially important," said the statement. "The said criminal has now fled to Fenghwa, and may very possibly flee aboard, the hide beneath the cloak of American or British imperialism.

"Therefore, you must act swiftly to arrest this criminal and not permit him to escape. You must bear full responsibility for this; if escape occurs, you will be punished as a conniver, with no mercy shown whatsoever."

The broadcast referred to the December 25 list of 43 "war criminals," but said a fuller list was now being discussed with various non-government organizations "in our territory and yours" and would be published soon.

"Nanking will be informed later of the preparatory work that must be carried out by both sides for other points of the eight terms," said the statement.

Soviet Attack Is Dismissed

Tokyo, Jan. 29.—General MacArthur in strong terms today brushed aside as "Soviet propaganda" Russia's latest attack on United States plans for restoring Japan's economy.

MacArthur responded to Soviet Ambassador Alexander S. Panyushkin's criticism of the American program before the Far Eastern Commission in Washington Thursday.

Panyushkin charged the program contradicted existing FEC policies for disarming Japan. He demanded that the measures be reviewed by all the wartime Allies in the Pacific.

Republicans Told What Ails Them

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

In the midst of the tumult at Omaha last week, a big, stocky man arose at a luncheon meeting and told Republicans what was wrong with the party and what had to be done to end its losing streak.

Gov. Val Peterson of Nebraska, the orator, got little applause. His speech was overshadowed in the news by the battle to throw out Representative Hugh D. Scott, jr., of Pennsylvania, as chairman of the Republican National Committee. But what he said had an impact, and there was much talk about it aboard the Washington-bound Capital Limited, which got in yesterday morning.

Governor Peterson told the GOP leaders that they might as well "face the facts." It was useless, he said, to offer alibis for the November election or to try and get comfort out of the result by saying that President Truman did not get a clear majority of the popular vote. The fact was, he said, that the Republican Party was not able to convince enough voters that the leadership and program it offered would best serve their interests in the four years ahead.

"It now appears," he said, "that there are, under normal circumstances, more Democrats than there are Republicans."

His prescription for victory was "a positive program, rather than a negative one." Republicans must not let it be said any longer that the party was guided by the dead hand of the past, or that the leaders were Bourbons who had learned nothing and forgot nothing.

He added:

"It is unlikely that we can win merely by condemning every policy of the Federal Government in recent years, by calling up the specter of Communism, by sneering at the New Deal and casting aspersions upon the Roosevelt family.

"We must offer something that will appeal both to the intelligence and the interests of the independent or middle-of-the-road voter, and not spend all our tme appealing to those who already strongly dislike the Democratic Party."

Governor Peterson, now 46, who has been a political science teacher, newspaper owner, and lieutenant colonel in World War II, offered six "tentative suggestions" in an effort to explain why the GOP has not been able to make a comeback:

1. In the minds of many, the party is still associated with the economic collapse of 1929 and is thought to be against all Federal moves to relieve economic distress.

2. "Because of our opposition to many of the policies of the Democratic administration we have been made to appear as resisting all social reform, all regulation of business, all Government efforts to develop and preserve our national resources, and every type of public service that would cost any money.

3. Republicans have been accused of playing on the team of the employer against the employe, of the producer against the consumer, and lining up with the "haves" against the "have-nots." They have not successfully refuted the accusation.

4. Republicans have allowed the pronouncement of some of our most uncompromising industrialists to be taken as the embodiment of the party's economic and political philosophy.

5. "Through the efforts of some people to prove that it was Roosevelt rather than the Japanese fleet that bombed Pearl Harbor, and through the activities of such groups as the America First organization, we have been tagged with the label 'isolationist.'"

6. "Finally, despite the fact that our party contains a large majority of those who publish newspapers and control radio stations, of those who make a business of advertising and selling, and those who are presumably skilled in the techniques of the public relations counsel, we have not made our program appear attractive to the American people. We have been more successful in selling our commercial products than we have in selling our ideas."

Looking back on the 1948 election, Peterson said that the only real chance the Republican Party had to win came from the split in the Democratic Party, and that was not enough.

"Our chances of winning the next election," he said, "will depend upon how well the opposition can maintain its unity, whether or not some disaster befalls the Democratic Party such as befell us in 1932, and lastly, whether or not we, by our own efforts, can make a more positive appeal to the electorate than we have thus far.

"I propose that we concentrate on the last of these three possibilities, and our first task is to convince the people that we are not guilty as charged."

Speed Sought On Truman Objectives

By The Associated Press

The Democratic leadership moved yesterday for a faster pace in Congress toward President Truman's objectives.

Senate Democratic leader Lucas (Ill.) summoned all Senate committee chairmen into a weekend huddle to lay out a schedule of action.

The first two sections of the President's economic program—relatively small but still significant—may get to a vote in the next few days.

In the Senate chamber, Democratic leaders called for a preliminary step in President Truman's anti-inflation program. Curiously it is an extension of the "voluntary controls" over steel and other scarce materials voted by the last, Republican-controlled Congress as a substitute for more direct and drastic powers over business and industry asked by Mr. Truman.

Republican Senators already have served notice they will seek a 13-month extension beyond March 1 of the voluntary allocation plan instead of the temporary seven-month continuation asked by the Administration.

Chairman Hayden (D., Ariz.) brought pressure on the Senate Rules Committee to wind up hearings Monday on a new rule that would allow two thirds of the Senate to end debate on any issue. Republicans have been pressing Democratic leaders to bring the antifilibuster measure onto the Senate floor at once so it will not hold up other major legislation.

Former President Hoover will make one of his rare congressional appearances before the House Expenditures Committee Monday. He will testify on proposed authority for streamlining of Government agencies which President Truman asks.

House committees also will continue hearings on a proposed increase in minimum hourly wages from 40 to 75 cents, a 70-group (or 48-group) plan for the Air Force, and an Administration request to extend and broaden the reciprocal trade program.

Decline Adds Cent to Dollar

The Labor Department yesterday estimated that the decline in the cost of living since last August has increased purchasing power of the dollar by one cent.

Department officials said that last August the 1948 dollar bought 57.3 cents worth of goods and services in terms of 1939 dollars—base year of the Government's cost of living statistics.

As a result of the cost of living drop published this week, the 1948 dollar as of last December 15 bought 58.3 cents worth of goods in terms of 1939 dollars, the department said.

2 Officials Agree

D. C. Cocktail Party Called Major Evil

Former Undersecretary of the Treasury A. L. M. Wiggins yesterday took a swing at that Washington institution, the cocktail party.

"A Government official can't attend a continuous round of parties and still do his work properly," Wiggins declared yesterday at his home in Hartsville, S. C.

Quick to second this motion was Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), who denounced expensive social capers in the Capital on the floor of the Senate recently.

Morse

Wiggins

The way Wiggins sees it, one of the chief amusements of social fry here is hooking high officials for their parties.

"It's one of the greatest evils in Washington today," he said.

Wiggins resigned his Government post last July to become chairman of the boards of two railroads, the Atlantic Coast Line and the Louisville & Nashville. During his 18 months in Washington, he estimates he attended only a third of all the parties to which he was invited.

"I devoted 60 hours a week to my job," said Wiggins, "and I found it necessary to have some yardstick to measure my time. I limited myself to three parties a week and only one of them could be late at night."

Morse agrees with the gentleman from South Carolina and adds that "serious inefficiency" in the Government can probably be traced to some officials who spend too much of their time on the cocktail party circuit.

Industrial Employment Declining

By The Associated Press

Employment in manufacturing industries has been declining since the September, 1948, postwar peak of 16,700,000, the Labor Department reported yesterday.

The number of workers in manufacturing plants at the end of December, it said, was down to 16,240,000, or about 100,000 below the level of December, 1947.

"Most of this decline has taken place in the soft goods industries," the department reported.

The usual autumn drop in employment in canning and preserving plants was accompanied, the report commented, by unseasonal drops in the textile, apparel and leather industries.

Some 80,000 workers in durable goods plants also were let out in December, principally in the nonelectrical machinery, lumber and furniture branches.

Employment in the automobile industry, however, rose by 15,000 in December, to put it slightly under one million, an all-time record.

President's Labor Bill Would End Injunction, Permit Closed Shop, Eliminate Red Oath

predict the move will fail. Foes are claiming repeal is a fore-gone conclusion.

In addition to new "National Emergency" machinery, the Administration bill contains these things:

1. A ban on jurisdictional strikes and "unjustifiable" secondary boycotts.

2. A statement that it is the "public policy" of the United States for labor contracts to contain clauses providing for arbitration of disputes over interpretation of the contract.

3. Return of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service to the Labor Department, and change of its name back to "United States Conciliation Service."

The AFL and CIO, studying the Administration's move, withheld official reaction.

Some labor lawyers appeared to be surprised and pleased because the injunction authority was cut back in the bill.

The AFL executive council will have a chance to pass on the proposals at its meeting in Miami beginning today. The CIO said its legal department is studying the bill and the organization's attitude will be set forth in congressional hearings during the week.

In Ohio, Senator Taft (R), leader of forces battling the attempt to scrap the law bearing his name, commented:

"The Administration has surrendered to the labor leaders on two provisions: (1) The national emergency strike measure, and (2) the impartiality of the National Mediation Service. The first is a milk and water version of the original (Taft-Hartley) clause."

President Truman, in messages to Congress, had asked for banning of jurisdictional strikes and "unjustifiable" secondary boycotts, prevention of disputes over interpretation of contracts, and strengthening of the Labor Department.

The Administration bill, by repealing the Taft-Hartley measure, would toss out such things as:

The ban on the closed shop, under which employers can hire only union members.

The non-Communist affidavit provision. That requires union officers to swear they are not Communists before their unions can deal with the National Labor Relations Board.

A prohibition against political spending by unions.

Supporters of the Taft-Hartley law, led by Taft, already have begun a fight to keep those and mary other Taft-Hartley provisions on the books.

To replace the Taft-Hartley injunction procedure in national emergency strikes, the Administration set forth this plan:

When the President found that a dispute affected the public interest he would issue a proclamation saying so. He also would ask that there be no work stoppage.

The President then would appoint an emergency board to investigate. In most cases the board would have 25 days to report its findings and recommendations. The disputants would be asked to refrain from a work stoppage for another five days.

The Administration clearly is counting on acceptance of the board's recommendation to settle the disputes. There is no provision in the bill for any further step.

The Railway Labor Act, a separate measure in effect for several years, provides for a somewhat similar procedure. In rail disputes the emergency board's recommendations usually—though not always—are accepted by the disputants.

Under the Taft-Hartley law, the President can appoint a fact-finding board but it can make no recommendations. On the basis of this board's report, the President can direct the Government to ask for an injunction, if he so decides.

The Taft-Hartley injunctions stay in effect up to 80 days, during which there can be no strike unless in defiance of the court.

If there is a strike after the injunction is lifted, the President can go to Congress and ask it to take whatever steps he deems necessary.

The new bill's provision for returning the Conciliation Service to the Labor Department is sure to cause a hot fight in Congress.

Most businessmen are strongly opposed to such a move, saying they can have more confidence in the agency's impartiality if it stays independent.

Cyrus S. Ching, director of the service, reportedly has threatened to resign if the agency is put in the Labor Department.

The Administration bill is drafted as a "one-package" measure. That is, it provides for repeal of the Taft-Hartley law and restoring the Wagner Act—with changes—in a single legislative step.

But in advance of Tobin's appearance before the Labor Committee there was no definite indication whether he will ask for one-package handling. Mr. Truman, however, reportedly favors that procedure.

The AFL and CIO, on the other hand, want two-package handling. Under this plan, the Taft-Hartley law and the Wagner Act would be repealed in a first bill. A second measure, to be considered later, would deal with the Wagner Act changes the President is seeking.

T-H Act Seen Harming Boss, Labor, Public

The Taft-Hartley Act is inimical to the best interests of labor, management, and the public.

Such is the conclusion reached by a study of the Nation's labor laws undertaken by the Public Affairs Institute, a non-profit, nonpartisan research institute. The study, issued as a report on "Collective Bargaining," was made by Herman Lazarus, head of the institute's labor-management section, and Joseph P. Goldberg, formerly economic adviser to the War Labor Board appeals committee.

Analyzing the Taft-Hartley Act, the study comes up with the following findings:

1. Net effect of the law has been to give employers an advantageous position in their dealings with unions.

2. The act impedes the development of collective bargaining.

3. The law places obstacles in the way of internal union democracy.

4. The act reflected to a substantial degree the views of groups that had never accepted collective bargaining with stable and effective trade union organizations as a permanent and desirable addition to American democratic institutions. The law provides these groups with the means by which the trade union movement can be weakened. Such an approach can only serve to undermine the collective bargaining process.

The report urges the calling of industry-wide management-labor conferences by the President or congressional committees, and, with the assistance of impartial experts, exploration of the prospects of making collective bargaining work more effectively in industry.

There are the men who intimately know the problems of their industries; they are best equipped to recommend the appropriate areas for Government action, the report states. It adds:

"Only in this way can the proper basis be laid for the formulation of the kind of labor policy which will serve our national interest."

President Truman Orders Full Mobilization Of Federal Resources to Help Storm Areas

ments at the Savannah (Ill.) Ordnance Depot.

The Air Force may fly those into the storm area in its "flying boxcars," C-82 transports.

The Navy also was making a large amount of snow removal equipment available.

The National Independent Air Carriers, an organization of nonscheduled airlines, meanwhile offered up to 200 large planes if needed to augment the Air Force's dropping of hay to starving animals.

Planes, bulldozers, helicopters, caterpillar tractors, weasels, jeeps and huge, primitive sleds already were being used in the relief work as clear, cold weather came to most of the area.

C. W. Anderson, Divisional Federal Works Agency engineer from Kansas City, was named to supervise storm relief work in Nebraska and South Dakota.

Early efforts to open roads, move food and fuel, and get feed to starving cattle will be concentrated in Nebraska and portions of South Dakota, Pick said.

Yesterday's developments had the effect of throwing into the battle scores of private contractors, many of whom have been working on Missouri Basin development dam-building projects. They will supply the men and many of the machines.

General Pick placed his own engineer division on a round-the-clock basis and said: "Every available resource at our command will be thrown into this fight to break the snow blockades and bring relief to suffering people and livestock in the snow-bound areas."

The swift developments came as Nebraskans, wearied by the worst winter in 60 years, plugged away at digging out principal highways reblocked late this week by a new 12-inch snowstorm.

Air Force planes operating out of Kearney, Omaha and Sioux City, Iowa, criss-crossed the snow-covered Nebraska countryside, looking for distress signals on isolated farms.

Three National Guard companies in Lincoln were mobilized. Four other companies—two at North Platte, one at Alliance and one at Grand Island—have been on duty since early in the month.

Farther west in the Utah-Arizona disaster area, favorable weather aided airmen and ranchers getting food to snow-stranded livestock and humans.

Army planes dropped food supplies by parachute in their first relief flights for Navajo Indians snowbound deep in their reservations north of Winslow, Ariz.

Cold Hurts Livestock That Escaped Snows

Stockmen in Western States which escaped the violent storms are nevertheless having one of the worst winters in their history, according to Alfred D. Stedman, former assistant administrator of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, and now agricultural editor of the St. Paul Pioneer Press at St. Paul.

Livestock death losses have not been great in Montana, North Dakota, Minnesota and northern South Dakota, outside the worst-stricken blizzard area, but severe cold has imposed hardship and poundage loss, he stated in a telephone interview with The Washington Post last night.

One of the most prolonged cold spells in years has had serious consequences to livestock, Stedman said. He cited week-long temperatures averaging 18 degrees below zero at Glasgow, Mont., and 15 degrees below at Williston, N. Dak. Ground frost measures 5½ feet at Missoula, he said.

Stockmen report that they never have seen their stock in shelters show worse deterioration than in the last month. It is taking great quantities of feed just to keep animals alive, they say. Most of the stock is breeding stock, and the consequences in terms of the meat industry are difficult to estimate.

Farmers also are complaining of the double blow they are getting from weather and markets. At the time subzero temperatures are using up livestock feed, beef prices are $10 and $11 under September prices, a decline of around 25 per cent, sheep prices are down $7.50, and hog prices down more than one fourth.

herds, find the going slow and difficult.

"In many areas the cattle haven't laid down in three weeks. In others the ice layers have frozen around them so they can't move about.

"Old timers say such a situation never existed before."

All estimates made so far of losses are "wild guesses," C. E. Snyder, editor of the Chicago Drovers Journal told The Washington Post. "Some have been as high as 5 per cent of all the cattle in the affected areas."

Snyder also reported that the "heaviest loss will not be the death loss. It will be from the half starved animals that will need months to regain their old weight."

"On top of that," Snyder said, "the resistance of the animals to disease has been reduced, which will mean indirect losses over several months."

Snyder mentioned that losses in sheep probably will be far heavier than cattle because "their legs are shorter."

Officials of the Agriculture Department have started a survey to determine the extent of the damage.

The number of beef cattle on the ranges in the country is estimated at about 35 million head. Sheep numbers are the lowest in more than 80 years; cattle numbers the lowest since 1935, and range conditions the worst since 1940.

There is one bright spot in the picture. The number of cattle on Midwest feed lots is about 19 per cent above 1947-1948. Last year the number was 25 per cent below 1946-1947. Midwestern feeders didn't increase their feeding herds until corn prices fell below $1.44, the support level, in November. But in November and December, more cattle were put on feed—where the blizzards won't bother them—than in similar periods in years.

An Associated Press survey in the area disclosed the following information:

Many ranchers are certain their losses would be much higher if it were not for the hay, cottonseed cake and other feeds dropped from low flying Air Force planes.

However, one veteran stockman said this type of feeding doesn't always work for cattle. B. F. Davis of Denver, secretary of the Colorado Cattlemen's Association, said: "If cattle don't get the kind of hay they're used to eating, they won't touch it."

He also said there must be many animals to which such aid has come too late, since they had reached the point of starvation where they were too sick to eat.

The situation briefly by States:

NEBRASKA—No official estimates of losses, although Gov. Val Peterson said cattle valued at 320 million dollars are in jeopardy. Some individual losses have been estimated from 25 to 75 per cent. Some operators have announced their intention of disposing of all of their surviving animals, breeding stock included.

NORTH AND SOUTH DAKOTA—No major losses in North Dakota. Ten thousand carcasses counted in 10 to 25 storm-hit counties in South Dakota.

MONTANA—State Veterinarian H. F. Wilkins said livestock losses have been remarkably low despite the State's worst winter weather in history. About 5300 cattle were reported snowbound Friday on an Indian Reservation.

WYOMING—Russell Thorp, chairman of the State Emergency Relief Board, estimated 55,000 of Wyoming's 770,000 cattle and 105,000 of its 1,500,000 sheep have perished.

COLORADO—Spokesmen for cattle and sheep raisers' associations said no way has been found yet to get accurate totals but they believe losses will not be great.

UTAH—Thousands of sheep have been reported frozen to death in one county alone, but State-wide estimates are unavailable. Sheepmen believe their greatest losses will be in the spring lamb crop because of poor condition of ewes.

NEVADA—George Swallow, secretary of the United Stockmen's Association, estimated 22,000 cattle would be lost. Sheep losses, because of recent "haylift" operations, should not be as heavy. Many sheepmen said without this, they would have been wiped out.

NEW MEXICO—Supt. James M. Stewart of the Navajo Central Agency, said it "looks as if losses have been light so far," but the outcome hinges on getting feed into northern Arizona.

Letters Tell Of Western Snow Drama

January brought blizzards that nearly obliterated Western States.

Steers froze to death on the range. Snowdrifts piled up to the tops of buildings.

In the words of one Grover, Colo., resident, the storm was "the most damnable one that I ever went through in 37 years." He said snowdrifts were "six times waist deep to a tall Indian."

Some of the drama of the "big snow" is told simply in letters received from Grover, Colo., by Walter I. Tenney, vice president of Parade, the magazine contained in Sunday editions of The Washington Post.

The letters were written by Tenney's ranchers, William A. Brook and Dan Speaker, and Guy C. Smith, Mayor of Grover and Continental Oil Co. distributor there. Brook and Speaker wrote their letters on January 10 and the Smith letter is dated January 16.

Washington residents (who basked in a record 73 temperature Friday) may want to reach for a blanket and a hot-water bottle after reading the following excerpts from the letters:

"We're still all snowed in! ! ! They've predicted another storm with winds from 35 to 65 miles per hour with snow. We have gotten the snow, but thank God the wind didn't come. If it would have we would have been cleaned for sure."

"The registered cow Clara told you about, we finally found her under the snow—alive."

"We lost seven of the commercial cows over on Sedgewick place. They piled up in the shed and the snow filled it to the top. What a sight! It took me and Earl Bunnell with his jeep with the winch on it to pull one cow out of the shed that was alive but died later."

"I don't have any idea when this (letter) will leave Grover or how it will get to Grover. There has been one train in this year—New Year's Day."

"It (the storm) was more than a human could stand very long. Arch wore a scarf over his face, below his eyes. I didn't because I couldn't chew and in a few minutes your face was a sheet of ice."

"Bob and I had to try and keep people from freezing to death by packing fuel from the bulk plant in five-gallon cans, borrowing from the ones that had a good supply for those who were out.

"Mrs. Lawson has a 30-gallon barrel as storage . . . I was to go to Lawson's and shovel the back door open and Bob was to get the fuel. I left home and my eyes began to stick shut before I got out of the yard . . . In backing up to get my eyes open . . . I became confused in directions (one could not see 2 feet in front of you) and at last I hit something pretty solid and it was Steve Palmer's house.

"So he dressed and we went over together. When Bob arrived with the fuel and found his bearings, he was on top of the house and hit the chimney."

"There are heads, tails and feet sticking out of the snowdrifts. They could have dug some of them out and saved them if they wouldn't have been afraid of a little backache. We would have lost 30 or 40 more, too, if I wouldn't have gotten on the working end of a scoop shovel."

"During the blizzard, I made my way to the barn and called them. All of a sudden you should have heard the racket. Boards, straw and snow were flying every way. Then I had to cut the wire so I could get them through. All but one got out.

"Of course, after another 24 hours of blizzard I figured she was dead for sure. There was about 3 or 4 feet of snow over her. So I went ahead with the other cattle . . . I thought I heard something crunching its teeth.

"So I got the shovel and started digging and, sure enough, there she was. We got the lariat and tied on her and helped her out."

"Bob Balman lost over 1000 sheep right at the house. Dick Smock had 100 sheep in a pen and lost 50 of them.

"My car is in the garage at home with a 10-foot drift in front of the door that reaches clear to the street some 250 or 300 feet long."

* * *

"It is a deplorable sight to drive along the south road going west, feet sticking out of snow banks every where you look, some alone and in bunches, some even standing up frozen stiff. It is the heaviest loss that ever hit the territory."

"Arlo Douglas had all his cows in the barn and it filled clear to the roof with snow."

"You should have seen the basement in this new house. It was almost half full of snow. We took a bathtub full of snow out of the attic."

"The snow blew in every nail hole and all buildings are full of snow at the present time."

"Tuesday morning, we found four calves in the north shed . . . right up against the roof. We took some boards off, got one on top . . . The other three we couldn't move. The next morning, one was standing on top the roof (two still down) so we cut the front place of the shed, dug the snow down to their level and got them out.

"When we got to Banner (a Palomino horse), he was lying down touching the roof . . . His gate . . . wasn't covered. So we got him to the little milk barn—that door was free on the outside but full to the top on the inside. While Arch held him, I dug the entrance out, also a stall, and we got him in."

"Sunday we worked all day in the barn. It was full almost to the eaves, clear across . . . You can walk right upon the pup house, right over the swimming pool . . ."

"The Civil Air Patrol and Flying Farmers have been out with planes patrolling all of the blizzard district. They come over four or five times a day. They've dropped food, medicine, fuel, hay, etc., to those who signaled."

By W. C. Haselbush
Denver Post Writer

Denver, Jan. 29.—No accurate ranch-by-ranch total of livestock losses in the blizzard-blitzed Rocky Mountain area was possible today, but it was certain that the month-long series of record snowstorms and sub-zero cold waves will react against the bank balance of almost every American by next summer.

Half of the Nation's sheep population and at least two million head of breeder cattle were caught in the Western disaster area. Many already were dead. Higher meat prices when present feeder stock is butchered were certain.

The blizzards hit during the sheep mating season. The spring lamb crop was certain to be smallest in many years. The National Wool Growers Association said "catastrophe" has hit the industry.

Half-starved beef cattle which survive can't be restored to full weight. The results, Russell Thorp, secretary of the Wyoming Stock Growers Association, indicated will be a stampede to market of thin cattle.

Still another major factor was the fact that sub-zero weather was rendering prize breeding bulls sterile.

Already it was certain a shortage of market cattle and short lamb and calf crops in the West will bring on a meat shortage—and inevitable higher prices—by summer.

Hillman Award Goes To Frank Graham

The Washington Post
FRANK P. GRAHAM
Wins Hillman award

Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina and the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Energy, last night called for release of the Indonesian Republic leaders and restoration of the republic.

Graham addressed an audience of more than 200 persons, including Vice President Barkley and John R. Steelman, assistant to the President, at the Sidney Hillman Memorial Award dinner in the Hotel Mayflower.

Graham was presented with a scroll and $1000 "for meritorious public service," by Jacob S. Potofsky, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America (CIO), and the Sidney Hillman Foundation. The foundation was established in memory of the late president of the Clothing Workers Union.

Barkley Praises Graham

Vice President Barkley, in an unexpected talk, said he was happy to be present "when so outstanding a man received so outstanding an award" and that "his service have not been magnified by the award." award" and that "his services have presented Dr. Graham, the Vice President quipped, "before my salary raise I would have said it was as big as a wagon wheel."

Graham said the Dutch action in Indonesia was "a challenge to the western democracies to restore the broken front of freedom.

"The United Nations will, we take it, follow through in support of its stand for immediate liberation of the imprisoned Indonesian leaders and restoration of the Republic of Indonesia," Graham said.

"This follow-through is imperative," he said. "First, in order to do justice to millions of people; second, in order not sanction broken agreements and defiance of the Security Council; third, in order to reinforce the moral foundations of the U. N., and, finally, in order to strengthen the cause of liberty in a world wavering between human freedom and totalitarian dictatorship."

Tribute Paid Hillman

Graham paid tribute to Sidney Hillman, who died July 10, 1946, as a "youthful and hopeful immigrant to America" who rose from a $6-a-week garment cutter to "friend and counselor of President Roosevelt in humane programs for America and mankind."

Potofsky in presenting the award to Graham reviewed the latter's career as an educator and public servant, and said Graham's "only concern has been been 'Is it right?'

"On every basic issue in this country and in every time of crisis," Potofsky said, "Graham has taken his stand. He has fought the good fight for civil liberties, for minority rights, against the poll tax, against lynch law, against discrimination in every shape and form."

Among those attending the dinner were Mrs. Bessie Hillman, widow of the labor leader; Associate Justice Wiley Rutledge of the Supreme Court; members of Congress; Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University; James Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO, and Van A. Bittner, director of the CIO's Southern organizing campaign; Hyman Blumberg, executive vice president, and Frank Rosenblum, secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Eviction Plan Won't Work, Judge Asserts

Chicago, Jan. 29 (AP).—The "Tulsa Plan" for mass evictions in protest against rent control has spread to Chicago—but a judge says it won't work.

Some 750 Chicago landlords who said they own 98,000 Chicago rental units voted overwhelmingly last night to withdraw their property from the rental market.

However, Chief Justice Edward S. Scheffler of Municipal Court said yesterday that any such mass movement of owners "would indicate they were not acting in good faith as required by law." He said the courts would "take all steps to halt any such mass eviction movement."

William Schmidt, president of the Chicago Chapter of the Property Owners' Association of America, urged the landlords to send out eviction notices immediately with an effective date of March 31.

Jack A. Rosen, executive secretary of the Chicago Tenants' Federation, telegraphed Illinois Senators Scott Lucas and Paul Douglas urging repeal of the portion of the rent law that permits landlords to withdraw their property from the rental market.

A property owners' group in Tulsa has ordered mass eviction of tenants within 60 days.

Aged Recluse Left $500,000 In Hotel Room

Akron, Ohio, Jan. 29 (AP).—In the hotel room of an aged woman recluse, administrators of her estate found today a treasure worth more than $500,000. Under police escort, they removed it to a bank.

Wrapped in an old newspaper on the floor of a closet was $300,000 in Government bonds.

In an old sugar sack stuffed in a dresser drawer was a small fortune in diamonds, rubies, pearls and jade.

An old trunk yielded $20,000 in stocks and a bank book showing assets of $15,000.

The owner, Miss Frances Louise Butler, about 80, died Thursday in City Hospital of pneumonia. She left no will, and apparently had no relatives. Her funeral was held today. Her father, Nelson Butler, is said to have been a wealthy Brooklyn, N. Y., merchant.

A preliminary search yesterday uncovered stocks and jfliewels valued at about $153,000, Administrator W. A. Woodling reported. Miss Butler had $500,000 more in New York banks and in brokers' hands.

J. Al Crist recalled that 50 years ago when he played in orchestras in Cincinnati and New York opera houses she was an opera star.

Crist said she sang "O Promise Me" at the bier of President William McKinley when he lay in state at the White House in 1901.

Gunman Wounds Priest Hearing Confesssions

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—A man walked into a Catholic church today, unwrapped a rifle and fired into a confessional, wounding a priest in the leg.

The man then fled. He was pursued by a woman from the church, but she lost sight of him several blocks away.

The shooting occurred at the St. John the Martyr Roman Catholic Church at 252 East 72d st. while a number of women and children awaited their turns at confession.

The wounded priest, the Rev. Vincent J. Campbell, was taken to a hospital, where attendants said the wound was not serious.

Garage Ignited

One Injured In Gasoline Explosion

The Washington Post

VICTIM—Bryant Hilton, 24, of 103 Halsey rd., Falls Church, Va., severely burned by flaming gasoline, is carried from scene of fire. Fireman holding stretcher is unidentified. Hilton was burned in a fire in the garage of his brother-in-law, Arthur D. Heath, of 3 Twin Oaks dr., Chillum, Md. Heath struck Cameraman Charles Del Vecchio in the face after this picture was made and damaged Del Vecchio's camera

One man was burned and two others escaped injury yesterday when gasoline exploded while they were repairing an automobile in a garage in rear of 3 Twin Oaks dr., Chillum, Md.

The injured man was Bryant Hilton, 24, of 103 Halsey rd., Falls Church, Va.; a brother-in-law of the owner of the house and garage, Arthur D. Heath, a carpenter. Hilton was given first aid for burns on the leg and thigh and cuts on the face at Prince Georges General Hospital and later removed to Naval Medical Center at Bethesda.

Firemen said the men were repairing an automobile and that Hilton was carrying a leaky bucket of gasoline in the closed garage. One of the men kicked a light cord, firemen said, which caused a bulb to explode and set the gasoline afire.

The entire interior of the garage burst into flame, forcing the men to escape through a small door.

Fire Strikes Maryland Home Twice in a Week

Fire broke out yesterday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Caspar Staley at 74th and F sts., Carmody Hills, Md., for the second time in a week causing damage of approximately $1000.

Firemen said the blaze was caused by an oil stove exploding in the kitchen, burning through to the next floor. Last Thursday a fire caused by a short circuit in the upstairs rooms did slight damage.

Seat Pleasant, Capitol Heights and Hillside Volunteer Fire Departments extinguished yesterday's fire.

Appeals Set In 'Gag' Case

Baltimore, Jan. 29 (AP).—The Supreme Court may be asked to rule on legality of a Baltimore court rule restricting the amount of crime news that local newspapers and radio stations can use.

Two of three radio stations convicted yesterday of contempt of court for violating the rule announced today they will appeal. The third station is considering the same action.

Lawyers for Stations WCBM and WFBR said they will go to the Supreme Court if the Court of Appeals upholds their conviction and fines of $300 each by Judge John B. Gray, jr.

It is the first court test of the supreme bench of Baltimore's Rule 904. Judge Gray agreed that one section of the rule appears outmoded by Supreme Court decisions in similar contempt cases involving newspapers.

This section declared contemptuous "the publication of any matter which may prevent a fair trial, improperly influence the court or jury, or tend in any matter to interfere with the administration of justice."

But Judge Gray held the stations had violated other sections by creating a "clear and present danger" to an impartial trial of Eugene James.

First Plastic Elbow Returns Arm's Use

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

New York, Jan. 29.—Donald Spink, 21 and a war veteran, was happy today about that precious right arm of his—and its plastic elbow.

This morning, for instance, he used that arm to brush his teeth, comb his hair, and—blow his nose. Routine stuff, unless, like Spink, you haven't been able to do them because of your painfully-crippled arm.

"I guess I'm like a baby with a new toy," he said.

The plastic elbow, newest device in bone surgery history, is the product of 12 years of research and experimentation by Dr. Stephen S. Hudack, associate professor of orthopedic surgery at Columbia University, who performed the operation at Presbyterian Hospital here.

Eight Plastic Hips

Spink, of Merrick, Long Island, sought Dr. Hudack's help last spring when he read of the surgeon's successes in installing plastic hips in humans. Couldn't the same thing be done for his long-diseased and stiffened elbow, he asked.

It could, and now has been done. The plastic elbow follows, in human surgery, eight plastic hip operations and one plastic shoulder, all still under study but apparently successful. The work, begun on animals in 1937, has been accomplished through facilities of the Orthopedic Surgery Department of Presbyterian Hospital.

Spink's troubles began in 1942, the same year Dr. Hudack installed his first plastic hip in a human. He injured his right elbow while wrestling in high school. It didn't give him much trouble then. He even entered the Navy at the age of 17.

But in training, he found that favoring his right arm wasn't helping much. It became painful. Push-ups, a favorite exercise, were an ordeal for the Navy trainee. Spink was discharged after nine months in uniform.

Two Operations Undergone

Doctors couldn't do very much for his case, he said. He had two operations in local hospitals without any lasting relief. And by last spring, when he appealed to Dr. Hudack, he hadn't been able to touch his head with his right arm for months. He tapered off, finally gave up writing with his right hand because the effort pained so much.

On December 14, Spink entered the Presbyterian Hospital, and two days later the operation was performed. The diseased elbow, its bone growth element damaged by the injury, was removed and a plastic one substituted. Muscles and ligaments normally attached to the bone were aligned in natural position over the plastic and attached to holes in flanges of the artificial bone end.

The operation was performed with the aid of funds from a grant from the Office of Naval Reserach. ONR's interest is in developing promising surgery for replacing damaged joints in war veterans,

Several days after the operation, the patient flexed his right arm haltingly. Finally, gaining confidence, he lifted his right hand to his head and rubbed his ear—something he had not been able to do for almost a year.

Nurses and buddies in his ward gathered about and cheered when he tried the hand at shaving, and did the job well. The crucial bedside test came when Dr. Hudack had him bounce a small rubber ball in one-hand basketball-style dribble.

Coordination Regained

Spink's ability to manipulate the ball in the test showed that he had regained his coordination and muscular control of the arm. Then, to demonstrate how strength had returned, he picked up a 20-pound chair. Setting down the chair, he picked up about a dozen pages of handwritten notes.

"This is my writing—with my right hand," he said. "I guess I can forget trying to learn how to write left-handed. I never could get the hang of it."

Asked how the plastic feels inside his arm, Spink said he "can't believe it's there. All pain save "an occasional healing twinge" is gone" he said.

Spink's plastic elbow is actually a lucite replacement for the lower end of the humerus, the single bone that runs from the elbow to the shoulder. Like its forerunners, plastic hip balls, it is held fast to the bone by a three-pronged metal rod that was hammered up through the bone marrow.

The lucite end, molded to careful X-ray calculations of the bone it replaces, it screwed up the bolt stud end of the fastening rod until tightly flush with the sawed-off end of the bone. Spreading action of the three prongs give the artificial end security against loosening and twisting.

The elbow end of the humerus is the grooved hinge about which the two bones of the forearm operate. Muscles and ligaments hold the bones together to form the elbow joint.

Dr. Hudack's sole plastic shoulder operation, performed last summer, consisted of replacing the upper head of the humerus with a plastic ball for the shoulder ball-and-socket joint. As yet, no operations have been done to substitute lucite heads at the elbow for the two forearm bones, according to surgeons at the hospitals.

The Navy veteran was back on his job today as a reservations clerk for the U. S. Rubber Co. here. He was exactly trouble-free, though.

The Spinks, Donald and wife, Kathleen, are expecting something any day now that the father will want to cradle in "a good right arm."

'One-Arm Bandit' Yanks Two Men Into Hands of Law

Gaming charges were placed against two men yesterday as result of a fight over payment of a "win" on a slot machine in the Palo Alto Tavern, Bladensburg, Md.

Bladensburg Police Chief Henry Nebel and four other policemen responded to a "riot" call at the tavern about 3 a. m. yesterday. They found an argument over "paying off" for a slot machine "win," Nebel said.

While the policemen were there, the operators decided to pay the protesting customer and promptly were arrested. Julius Richards, 58, 4409 Baltimore blvd., Bladensburg, was charged with operation of a gaming table and Arthur J. Andrews, 48, 3500 Branch ave., Silver Spring, Md., was charged with setting up and maintaining a gaming table. Each posted $1000 bond to insure appearance at a hearing Monday in Hyattsville Police Court.

The registry will contain the case histories and studies on living cerebral palsied persons. It will seek to obtain for scientific research the brains of persons who died from the affliction.

Dr. Perlstein said the academy will seek cooperation of the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults.

First Dose of Watermelon Is Enjoyed by Sick Boy

Baltimore, JaJn. 29 (AP).—Little Kenneth Curtis, jr., ate a big slice of Florida watermelon today, and waited to see if it helps his kidney disease.

His physician, Dr. George Knipp, has written to medical men in New Orleans to determine whether a boy who was helped by watermelon juice was suffering from the same disorder as Kenneth.

The reply had not arrived late today.

Kenneth is a victim of nephrosis, a kidney ailment that causes his body to swell.

His parents began searching for watermelons after reading of the New Orleans case.

After calling "almost every wholesale house in the city," the family asked a relative in Georgia to help. Soon afterward donors were offering watermelons from several parts of the country.

The first one arrived yesterday by air express, a prime 21-pounder from H. J. Sheets of Lalma Sola, near Bradenton, Fla.

"I never knew people could be so nice," said Mrs. Curtis.

Does Stomach Gas and Bloat Make You Feel Miserable?

If so, here is how you may get blessed relief in freeing your stomach from this nervous distress. It works this way:

Everytime food enters the stomach a vital gastric juice must flow normally to break-up certain food particles; else the food may ferment. Sour food, acid indigestion and gas frequently cause a morbid, touchy, fretful, peevish, nervous condition, loss of appetite, underweight, restless sleep, weakness.

To get real relief you must increase the flow of this vital gastric juice. Medical authorities, in independent laboratory tests on human stomachs, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in increasing this flow when it is too little or scanty due to a non-organic stomach disturbance. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps build-up non-organic, weak, watery blood in nutritional anemia—so with a good flow of this gastric digestive juice, plus rich red-blood you should eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better.

Avoid punishing yourself with overdoses of soda and other alkalizers to counteract gas and bloating when what you so dearly need is SSS Tonic to help you digest food for body strength and repair. Don't wait! Join the host of happy people SSS Tonic has helped. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle of SSS Tonic from your drug store today. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Mrs. Gizycka Due To Get Lump Sum

seven ranking executives, Mrs. Patterson stipulated that no estate taxes were to be paid out of the newspaper's funds.

Whether any additional real property was involved was not indicated. It was assumed that Mrs. Gizycka would continue to receive the furniture, personal property and estates on Long Island and in North Dakota, specified in the will.

Five-Month Fight Ended

The surprise out-of-court will settlement was announced late Friday. The settlement brought to a close Mrs. Gizycka's five-month fight to break her monther's will.

All available principals and the numerous attorneys employed in the will contest yesterday said they had pledged to say nothing about the contest-ending pact until February 9, when the precise terms are scheduled to be reported to District Court. Previously, this was the date of the trial of the will contest.

The court is then expected to confirm as executors the three men named by Mrs. Patterson.

The three men are Frank C. Waldrop and William C. Shelton, each heirs under the will to an interest in the Times-Herald, and Joseph W. Brooks, investment broker of New York.

Sidney F. Taliaferro, vice president of Riggs Bank, said yesterday that as soon as the court appoints the executors, the bank expects to be informed that it may step out of its position as collector to operate the Times-Herald business.

Refuses Comment

Roberts refused to comment on whether the settlement agreed upon by Mrs. Gizycka and other parties in the case was satisfactory to her. He said, however, that when she left for her New York home late Friday she was in a "very good" mood.

Mrs. Gizycka could not be reached for comment.

Lloyd K. Garrison, another attorney for Mrs. Gizycka, while refusing comment on actual terms of the compromise settlement, stated that persons named as beneficiaries in Mrs. Patterson's will were informed of any changes in their status as a result of the will settlement.

Mrs. Ann Bowie Smith said that there had been no change in the disposition of the Dower House proper at Upper Marlboro, Md., which she said was left to her "absolutely and in fee simple."

It appeared probable that no changes had been made in the will that would involve transfers of real estate holdings of the late Mrs. Patterson, whose total estate has been valued at from $16,586,571 to $17,690,000.

Mrs. Patterson gave the Times-Herald to the following executives of the newspaper:

William C. Shelton, Frank C. Waldrop, Edmund F. Jewell, Michael W. Flynn, H. A. Robinson, J. Irving Belt and Mason S. Peters.

Given Full Authority

The three executors—Waldrop, Shelton and Brooks—were given full authority to continue the business and make all decisions necessary for its administration for up to three years. However, they may not sell the newspaper without consent of all the beneficiaries.

The Patterson town house, at 15 Dupont Circle, and all its furnishings, except family portraits and silverware, were left to the American Red Cross of Washington, under terms of Mrs. Patterson's will. In addition, real estate, furs and jewelry were willed to Mrs. Evie (Chip) Roberts, jr., of Washington. Mrs. Patterson's horses and dogs went to Rhoda Christmas, and there were a number of cash bequests to employes and to persons to whom Mrs. Patterson had been in the habit of giving money prior to her death.

Mrs. Patterson died at Dower House, her country estate, last July 24, of a heart attack.

Mrs. Gizycka sued to break her mother's will one day before the deadline for opposing its probate. In her charges at that time, she declared her mother to have been of unsound mind and contended that the will was obtained through fraud, deceit and undue influence.

Home Rule Bill Is Speeded Up

a public "prehearing" to hear a limited number of interested civic leaders for the purpose of obtaining "any new and fresh ideas." The subcommittee then will draft a bill and introduce it in the Senate.

4. Final phase will be public hearings which Kefauver does not believe should be extensive in view of "the thorough job" done by the Auchincloss joint committee last year.

Kefauver added that he would be "most happy" to have the House District judiciary subcommittee—which has jurisdiction over home rule bills this year—participate in these public hearings.

"I am most hopeful," said Kefauver, "that we can complete all committee work and report a bill to the Senate within the next two months."

He repeatedly underlined the importance of keeping in close touch with the leadership viewpoint on both sides of the aisle as the "best hope of finally overcoming longstanding prejudices."

On the House side, Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.), chairman of the District Committee's judiciary subcommittee, said yesterday he would "have no objection to joint hearings this year on home rule legislation if the new members of his group felt they would be helpful."

Meanwhile, Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.), chairman of the District subcommittee of fiscal affairs, yesterday assured prompt consideration of the Commissioners' request for a 2-percent local sales tax.

Hunt said he would meet at 3 p. m. Monday with Thomas Henderson, District Committee counsel on fiscal matters, to go over the sales tax proposal. He has called a meeting of his subcommittee for 3 p. m. Tuesday and at 2 p. m. Wednesday his group will hold a joint session with the House District Fiscal Subcommittee, headed by Representative Howard Smith (D., Va.).

Smith, who last week introduced the Commissioners' sales levy bill, has indicated that he does not favor lengthy hearings since extensive hearings were conducted in the last Congress.

Average Age At Death Rises

The average age at death for women in the United States during 1947 was 66.9 years, as compared with 63.3 years for men, the National Office of Vital Statistics of the Public Health Service reported yesterday.

Since 1933, the average age has increased 13 per cent for women and 10 per cent for men, according to the statistical report.

According to these figures, Americans have added 6½ years to their average life span, showing an average for both sexes of 64.8 years in 1947, as compared to an average of 58.2 years in 1933.

Mortality is comparatively high among infants less than 1 year of age with 119,173 such deaths reported during 1947. It is lowest among children 5-9 years of age (8463 such deaths reported) and 10-14 years of age (7272 such deaths reported), according to the report.

The rate of death for the white race in 1947 was 9.9 per 100,000, as compared to a death rate of 11.3 per 100,000 among the nonwhite population. After 75 years of age, however, the death rate for the white race was 120.1 per 100,000, as compared to only 79.6 per 100,000 for the nonwhite population.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Reorganization Plan Would Be Stymied by Proposed Exemptions

The many plans for a sweeping reorganization of the Federal Government will be stymied if the proposal of congressional leaders to exempt a number of agencies from the reorganization bill is approved.

However, the Administration will stand pat on its bill for no agency exemptions. At hearings scheduled for this week, Administration spokesmen will make it clear that the President frowns on any agency being placed in the "untouchable" class. The President definitely wants the power to reorganize any and all agencies.

After a White House conference a few days ago, Democratic leaders announced that the Interstate Commerce Commission, Securities and Exchange Commission, Federal Reserve Board, Federal Trade Commission, General Accounting Office, and perhaps the Maritime and Federal Communications Commissions would be exempted from the reorganization bill. But these leaders, it's reported, did not speak for the President, who will continue to seek the broadest possible authority to overhaul the Government.

On the other hand, the Administration may be willing to compromise the issue. Two such compromise plans are being debated which are: (1) to exempt the quasi-judicial functions or the regulatory agencies such as ICC, Federal Trade, and FCC from the reorganization, or (2) to permit Congress to deal with any "pet" agency in a single reorganization plan.

PLAN: It hasn't been announced, but the Hoover Commission has reached a tentative agreement on a plan to revamp some of the regulatory agencies. In general, this is it:

To transfer the administrative and operating functions of such agencies as the Maritime Commission, ICC, SEC, and FTC among others to the Commerce Department.

The commissions themselves would continue to be independent and they would carry on their rate-making and other such quasi-judicial functions. But they would not enforce their own rules and regulations as they do now. For example, the safety division of ICC would be moved to commerce.

If any or all of the regulatory agencies were placed in the "untouchable" class, the Hoover plan couldn't be carried out.

JUNKED: The Hoover group has junked its well-advertised plan to recommend the creation of a department of administration to be made up of service agencies such as the Budget Bureau, Public Buildings, Civil Service, and the Office of Federal Supply.

Instead, it will support a proposal first worked up by the Budget Bureau several years ago to create an office of special services directly under the White House. What agencies and activities should be placed in the suggested new agency hasn't been decided. In fact, there's a sharp conflict on that score.

Anyway, there's a tentative agreement that the office space and maintenance work of Public Buildings, the Bureau of Federal Supply, the remainder of War Assets, perhaps National Archives, publication control, and a few activities of that nature—activities that affect all agencies—should be in the proposed new agency.

The Administration will be in general agreement with what the Hoover Commission brings out on the office of special services, but it may disagree as to what agencies and activities should be in it.

LOYALTY: The President has issued an order to specifically bring officers on the Public Health Service under his Federal employe loyalty program. Some of the lawyers, it seems, ruled that PHS officers were not subject to the loyalty program because of their semimilitary status.

The President cleared up any doubt about it by ordering the firing of any officer where reasonable grounds exist as to his loyalty.

OVERSEAS JOBS: They are drying up. The Army today has only 50 or 60 openings for civilians overseas. A year or so ago there were always thousands of vacancies which were difficult to fill. But now, it seems, the overseas civilians are holding onto their jobs. Also, hundreds of civilian vacancies in Japan were filled by people who had formerly served in Korea.

COST: The cost of Federal salaries is substantially more than the figure on official documents. In the proposed 1950 budget, for example, the cost of salaries is carried at $6,600,000,000, or more than a sixth of the $41,900,000,000 budget.

That figure is correct as far as it goes. But it doesn't include the salaries of over half a million Government employes, many in the postal service, who are paid out of operating funds that aren't budgeted. The salaries paid to these employes would jump up the cost of Federal salaries to around eight billion dollars for the 1950 fiscal year.

REMINGTON CASE: A decision on the loyalty case of William Remington has been delayed for another week or so. It was supposed to have been handed down Friday, but a member of the Remington panel, George Alger, a New York attorney, had to go to Panama, causing the postponement. Remington was accused by Elizabeth Bentley, the former so-called Communist spy queen, who has rejected several overtures from the Civil Service Loyalty Review Board to appear at the Remington hearings.

White House Danger Points—First Floor Walls, East Room Ceiling

HEAVY, HEAVY HANGS—The ceiling of the famed East Room of the White House—under whose huge chandeliers have stood many of the world's great personages—sagged 6 inches, it was disclosed yesterday. The ceiling would have come crashing down "within an hour" after the discovery, had it not been braced immediately. The historic structure can be restored only by ripping out its interior to the bare outside walls and rebuilding from the ground up

Parking Ban Proposed for F St. Area

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

A proposal for banning of all auto parking on F st. nw., between 10th and 15th sts., will be placed before the Merchants Parking Corp., fringe lot operators, at a meeting next week, it was learned last night.

P. Y. K. Howat, head of the District Motor Vehicle Parking Agency, disclosed he will ask the merchants' group Thursday to make three changes in the present fringe lot program:

1. Ask District Commissioners to prohibit parking in the F st. area, one of the town's most heavily traveled arteries. This was proposed when the fringe lots were being planned, but was not instituted.

2. Reduce the present fee of 25 cents for five-hour parking to 19 cents. This would result in a 45-cent total for parking and a round trip on the Capital Transit Co. shuttle buses.

3. Drop the present five-hour limitation and make the parking fee a flat one for use between 9:15 a. m. and 6:15 p. m.

Double-Parking Preventive

Howat, who sponsored the fringe scheme, said the F st. parking ban was necessary to eliminate present double parking resulting from loading and unloading of passenger cars and delivery trucks.

During the Christmas rush, the double parking tied up shuttle buses, which traverse the shopping area on F st., and forced them to run far behind on the scheduled 18-minute run between the two lots at 25th and E sts. nw. and 3d st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., Howat said.

A recent survey by Parking Agency officials of motorists using the fringe lots resulted in several complaints about the shuttle bus delays in the downtown area.

Howat said he favored a cut in the lot rates to encourage business, particularly at the 25th and E spot, "where business has not been up to expected levels."

Little "All Day" Threat

The lifting of the five-hour limit on fringe lot parking will also help business, Howat said. The lots' opening hour of 9:15 would discourage filling up of the lots by all-day parkers, Howat declared.

The proposals will be made at a meeting of the officers of the Merchants Parking Corp. at 4 p. m. Thursday in the board room of the Second National Bank, 1333 G st. nw., Howat said.

Last June, Howat called a meeting of merchants in the affected F st. area and received assurance they would favor elimination of parking if necessary to assure the success of the fringe lot scheme.

Taxi Driver Recovering From Beating

Hacker Tells Police Of Assault by 2 Men At Thomas Circle

A 48-year-old taxicab driver is recovering from a mysterious but severe beating, inflicted by two men early on January 14, it was learned yesterday.

He is James Rowell, driver of a Yellow Cab, who lives at 5354 Quincy st., Cheverly, Md. He was given emergency treatment at Garfield Hospital and spent a week in Prince George County Hospital after his left arm was broken, several of his ribs were bruised and three of his teeth were knocked out in the attack.

Rowell, who insisted yesterday he has no idea who the two men might be, said that shortly before 5 a. m. January 14, he stopped at Thomas Circle to get some headache tablets in a drugstore there.

Accused of Calling Police

When he got out of his taxicab, he noticed two men "giving a small man a going over," he said. He stopped a moment to watch, out of curiosity, and then went into the drugstore, where he purchased the headache pills, he explained.

When he came out of the drugstore, one of the two men who had been beating the small man, approached Rowell and accused him of calling the Second Police Precinct station house, according to the cab driver.

Then, the two men severely beat and kicked him, put him in their automobile, which was parked at the curb, drove him around the block and put him out of the car again in front of the drugstore, he said.

Doesn't Know Them

He said he could not describe the car other than that there were several coats hanging at the back window, leading him to believe at first the men might be from out of town.

He added that he drove in his own cab to Garfield Hospital for treatment and later was contacted by Second Precinct police, who carry a report of the attack as simple assault by two unknown men. Rowell said he plans to go to police headquarters this week and look through file photographs in an effort to identify the men.

Neilson Well Out in Front For 'Marryingest Judge' Title

Judge George D. Neilson of Municipal Court is forging ahead as the "marryingest" judge in town.

The judge united 25 couples in matrimony in November, the last month for which records were immediately available. Nearest in point of numbers was Judge Thomas D. Quinn of the same court with nine to his credit. A close third was Judge Andrew Hood of the Municipal Court of Appeals with eight.

But the judges don't seem to be making inroads on the clergy in the matter of wedding officiations. Lay ceremonies which in Washington can only be performed by judges, acount for less than 10 per cent of the total.

Back in the 1930s, the late Judge Robert E. Mattingly was known as "the only" marrying judge in town, his brethren on the bench preferring to let the ministers handle the job. Some judges who have performed marriages say they were later embarrassed when they were called upon to dissolve the marriages by divorce.

After Judge Mattingly retired, Judge Fay L. Bentley of Juvenile Court led the field, with the late Judge Nathan Margold at times a close second. But by July, 1947, Judge Bentley had far outstripped him, because that month, she had 21, with Judge Margold with but one to his credit. Judge Bentley became ill with a nervous ailment subsequently and left the bench in November.

In June, 1948, Judge Neilson broke through. He had 20. Judge Bentley had but seven. No other judge had more than one.

White House Is Disclosed As On the Verge of Collapse

walls erected on broad concrete foundations supported by piling. The new walls would be built around structural steel frames which would carry the tremendous load of upper stories and roof.

See Original Foundation

Reporters yesterday saw through a hole in the floor of the southeast ground floor room the original foundation, made of stones from Rock Creek and laid in 1791. The foundation under the outer walls, extending 20 feet deep, is good.

The old kitchen, once a huge room with a deep fireplace at either end, is now divided into two rooms, one of which contains the electrical generating equipment for the building. The plan is to restore the kitchen as it was built in 1792 and move the generating equipment to a new sub-basement.

The ceiling in the state dining room is supported by steel rods attached to the roof trusses to prevent it falling. The East Room ceiling, whose imminent collapse first called attention to the dangerous condition of the building, is now held up by extensive scaffolding. It was saved from collapse when first discovered by laying steel rods under it and wiring these to rods placed across the rafters above.

In the oval Blue Room, stripped of its blue silk hangings, the plaster walls are laced with wooden strips to which the hangings were tacked. Written across the plaster is the legend: "Decorated and furnished by E. C. Yergas," put there, Winslow thought, in 1892.

The architect added that the building's masonry contains hundreds of initials and Masonic emblems scratched by workmen since 1791.

Fire-Blackened Bricks

The Green Room shows a long crack running down through the brickwork of its east wall. On the grand staircase, where an opening was made for the original drainpipes, the bricks are blackened by the fire of 1814, when Washington was captured by a British force.

On the second floor, the Lincoln Room reveals a collapsing window arch and an opening in the brick work of the wall goes through to the adjoining room. The President's study reveals bad walls and rods go through its floor and ceiling to support the ceiling of the Blue Room below. This room has a door onto the controversial balcony with its excellent view southward to the Jefferson Memorial.

The floor of the President's bedroom is noticeably weak and needs no more than walking upon it to cause movement. The President's apartment, like all the residential part of the building, is inconveniently chopped up to make room for the baths which were added long after the structure was new.

Not only will reconstruction of the White House prevent its ultimate collapse with possible fatalities among its occupants. It will provide an opportunity to install an air-conditioning system and to place pipes and wiring according to plan and not haphazardly.

Every Step Visible

As it is now, evidence of every step toward comfortable living since 1891 is visible in the walls and under the floors of the old building. Zinc-sheathed lead pipe installed in 1840 to carry the first water system is still in the walls. So is the gas pipe put there in 1848. Other extensive changes took place in 1874, when hot air heating was installed; in 1892 for the first electric wiring, and in 1902, when the building got hot-water heat. In 1927 the third floor was added, and a new roof with steel trusses.

Not only did these changes clutter up the building which had never been designed for them. Many of them weakened it and helped to hasten its present state of imminent collapse.

Two Policemen Are Relieved of Vice Squad Duty

Two Metropolitan policemen have been relieved of their work with the vice squad and returned to their original assignments.

Detective Sergt. James Roche has returned to the robbery squad after a detail of several months on the vice squad, while Plainclothesman Angelo Bonaccorsy has been returned to uniform and transferred from the vice squad to the Sixth Precinct.

There has been no explanation of the changes, which became effective January 22.

Sergeant Roche stated that he could not "go above the heads of his superiors" by explaining anything about his transfer.

Police officials at headquarters said they knew nothing about the changes, which were handled by Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of Police, who is out of town at this time.

D. C. Woman Dies, Swallowed Poison Tablets by Mistake

Three days after swallowing poison tablets in her home, according to police, Mrs. Mae O. Walker, 32, of 4217 4th st. nw., died yesterday in Gallinger Hospital.

Mrs. Walker's husband, Thomas, an attorney for the General Accounting Office, said his wife took the tablets by mistake in her bedroom while he was in the cellar with one of their two sons, William, 13. The other is Thomas, 14.

Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, deputy coroner, performed an autopsy yesterday but will not issue a death certificate until the stomach contents are analysed.

Rockville Man, 44, Killed as Auto. Truck Collide

A 44-year-old Rockville (Md.) man was killed last night when his automobile collided with a truck on the Rockville-Norbeck rd., 3 miles east of Rockville.

According to Rockville police, William H. Norwood was pronounced dead at Montgomery County Hospital, where he was taken following the collision of his car and a truck driven by Nathan Lewis, 43, of Baltimore, Md.

Lewis was charged with manslaughter and directed to appear Thursday in Rockville Court.

Giddings to Head Cancer Society Drive in District

E. Cleveland Giddings, vice president of the Capital Transit Co., will head the 1949 Cancer Campaign for the District, to be held during April.

The announcement of Giddings' appointment as general chairman was made yesterday by Dr. H. H. Kerr, president of the District division of the American Cancer Society, who also revealed the appointment of Millard F. West of Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath, investment brokers, as vice chairman.

The national quota for 1949 is $14,500,000, but the local goal has not been set. Last year Greater Washington contributed nearly $200,000.

An advisory committee for the campaign, Dr. Kerr said, will consist of Attorney General Tom Clark, the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle, Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, Samuel Kauffmann, Corcoran Thom, Eliot Wadsworth and Dr. Kerr.

Theater Bars Negro Pair in Demonstration

Capitol Picketed In Group's Attack On Segregation

The segregation policy of a downtown theater was challenged yesterday by the Young Progressives of the District who attempted to gain admittance for two Negro members of their group.

After having tickets purchased for them at Loew's Capitol, the Negro couple was denied entrance at the ticket-taker's gate by Joel Margolis, theater manager.

Margolis explained that it was not the policy of the theater to admit Negroes, and that he was following a tradition established and practiced by the community for more than 100 years.

When their ticket money was refunded to them the couple joined 25 members of the Young Progressives who had formed a picket line under the theater marquee.

Headed by Edmond Majchrzyk, chairman of the antidiscrimination committee of the group, the pickets carried placards proclaiming: "Together in War, Why Not Together in Movies?", "Let's Make the Capital Democratic," and "Segregation Divides the Nation."

Majchrzyk said the organization would continue to picket at different theaters on succeeding Saturdays, until all movie houses in Washington that practice segregation are picketed.

This was the first instance of the picketing of a movie theater in protest against segregation. The National Theater formerly showed stage plays, but last fall changed its policy and began to exhibit movies, after prolonged picketing, and the decision of actors not to perform unless Negroes were admitted.

No Anesthetic

Rector Boy Given New Skin Graft

Four-year-old Michael Rector lay on an operating table at Casualty Hospital for three hours without an anesthetic or a whimper yesterday as 110 square inches of new skin was grafted to his body.

Michael has been making a gallant fight for life since 70 per cent of his body was burned when his cowboy suit caught fire November 12. Dr. Joseph Rogers Young, who performed the skin-grafting operation yesterday, was afraid to risk an anesthetic because the child was so weak.

The operation was made less painful by a technique developed by military plastic surgeons during the war. Instead of sewing the donated skin to the flesh, the under side of the skin to be grafted was coated with thrombin, a blood-clotting agent, while the surface to which it was applied was flooded with plasma. A sort of "human glue" results when the two come together, holding the grafted skin firmly in place.

Michael was strong enough to be anesthetized in two earlier skin-grafting operations.

The new skin for Michael was donated yesterday by Marine Sergt. John T. Rapp, of the Anacostia Naval Air Station, who volunteered through admiration for the plucky boy.

The exhibit will open at Anacostia High School Tuesday and remain there through Thursday. On Friday the collection will move to Eastern High School where it will stay until February 8.

Two Judges For Big Load Of Juvenile Court Urged

Social Work Chief Cites Docket of 70 Cases Daily That Are Handled

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Juvenile Court should have two judges, its social work director declared yesterday.

Miss Virginia L. Clary, second in command of the court, emphasized that this was her "own opinion." But she backed it up with figures showing an overloaded court docket from which 70 cases must be disposed of daily in the court room.

Despite a more than 100 per cent increase in volume since the court was reorganized in 1938 as a "model" agency for handling juvenile offenders, the work of the court is on a current basis, she declared.

'Too Much for a Person'

"We try to do the job, but it is too much for a person, and I mean any one person, to handle according to the best standards," she said.

At present, the one judge for the Juvenile Court must be drawn from the bench of the Municipal Court. Fay L. Bentley, sole Juvenile Court judge since its reorganization, is now in voluntay commitment at St. Elizabeths Hospital for what is described as a "nervous involvement."

Because of Judge Bentley's illness, a Municipal Court judge must sit in her place in Juvenile Court.

The possibility that even a second judge may be taken from Municipal Court to dispose of Juvenile Court cases has been discussed at one meeting of local jurists, it was learned.

Officials of the courts here have been informed that a committee of citizens may seek some relief for the Juvenile Court, possibly in the form of legislation.

Replacement Provided

In the case of District Court judges, Congress has provided for replacement of ailing or inactive jurists by special appointments, with the provision that the inactive judge will not be replaced on his death or retirement.

The Municipal Court bench, its officials state, can ill afford to lose any of its members because of a heavy docket. Congress has been asked to increase the 10-judge bench to 13.

In the Juvenile Court, there were about 3000 new complaints in 1948. Last year, the figure had risen to approximately 7100, with some 3300 more probation cases to be handled.

More alarming yet is the increase in bastardy cases, which has risen from 130 in 1946 to 460 last year. In that period, nonsupport cases as a whole rose some 30 per cent, owing primarily to the breakup of war marriages and the changing economic situation, according to Miss Clary.

Bar Members Ask Fennell's Confirmation

The District Bar Association yesterday urged Senate confirmation of Municipal Court Judge Aubrey B. Fennell's nomination for reappointment.

The jurist's nomination to succeed himself was held up by the Senate District Committee last June because it had received a protest against Fennell from a Washington lawyer and civic leader. He then was backed, however, by the District Bar Association.

Fennell has been serving on the bench under a recess appointment since last July 7 when his term expired.

In a letter to Senator J. Howard McGrath (R., R. I.), chairman of the Senate District Committee before which the nomination is pending, Walter M. Bastian, chairman of the Bar Association's judicial selection committee, said:

"The committee officials went on record at a recent meeting unanimously urging confirmation. We believe that Judge Fennell's qualifications and his actions on the bench entitle him to confirmation."

Bastian said members of the bar group would be glad to attend any hearings, which, it was learned, will be called by the committee in the near future.

District Reports 1st Signs of Drop In Building Costs

District government officials last night reported first signs of a drop in construction costs.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, disclosed that bids for installation of additional sludge tanks at the Blue Plains Sewage Disposal Plant were $150,000 less than the $350,000 earmarked for this purpose in the Sanitation Department's budget.

Francis Timmons, chief clerk in the engineers' department, said that recent requests for construction bids have attracted twice as large a response thus far in 1949 as in 1948.

Area News in Brief

Girl's Hand Bitten By Rhesus Monkey

A 4-year-old girl was bitten on three fingers by a rhesus monkey at the Zoo in Rock Creek Park yesterday when her father was unable to hold her back from the monkey cage as she was feeding the rhesus peanuts.

The girl, Mary Lohr, 1842 M st. ne., was treated at Children's Hospital and sent home. Her father, Charles S. Lohr, a floor manager at the Woodward & Lothrop department store, said he had four other children with him.

Though he tried to keep them from getting too near the cage, he said, Mary slipped under the guard rail and, before he could hold her, she went near enough so the monkey pulled her by the arm of her snowsuit and bit her.

Spoiled Food Destroyed

More than two tons of spoiled foodstuffs, including large quantities of greens and pine apples, were ordered destroyed last week by Health Department food inspectors. The officials checked 1117 establishments and made 14 condemnations. One case was taken to Municipal Court and resulted in fines and forfeitures totaling $50.

D. C. Water Plan Ready

A plan for expansion of the District's water supply system to meet population needs has been submitted to members of the Board of Commissioners by Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner.

A District Building spokesman said Commissioner John Russell Young has studied the plan, and agrees with General Young's proposals.

The program has been under study for several months and the plan represents a consolidation of proposals by Water Department Superintendent David V. Auld, E. A. Schmitt, chief of the local water supply division, Army Engineers, and General Young.

Drivers Fined $75 Each

Two men were fined $75 each yesterday by Judge Armond W. Scott of Municipal Court in hit-and-run driving cases. They were John S. Harrison, 26, 1002 Monroe st. nw., and James Frierson, 24, 527 4th st. sw.

Tenants Denied Retrial

Chief Judge George P. Barse of Municipal Court yesterday denied a new trial for 15 tenants of the Westmoreland Apartments in a cooperative eviction case.

The Westmoreland tenants face eviction possibly as early as next week unless an appeal is taken. Tenants in the establishment contend the cooperative purchasers, at the 2122 California st. nw., building, are not landlords within the meaning of local rent laws, and therefore lack power to sue for the apartments for their own use and occupancy.

Victor Herbert Exhibit

Victor Herbert fans: Take note. The Library of Congress will open a special exhibit on Tuesday, February 1, devoted to the composer, conductor and violoncellist who died in New York on May 26, 1924.

The display in the library's main building will include nearly all of Herbert's 45 operettas, many autographs, letters, photographs and documents relating to his career.

The collection, to be shown for one month, got its start in 1935 when Mrs. Ella Herbert Bartlett of New York, daughter of the composer, left with the library a collection of her father's original manuscripts.

To Discuss Loyalty Check

District Commissioners are expected next week to discuss and approve a recommendation by their loyalty committee for tabling any further action on checking loyalty of employes, according to a District Building spokesman.

The committee, headed by Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Daniel B. Maher, said the chances of uncovering a disloyal person through expensive investigations were so slim as not to warrant such action.

Science Plans For War Urged In Peacetime

Lexington, Va., Jan. 29 (AP).—Dr. Karl T. Compton of the national military establishment said today that technological preparations from now on should be made in peacetime and "not left for action if and when a war emergency may engulf us."

Dr. Compton is chairman of the Research and Development Board of the National Military Establishment.

He gave his "warning" today in an address to the graduating class at Virginia Military Institute.

Cadet James C. Pringle of Thomasville, Ga., delivered the valedictory.

"Science, which by a legislative and official decree has been elevated to the status of full partnership with the military," Dr. Compton said, "has long been its handmaiden and counsellor.

"The course of events in World War II was profoundly affected by the new weapons that appeared on the scene. It is reasonable to suppose that the same circumstances would obtain in World War III, if it should come.

"It becomes our problem, therefore, to plan the defense of the United States in terms of weapons which are at the forefront of effectiveness and, in the longer range, to plan for weapons not yet fully developed and perhaps as yet not even envisaged."

Women Urge Communists Be Outlawed

A series of resolutions, many of them urging militant steps against Communisum, was adopted yesterday by delegates to the Twenty-third Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense.

The conference, attended by more than 900 delegates, was concluded yesterday at the Hotel Statler.

Several of the resolutions urged that:

The Communist Party be outlawed.

Governors of the various States appoint commissions to study text books in schools and libraries and search for un-American propaganda.

Would Require Oath

The Federal Government expel all Communists in its employ and require an oath of loyalty from all Federal employes.

Immediate aid be sent to China.

The military defenses of Alaska be strengthened because of its nearness to Russia.

The conference also went on record as opposing socialized medicine and Federal aid to education as presently proposed.

In another resolution, the delegates voted against any plan of world government which would cost the United States any portion of its sovereignty.

Indorses UMT

In other resolutions, the conference urged enactment of universal military training, increased wages for military personnel, repeal of the present Reciprocal Trade Agreement Act and retention of present immigration quotas.

Home Accident Victims Total 124 for Week

1949 Injuries to date........ 479
1948 Injuries for same period 371
1949 Deaths to date......... 11
1948 Deaths for same period.. 15

A 14-year-old boy whose eye was burned while experimenting with a chemical set was among the District's 124 home accident victims treated at local hospitals during the past week.

A 5-year-old girl was burned on the arm ironing a doll dress, and three adults were burned when gas stoves exploded, according to the Red Cross Home Accident survey, which listed 17 burn accidents during the week.

Falls accounted for 51 of the injuries, including those of two babies whose older sisters dropped them accidentally.

A young man hurt his head when he fell out of bed while under the effects of sleeping pills, and a 36-year-old man discovered a razor blade in his bed to account for his accidentally slashed arm.

Other accident victims, treated at various Washington hospitals, included a small boy who amputated the tip of his finger on a bicycle chain, and a 2-year-old girl who cut her face when she pulled over a small aquarium on herself.

Other children required treatment for swallowing clorox, lye, perfume, D.D.T. and a whole box of sulfa tablets.

Home accidents necessitated two operations, one on a 2-year-old who swallowed a piece of metal that lodged in the base of his lung, and one on an adult who swallowed a hard object while eating, which stuck in his throat.

Seven accidental deaths were reported for the past 2-week period. Three were due to falls, one to burns and one to accidental poisoning. Two infants died of suffocation.

GSI used more than 800,000 pounds of meat, more than half of it beef; 230 carloads of fresh produce; 450,000 pounds of frozen vegetables and fruits; more than 300,000 pounds of fish and poultry; 101,000 pounds of butter; 47,000 pounds of oleomargarne; 453,000 dozen eggs; 2,700,000 quarts of milk and cream and one million pounds of bread.

There was a drop in consumption of spinach and carrots, but increases in that of sugar (887,000 pounds), flour (900,000 pounds) and onions (300,000 pounds).

Courthouse Wing Fund Plan Offered

Constructior of a new wing to the Arlington County Courthouse under a deferred payment plan extending over 15 months was proposed to the County Board yesterday.

In an informal discussion following the board's regular meeting, Chairman Basil DeLashmutt suggested that the addition be built from funds which would be made available in three separate fiscal years, with the final payment to be made after the 1950 budget is approved. By appropriating the last payment as soon as the budget becomes effective, he said, the entire sum could be written off in a year and three months.

Bids on the proposed addition were received by the board last October, but the work was delayed due to a lack of funds. Under DeLashmutt's proposal, the low bidder, Lee T. Turner, would be contacted to determine if his figure of $377,923 for the job is still in effect, and if the deferred payment proposal would be acceptable.

Earlier, the board again deferred selection of a site for the controversial Hall's Hill community playground, after three proposed sites were opposed by county citizens. One of the playground sites, which would serve as all-Negro community, was opposed by a Negro delegation, while white spokesmen objected to the other two.

The Negro group opposed a site located almost squarely in the center of the Hall's Hill area on the grounds that occupants of three homes there would have to be evicted so their homes could be razed for the project. One spokesman also objected to the proposed play center with a contention the area is not large enough for recreation purposes.

White groups opposing the other sites objected to one on the ground that it is too close to an all-white neighborhood and the other because it is not large enough.

The board also received a report from County Manager A. T. Lundberg that the Government has begun a "gradual elimination" of the South Glebe Road Trailer Camp, recently termed a "moral disgrace" to the county.

LOU E. BALLENGER

Enjoyed her teaching life

School Veteran Rates Sense of Humor Vital

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

It is impossible for Miss Lou E. Ballenger to count her "children." They extend back through nearly 50 years of service as a public school teacher and principal.

She remembers their faces, though. The vice president at the bank, the bus driver, or the saleswoman in the department store frequently turns out to be her student.

Children, now men and women, living all over the world, stop in to see her.

"I have enjoyed every bit of my teaching life," said the white-haired teacher who retires Monday as principal of the Raymond Elementary School. "There hasn't been a day of drudgery."

Miss Ballenger believes that nobody has any business being a teacher "unless he has a sense of humor, enjoys hard work and loves people."

While talking about her "children," Miss Ballenger pulled out pictures of her classes, some going back to before the first World War when she was a teacher at the old Force School.

She refused to single out her students who have become famous. The men and women doing ordinary jobs as good citizens are just as important, she believes.

A graduate of Washington schools, Miss Ballenger taught at the Berret, Dennison and Morgan Schools as well as the Force School and was principal at the Corcoran and Jackson Schools before she was named principal at Raymond 18 years ago.

Several school projects she initiated have received special notice. Her Pan-American programs attracted the interest of diplomats and resulted in exchange of materials between her school and those in the other Americas.

A garden and a playground she planned and built with volunteer aid at the Corcoran School were singled out as a model by the Agriculture Department.

The green thumb that worked so well at Corcoran also made Raymond flourish.

Among Miss Ballenger's going-away gifts from the students was an illuminated poem from the fifth and sixth grades. It said in part:

"I know that we can never thank
The one who took our school's drab bank
And from a place forlorn and bare
Brought forth a place of beauty rare.
A place where children love to meet
Enjoying shade and flowers sweet."

Mrs. Dorsey To End Concert Bureau Work

Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey, Washington concert manager since 1933, will discontinue her concert bureau at the conclusion of the 1948-49 season, she announced yesterday.

At the same time, Patrick Hayes of the Hayes Concert Bureau made known that his bureau would present artists and attractions formarly handled by Mrs. Dorsey beginning with the 1949-50 season.

Mrs. Dorsey founded her concert bureau following the death of her aunt, Mrs. Katie Wilson-Greene, one of the country's leading impresarious of her time.

In announcing her retirement, Mrs. Dorsey stated: "I will always have a vital interest in the musical life of our city and will continue to serve the concert-going public of Washington in an advisory capacity in connection with the concerts presented by Mr. Hayes."

Hunt Fails For Widow's Assailant

A 13-State lookout was broadcast by Maryland police yesterday after a futile all-night search of woods in the Laurel area for a man who attacked a Laurel widow Friday night.

The 39-year-old mother of two children was on her way to the Laurel Legion Home when she was attacked, police said. As she emerged from the railroad underpass near the race track at Lafayette and Main sts., a man seized her around the neck and dragged her to a nearby field before she escaped, town police said she reported.

Joining in the search were Chief of Police George S. Barkman of Laurel and his 10-man police force, 15 Maryland State troopers, and 50 volunteer firemen and other citizens. The posse scoured the area and the race track.

The woman was treated by a physician for cuts and bruises and shock.

Police of the eastern seaboard were asked to look for a 20-year-old light-brown skinned Negro, short and stocky. Laurel police arrested several suspects yesterday, but none was identified by the victim, and they were released.

Board Investigates St. John's Row

Baltimore, Jan. 29 (AP).—The board of visitors and governors at St. John's College in Annapolis met in special session here today to discuss major administrative changes, but declined to disclose what is going on.

Speculation has been rife since Tuesday when President John S. Kieffer requested and received the resignations of Dean Raymond N. Wilburn and Assistant Dean Luke Harvey Poe, jr.

It was reported that Treasurer Harrison Fiddesof also had been asked to resign. He said "I have not resigned. I can't resign except to the board of visitors and governors."

All principals had declined to discuss the reasons behind the resignations

Richard F. Cleveland of Baltimore, said as the board adjourned tonight that "several faculty members and three students" had appeared before it. He would not comment on what was discussed.

He said the group would meet again Sunday and hoped to adjourn and release a statement by 1 p. m.

Truman 'Point 4' Caught Departments Unawares

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

IN ANCIENT Sparta parents used to leave their new-born babes on open hillsides, to toughen or die. Ten days ago President Truman left a new-born proposal on the doorstep of the State Department, with the risk that there, too, it might die of exposure.

This was the President's Inauguration Day proposal to use American technical skills in underdeveloped countries, and to make such assistance one of the four main pillars of American foreign policy.

Secretary Dean Acheson has been told to pick up the President's proposal, nourish it, plan its life and decide what sinews it needs to make it strong. The new Secretary is a resourceful man, and his newly-confirmed Undersecretary, James E. Webb, also has a reputation for getting things done.

But it will require rare leadership within the State Department, as well as inter-agency and international staff work of a high order, if the President's proposal is to grow into something more than words.

Credit Bandied About

THE IDEA was presented to the world in such slap-dash fashion that even now most of the Executive Branch does not know just what the President intended.

Many in Washington are claiming belated credit for it, and others are having the credit thrust upon them.

One in the latter category is Norris E. Dodd, the new director general of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, who discussed the idea with the President a week before the inauguration.

Another is President John J. McCloy of the World Bank, who was horrified when the President greeted him at a post-inaugural reception by saying, "Well, I see you wrote my speech for me."

Of course, McCloy didn't write it, although rumor was busy with his name. Still another who has disclaimed authorship is Acheson, who firmly told his first press conference last week that he had not discussed the inaugural speech with the President before its delivery.

One at the State Department who does not claim authorship of the now-famous Point Four, but who probably is entitled to, is Benjamin H. Hardy, a young former newspaperman from Georgia who heads the writers' branch in the Office of Public Affairs.

The White House had asked the State Department to draft a restatement of American foreign policy, for possible use in the inaugural message. Hardy got the assignment. His draft went to the White House with a passage on the underdeveloped areas, and the President's staff liked it.

Some State Department officials understandably battle-weary after recent years, thought the President should say nothing about the underdeveloped countries until a plan had been worked out.

But others contended, and the President agreed with them, that sometimes you need a bold policy statement to dramatize an issue and to create the momentum for a plan.

Prod Sometimes Necessary

THE FAULT in the President's procedure was not that there was no plan. After all, there was no Marshall Plan of any kind when Secretary Marshall made his famous proposal at Harvard on June 5, 1947.

There had been a good deal of thought about the plight of Europe; there had even been a little-noticed speech by Acheson in May, saying that Europe would need further financing from the United States to save it from disaster. But without the Harvard speech the western European countries would not have formed their joint organization, and there might have been no European Recovery Program.

In the same way, without the President's inaugural speech the State Department probably would not have gone to work with any degree of urgency on the problem of the underdeveloped areas.

The problem was not new. No fewer than 25 Government agencies had been dabbling in it as members of an interdepartmental committee which had been sending technicians abroad and bringing others here for training. It was perfectly proper and necessary for the President to give the idea a push at home and abroad.

The real fault in the procedure was the apparent failure of the White House to consult any Government agency about the President's speech—except the State Department. There is no evidence that the Agriculture Department was consulted or informed, although there can be no effective use of American skills abroad without the fullest possible use of farm and soil experts.

There is no evidence that the Labor Department knew about it, although the process of technical assistance involves the placing of foreign workers in American factories. There is no evidence that the Commerce Department had any inkling of it, although Commerce has invaluable experience and information about making American industrial techniques available to others.

A Long-Range Project

INSTEAD OF drawing upon the ideas and experience of other agencies, the White House staff made up its mind what kind of speech it wanted, and appears to have made a casual request to the State Department to write a draft.

The result is that the rest of the Government is mystified, and somewhat miffed as well. The job of translating the President's speech into a "plan of action" is more difficult than if the speech itself had been the product of better staff work in the White House.

Those who are working on the "plan of action" know it will take a long time to make a dent in the stubborn problem of the underdeveloped areas. It will take a long time to create conditions under which private capital will flow into those areas.

President Truman himself pointed out last week that his inaugural speech laid down a program for the next four years, and that progress would have to be gradual.

Easier Job Than ERP

CERTAINLY, the official planners do not picture an Imperial Valley springing up overnight in the parched lands of Pakistan, or a new Mesabi Range being exploited quickly in the copper country of Rhodesia, or a new Pittsburgh arising in Peru.

This, however, should be remembered: it is far easier for the United States to tackle the problem of backward areas now than it was to get the Marshall Plan under way 18 months ago.

The Marshall Plan required a precedent-breaking organization of European countries, a brand new Government agency here, a complex mass of new legislation and vast appropriations.

The effort to apply American "skills" to the underdeveloped areas requires no new legislation, as far as can be foreseen. It can be carried on and intensified, Acheson said last week, through existing agencies of the United States Government and the United Nations.

Four main agencies of the Government already have the legal authority to send experts abroad and bring others here for training. These are the Economic Cooperation Administration, the Institute of Inter-American Affairs, the Export-Import Bank, and, finally, the Interdepartmental Committee on Scientific and Cultural Cooperation, which represents 25 Government agencies.

In addition, eight specialized agencies of the United Nations can make technical help available to member nations, some of which are among the most backward and undeveloped areas of the globe.

So there is no lack of mechanisms for making skills available abroad. There is no immediate lack of money; the ECA, for example, has barely touched the six million dollars allocated to it last year for technical assistance.

Undoubtedly additional money will be needed to send more people abroad than the pitifully small trickle moving now. But these additional costs will be tiny compared to the cost, for example, of the European Recovery Program.

What is lacking is qualified men and

Rayburn Braiding a Leash for House Junketeers

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

HERE'S some sad news for congressional junketeers. Speaker Sam Rayburn, who has some say in the matter, thinks this will be a "stay at home" Congress.

Travel may broaden the mind but it doesn't pass bills. The new House boss is known to feel that proxies are no substitute for votes.

The Eightieth Congress ran up an all-time "globe-trotting" record. At one time a total of 165 legislators, more than a third of all members, were discovering the world.

The world tours served one valuable purpose. Some GOP isolationists, whose votes helped pass the Marshall Plan, discovered there was something beyond the two oceans.

That fact having been established, beyond contravention, the Speaker feels legislators ought to do what they are paid to do—legislate.

Hats Off to Danbury

THE topping trade in Danbury, Conn., hat center of the world, is still talking about one inaugural parade incident that passed almost unnoticed here.

Danbury's hatters' union, which looks dubiously on any uncovered male, sent its fife and drum corps to Washington to escort Connecticut's new Governor, Chester Bowles.

Marching beside the Governor's car, they fifed and drummed up the Avenue. There was only one thing wrong with the picture. The Governor made the entire trip bareheaded.

Legal Advice Recommended

"OPERATION SPY HUNT" isn't yet over, but look for a lot more changes in how it's run before the Democratic version of the Un-American Activities Committee gets up steam.

Having filled all Democratic vacancies on the group with lawyer-members, Democrats are now talking about hiring, if only on a temporary basis, the best lawyer they can find in the country to serve as counsel.

It's still in the talk stage, but former Associate Justice of the Supreme Court Owen Roberts needn't be surprised if he gets an offer.

Lawyer-members of the reorganized group want a member of their profession with an unimpeachable reputation to help them launch holeproof new procedures.

Another questionable practice of the old committee may be headed down the drain. Up to now the committee has been a side source of income for members who wrote articles or made speeches about its findings for pay. At an early meeting a resolution may be presented to stop that lucrative pastime.

Look for the committee to work closely with the Justice Department and closer than ever with the FBI.

Truman's Many Tongues

ONE of the Administration's little advertised "secret weapons" in the last campaign was the Democratic National Committee's nationalities division, directed by Mieczyslaw Cieplinski.

Representing every important nationality group in America, the group plugged for Truman and a Democratic Congress in these varied tongues: Austrian, Swedish, Chinese, Greek, Norwegian, Italian, Ukrainian, Portuguese, Finnish, Polish, Slovak, Spanish, Czech, Russian and Jewish.

So successful were they in swinging the foreign language vote that Rhode Island's Senator Theodore Francis Green arranged a luncheon for their 18 unit chairmen at the Capitol the other day.

At the urging of Green, Democratic Chairman J. Howard McGrath and Vice President Alben W. Barkley, they decided not to disband but to do the same job for a Democratic Congress in 1950.

Green, chairman of the division, modeled its work along lines long followed by the Democratic Party in polyglot Rhode Island, where party workers make a bee line to welcome every new citizen.

A Nutmeg Art Gallery

REPRESENTATIVE Abraham A. Ribicoff, one of three Democratic newcomers from Connecticut, hit on a novel way to boost his home district.

After looking at the bleak walls of his House office, he broadcast an appeal to Hartford County constituents for pictures.

What he wanted, he said, were pictures representing a cross-section of life in his district. Not valuable prints or collectors' items, just pictures—any old pictures that told the Hartford County story.

Last week they started arriving—photographs of old landmarks, churches, town halls, historic colonial homesteads, industrial plants, the Hartford skyline, bridges, a field golden with haystacks, a winter rural scene.

Ribicoff got homesick just looking at them, ordered frames for the lot, broadcast an appeal for more.

Clairvoyant Congressman

AMONG Capitol intimates, former Representative Carter Manasco (D., Ala.) is known as the man who almost invented the atomic bomb.

Manasco went to Germany soon after the Nazis surrendered in 1945 on a surplus war goods study. One night, months before Hiroshima, he sat with a group of German townsmen in a hotel near Frankfurt.

Manasco found himself elaborating on the theme of American humanity versus Nazi brutality. Carried away by his own eloquence, he started drawing on his imagination.

"Why," he said, "we have a bomb about the size of that coal scuttle over there that would destroy every building, every living thing, every blade of grass even, within miles of this town. But we were too humane to use it."

None was more surprised than Manasco when the atomic bomb dropped on Japan.

"I still think I invented it that night," he said.

Eight-Wheel Pedestrian

SINCE he got that salary raise, along with the President and Vice President, Speaker Rayburn likes to refer to himself as "the $30,000 cotton picker."

The Speaker earned his first money picking cotton on a Texas farm. The rate for pickers was about 25 cents a hundred pounds. You had to pick fast to earn a dollar a day.

So $30,000, even after the tax collector's been around, looks like a lot of money to Rayburn. Besides that, he gets the use of a Cadillac car.

That makes him a "two-car" man. His first Cadillac was a present from Democratic members of the late Eightieth Congress when Republicans took over the House and the Speaker's official car.

Now he wouldn't part with it. The new one may be shinier, but he has a sentimental attachment for the first, intends to take it back home to his ranch in Texas when Congress adjourns.

Even with all that transportation, the Speaker still likes to hoof it. He sometimes walks a full three miles to the Capitol just to keep in form.

Our AMG Boss in Berlin Makes the Russians Boil

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

BERLIN, Jan. 29.—The number one hate of the Russians in Berlin is a tough-skinned American who thrives on Communist abuse.

Almost every day the Soviet army publishes new insults against Col. Frank L. Howley, director of United States military government here. Communist newspapers describe him in headlines as "Liar," "Provocateur of Civil War," "Dictator," "Terrorist," "Highway Robber" and "Black Market Knight."

Red cartoonists lampoon him, and if you believe what Soviet-controlled newspapers say, it was Howley who almost single-handed blockaded Berlin, split the city and destroyed the four-power Kommandatura.

The alleged culprit seems unremorseful. He says:

"Somebody ought to tell those birds about consistency in propaganda. They're confusing their readers by giving me too many different personalities."

Howley, whose 46th birthday will be celebrated February 4 without Russian participation, is the most colorful figure in American rule in Germany. He led an advance military group into Berlin in June, 1945, and his rows with the Russians started at the same time.

The Red army wouldn't let Howley's original "task force" cross the Elbe, because it exceeded the small number of officers, men and vehicles an Allied negotiator had mentioned previously.

Howley compromised; he brought his group in piecemeal. He kept up an attitude of compromise for the remainder of 1945, but it has faded since.

Son of County Cork

HIS boss, Gen. Lucius D. Clay, the American military governor in Germany, swears by him. At Clay's urging, Howley shelved plans to resume his prewar advertising business in Philadelphia, and stepped up from Berlin deputy commandant to commandant in December, 1947.

The top job required military rank, so Howley returned to active duty as a colonel, his wartime commission. As a civilian, he had been receiving $10,000 a year. The promotion in Berlin actually cut his salary $4000.

Friends suggest it isn't surprising that Frank Leo Howley loves action. His grandfather and father came from County Cork. In either blarney or billingsgate, he can hold his own with the Russians. He has borne the brunt of most differences with Soviet officers around the conference table.

A Howley statement that really seemed to rock the Russians was given out December 1. He offered a six-point plan for restoring Berlin harmony. It would require Russia to lift the blockade, resume four-power control, repudiate direct support of the Communist minority's claim here to political domination, drop anti-American propaganda and cease kidnaping non-Communists.

The Communist press in Berlin nearly choked with fury.

1500 Hours of Talk

HOWLEY'S comments since 1945 would fill several volumes. Until the Kommandatura was boycotted by the Russians last July, he had spent an estimated 1500 hours at inter-Allied conferences. He had cosigned 1200 Allied orders to the German municipal government.

When a Soviet interpreter fumbled in translating a charge that American GI's had beaten old German women, Howley turned it into a world joke. The interpreter pronounced it "bitten." Howley denied that biting old women was an American habit.

He has asserted that the Berlin blockade is "the most inhuman blockade known to history." Asked once about the prospect of dickering again with the Russians, he replied: "The United States does not negotiate with criminals."

In second-guessing him, some Allied observers single out one instance when they say he was too exuberant in needling the Russians. It happened at the last meeting of the four-power Kommandatura on June 16, 1948. The hour was nearly midnight. The wrangling had been interminable. Howley obtained permission of the chairman, French General Ganeval, to depart, leaving his deputy, W. T. Babcock, in his stead.

It was an excuse that Russian Maj. Gen. Alexander Kotikov apparently was waiting for. He stormed out of the meeting with his entire staff, complaining that Howley had been insulting.

The four commandants have never sat down together since.

Howley used to get along well with the Russians. In an era of many inter-Allied cocktail parties, Howley as a champion horseman had a common interest with Soviet cavalry officers. Several times he went on Russian hunting parties.

It's different in 1949. When he discovered one of his staff had entertained a Russian in his home, he emphatically ordered "no more footsie-wootsie with the Reds."

A Youthful Parisian

HIS relationship with British and French officers is close. They reach agreement on Berlin issues much more easily than their home governments do about Germany.

Howley's admiration for France stems from his youth, when he studied art for a short while in Paris. He wears the ribbons of the French Legion of Honor and Croix de Guerre (with three citations).

Toward his American subordinates, he exhibits hearty team spirit, such as he had when he was playing a classy end on the New York University football team in the early 1920's.

Berliners recall he was a "hard peace" man when he first came here, but that was America's highest policy at the time. Now he fervently remarks that Berliners are "in the front lines of the fight against Communism." So say the higher-ups in Washington, too.

Howley talks of going back to his Philadelphia office, possibly in the spring. If, as and when Howley goes, Berlin will never be quite the same again.

Nationalistic Bias Laid to AMG Paper

BERLIN, Jan. 29.—Die Neue Zeitung, official newspaper of the American military government here, appears to have become an organ for encouraging the growth of German nationalism. Even German newspapers and magazines are commenting openly on this development.

The Frankfurter Rundschau said this week: "In Die Neue Zeitung we always are almost certain to find pretty tough criticism of the American and Anglo-American policy. If one reads carefully, and one does not have to read between the lines . . . one finds symptoms of German nationalism . . . We are against German nationalism, and so we cannot support certain aspects of Die Neue Zeitung's editorial policy."

A bitter struggle has been going on behind the scenes for editorial direction of Die Neue Zeitung. Kendall Foss, former Berlin correspondent of the New York Post, is now directly responsible for what appears in the paper. His critics charge that "the Germans have captured control of Die Neue Zeitung. They are now the spokesmen of the military government."

Truman Has Mechanism For Point 4

women, willing to spend two or three years in distant and perhaps unhealthful places where their skills are needed.

Spadework and Salesmanship

TO FIND these people, to work out suitable arrangements with their private employers, to make the necessary plans with the countries involved, and then to fire American and foreign opinion with enthusiasm for a long, hard job—these, above all, are the tasks that face the planners in the Government this year.

Until now the provision of technical help for other countries has been a Cinderella among Government activities here. It has been starved for funds, for status and for leadership. If the job is done with energy and imagination from now on, and with the utmost use of every available agency, it can be done .

Later, much later, large-scale financing will be needed, but this is seen primarily as a job for private capital and for the World Bank. As long ago as last April, Secretary Marshall warned the Latin-Americans at Bogota that the United States Government could not carry the load of financing development projects.

His successor underlined the warning the other day, and President Truman implied it on Inauguration Day. The immediate job, as Secretary Acheson sees it, is to create the conditions that will attract private capital into underdeveloped areas.

After all, it was not so long ago in the time-scale of history when the United States was an "underdeveloped area." Private capital, boldly taking risks, poured in from Europe to build railroads, communications systems and other development projects in the new Republic.

Much of North America, and later of South America, was built up by European "venture capital." That was in the nineteenth century, when science had far fewer resources than it has now.

Is it so extravagant to think that the same process can be repeated, this time by American and European capital, in other parts of the world?

A Year After, Gandhi Ideals Seem Nurtured by His Death

By Lady Rama Rau

(The author is the wife of Sir Benegal Rama Rau, Ambassador of India to the United States. Active in Indian women's affairs for more than 25 years, in 1947 she was elected president of the All India Women's Conference, which is the leading women's organization with more than 300 chapters).

JANUARY 30 will ever remain to the people of India a day of prayer and fasting, a day to revive the memory of Mahatma Gandhi, a day to relearn the lessons he taught, and a day to review their own actions of the year and assess honestly how far short they fall of the ideals he placed before his people.

LADY RAMA RAU

At 6 p. m. on January 30, 1948, the news of the assassination of Mahatma Gandhi was broadcast by All India Radio. It was a paralyzing shock to millions—a shock that quickly changed to horror and despair as the implications of the tragedy sank into their minds. Horror and despair were succeeded by intense anxiety about the immediate future in a country where the movements of populations from Pakistan into India and from India into Pakistan were still going on, with all the attendant bitterness of heart, criminal acts and cruel atrocities that accompany the fate of displaced persons.

Mahatma Gandhi was the one leader who in the midst of all the suffering around him stood like a tower of strength, frail, old and wizened as he was, seeing the future with a clear vision, balanced in his judgment and extending spiritual support to suffering hearts without compromising eternal values. Through 30 years and more he had guided the country during the most tumultuous period of her history in living memory, along a path that was novel, and had attained success in spite of all contrary warnings. Truth, nonviolence and the brotherhood of man were his guiding principles, and in spite of all the chaos around him he had the courage to preach day after day that these principles could not be compromised with, that there could be no violation of basic ideals, that retaliation and the desire for revenge could only breed hatred strong enough to shake the foundations of our newly won freedom.

Fear of an Influence

HIS ASSASSIN, a man belonging to a narrow communal group, believed that the policy Mahatma Gandhi preached was likely to emasculate the Hindus; that retaliation by Hindus against Moslems was justified when millions of Hindus were being driven from their homes in Pakistan. He and his coworkers realized that the influence of this revered leader was bound to change the hearts of men—gradually—and hence the only way to prevent it was to remove his influence finally and for all time.

The shock of the tragedy, however, resulted immediately in focussing the attention of all thinking people on the great teachings of the Father of the Nation. In the grief and helplessness of those first days, when, in the words of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, "the light has gone out of our lives and there is darkness everywhere," men's minds could only work around the spiritual truths that had been taught by this great leader of men.

The tributes paid to him were heartfelt. If India had to live, Mahatma Gandhi could not die. The acceptance and practice of his teachings would keep his spirit alive.

A year has gone by. The India that was torn by communal strife has seen that strife cease from the very day of his sudden death. There is suffering in the country, but Moslems are safe and communal harmony has been established. The present leaders of the nation—ardent disciples of Gandhiji—are striving to carry on the work that lies ahead, keeping the Gandhian ideals in the forefront of their schemes.

Civil Rights Protected

IT IS sometimes forgotten that Mahatma Gandhi was one of the most versatile leaders any country has known. His work for the depressed classes (the "untouchables") is sometimes overlooked in assessing his value as a political leader.

The new India, in keeping with his teaching, has accepted a civil rights program, and is rapidly implementing it in all official and nonofficial departments. Special provision has been made for the safeguarding of minorities and the economically backward sections of the people. Temples have been thrown open, schools and colleges may not restrict admissions, and places in the administration from the position of Cabinet Minister, both central and provincial, to clerk, have been reserved for Moslems, Christians and depressed classes.

The great concern that Mahatma Gandhi felt about the condition of the villages and the economic betterment of the villagers has inspired the new government to plan multipurpose schemes to improve agricultural conditions and raise the standard of living of the farmers.

Three fourths of the population of India is agricultural, and therefore all irrigation projects that will bring more land under the plough, stop soil erosion, improve agriculture through artificial manures and new farming methods must necessarily raise the general standard of living. The damming of some of the large rivers and the plans for hydroelectric power are being carried on energetically. Alongside these schemes, a plan for the basic education of the masses is being framed to raise the intellectual level of the people.

Mahatma Gandhi's influence will live long after him. May India be worthy in the future of the greatness, both spiritual and mental, of the man whom she proudly claims today as the Father of the Nation.

Revived Black Market Hurts West Germany

By Brack Curry
Associated Press Staff Writer

BERLIN, Jan. 29—The black market is booming again in western Germany, lapping up grain and meat and threatening an acute food shortage.

Despite bumper crops and heavy grain imports, some slashes in the bread ration are being announced. American officials warn that the resurgence of black marketing in food will retard western Germany's recovery—a keystone of the European Recovery Program—by hoisting prices and spawning new shortages.

Philip J. Raup, director of the United States Military Government's food and agriculture group, says:

"The black market is a degree of luxury that Germany cannot afford. The Germans are behaving as if they were in good condition. Germany does not yet appreciate that she is poor.

"The food situation is infinitely worse here than in England. Yet the Germans are eating better than the English. Better bakery products, for example, are on sale in western Germany today than in London."

Diverted to Meat

GRAIN needed for bread is being poured into livestock for sale on the black market, he points out. Grain is seeping into the black market for milling as white bread. (Only one-fifth of the official bread ration is in white.)

Farmers are feeding grain to chickens and peddling the eggs on the black market, Raup says. Other farmers are holding back their grain in the hope of getting higher prices later. Last October, German officials granted a 25 per cent increase in grain prices.

In Bavaria, American Military Government officials say 3000 tons of meat disappeared into the black market in three months. And some German officials estimate as much as 100,000 tons of meat slithered into illegal channels in western Germany last year.

How much grain is being diverted from human mouths to animals? Raup estimates 10 per cent of the total grain crop. And western Germany's grain production is approaching the good prewar average of about five million metric tons.

Grain delivery quotas to the states from the 1948 crop were set at only 25 per cent above last year despite the 40 per cent larger crop. Even so, bread grain deliveries have fallen 5 per cent below last year's, Raup says.

'Premium' on Bread

ON top of its excellent harvest, western Germany is receiving 980 million dollars of food imports in the year ending June 30, 1949. This includes 3,450,000 tons of bread grains.

Six per cent of these food imports were paid for with German exports. But for 94 per cent, western Germany has not had to give up anything in return. They were paid for by the American and British governments or were brought in under the ERP.

So western Germany is impaled on this dilemma: An excellent crop year, moderate delivery quotas, a heavy volume of grain imports and—some cuts in the bread ration with more in prospect.

And the average German can't be sure of getting even his official bread and meat ration. Wheat bread, for example, has an official ceiling price equal to 21 cents a loaf. But the housewife often must pay double to induce her grocer to produce a loaf from under the counter.

Meat is even harder to get legally. Butchers sell it without coupons at black market prices, according to the commerce branch of the Anglo-American bipartite control office. Meat commonly sells at a price five times above ceiling.

German officials last year clamped a ceiling price equal to 9 cents each on eggs. Eggs promptly disappeared from the legal market. Now Germans pay triple or more on the black market for each egg—or do without eggs.

Black Market Ebbed

RAUP stresses that "for the first time since the war the bread ration could be guaranteed if the Germans would turn in their crops. The situation looked very rosy last August and September."

At that time the black market in Germany probably was at its lowest ebb. For three years after the war, black marketeers flourished. But currency reform last June dealt them a mighty blow.

With the worthless Hitler Reichsmarks wiped out and replaced by a new currency, goods suddenly appeared in stores. New shops opened. Restaurants sprang up. The worker could buy legally those goods which could only be found in the black market before the currency exchange.

And farmers—for a while—were willing to sell their products for the new currency, which they could take to stores and buy what they needed.

Then came the boost in grain prices, rumors of further increases and the vista of easy profits through withholding grain or feeding it to animals or poultry for sale to the black market.

Says Raup: "We know the grain is there. Even the Germans admit this." He adds that western Germany "will face an extremely acute problem this year if the potato and grain crops decrease."

Refugees Jam Towns Behind Arabs' Lines

By Max Boyd
Associated Press Staff Writer

GAZA, Palestine, Jan. 29—Forty-six Arab families which fled Holy Land fighting are jammed into a barnlike building the size of a modest American home.

The 300 people who live in this former British army barracks have hardly enough room to lie down. Families are separated from neighbors only by 5-foot partitions of loose rocks and burlap bags. On frequent cold, rainy days the air is heavy with smoke from fires on the concrete floor. At night the refugees sleep on the floor, protected to some extent by mats and comforters from Egypt.

This concentration of refugees is the heaviest observed by an Associated Press correspondent during a survey of towns and refugee camps in the Egyptian-held part of southern Palestine. Several other barracks are crowded almost as badly.

Refugees also are packed into the cells of a former British prison, and some are living in caves. Others, more fortunate, are sheltered by 2450 tents supplied by the United Nations, the Egyptian army and the Red Crescent (the Arabic Red Cross). Homes in Arabic towns like Gaza and Khan Yunis are bulging with additional thousands.

Fraction of Total

EGYPTIAN army representatives estimate there are 225,000 refugees behind the Egyptian lines in this part of southern Palestine. They place the number in Gaza at 70,000 and count 95,000 more at Khan Yunis, a town which normally numbers 12,000. Special camps and the towns of Rafah and Deir El Balah account for the rest.

The refugees on the southern front are less than half of the total for whom the U. N. has pledged 29 million dollars and actually advanced 5 million dollars until member governments contribute the larger sum. Estimates of the number displaced by the Palestine conflict range between 500,000 and 750,000. Most are Arabs.

Townspeople as well as farmers and Bedouin tribesmen are among the refugees. Old people, children and pregnant women are numerous in every camp.

The refugees are living mainly on contributions from the Red Cross, the Red Crescent, the Arab Council and the U. N. In the camps, their principal food is half a pound of flour per day. In towns, the flour ration is less.

Egyptian authorities in charge of the refugees say additional tents are needed more than anything else. Clothes, sugar, more wheat, cooking oil and canned goods are listed as other prime needs, as well as medical supplies.

Griffis Speeds Aid

UNDER the direction of Capt. Mohamed Wahid El Dine Mahmoud, refugee officer for the Egyptian army, central baking ovens have been established in each camp. The baker charges 1 piaster (about 4 cents) to bake 20 flat loaves; if a family has no money, he takes one of the 20 loaves instead.

Representatives of the Egyptian Ministry of Public Health report that all refugees in the sector have been inoculated against cholera, typhus and typhoid.

The flow of U. N. supplies into the area is increasing gradually under the direction of Stanton Griffis, who recently took leave as United States Ambassador to Cairo to head the U. N. refugee relief organization.

The American Friends Service Committee (Quakers), designated by Griffis to administer U. N. relief in southern Palestine, has been assembling experienced relief workers in Egypt. Delbert E. Replogle left his business in Ridgewood, N. J., to head this staff. His assistants include Dr. Medo Zaki, dean of an Egyptian school of social service, several Americans, Britons and Swedes.

Berlin Papers Scoop Kremlin on Policy

By Marguerite Higgins

BERLIN, Jan. 29.—This strategic island behind the Iron Curtain has not only become Europe's most sensitive weather vane of East-West relations but probably the western world's most fruitful listening post on Soviet foreign policy.

This facet of this infinitely complex city derives for one thing from the fact that the chief Soviet newspaper here, Taeglische Rundschau, official organ of the Soviet military administration, speaks with authority equal to that of Pravda, the Communist Party organ published in Moscow. Rundschau, in fact, can pronounce policy on many topics that may be taboo in the Moscow paper because of its large domestic circulation.

Many of the key Russian newspapers, including Pravda, the Literary Gazette (the organ of the Union of Soviet Writers), Crocodile (a satiric journal), Culture and Life, Soviet Woman and the like are delivered at Russian book stores in Berlin within a day or two after their appearance in Moscow.

For this reason, uncensored western correspondents stationed in Berlin can sometimes cull a story from these papers and send it out before the heavily censored correspondents in Moscow. In the case of the culture magazines, particularly, there is a rich store of material which Berlin correspondents can report more freely than those in Moscow.

London Listens In

THIS situation has prompted the London Daily Express, for example, to set up a bureau in Berlin to cover the Soviet Union. The head of this bureau is Peter Burchett, who compiles his observations in a weekly column called "Window on Russia."

As well as weighty debates on the worth of various musical and scientific and artistic phases of Russian life, Burchett turns up such odd but significant items as the fact that a single recipe in Soviet Woman on the preparation of cabbage calls for the use of twice as much butter and four times as much cheese as an English housewife gets in a week's ration.

The Russian newspapers are sold at the main Soviet book store, situated at the Potsdamer Platz, the intersection point of the British, American and Russian sectors of Berlin.

But more important than the Moscow papers to diplomats in Berlin is the policy outlined daily here in Taeglische Rundschau. A spectacular example is the comparison of Rundschau and Pravda in their treatment of the China crisis.

Between October and January 12, Pravda printed only two short items on the progress of the Communists in China. One was a four-line notice on the fall of Mukden and the other a small mention of the fall of Kagan.

Rundschau, in contrast, not only carried long dispatches describing the Communist triumphs but topped this off with a long editorial firmly giving Mao Tse-tung, the Chinese Communist leader, a place among the national leaders favored by Moscow.

Rundschau was moved to this elaboration of its ideas concerning Mao because of "talk in the United States that Mao might be a second Tito." The editorial said that Americans spreading such talk were "merely propagandists, out to delude the United States people."

Sokolovsky the Seer

THE FUNCTION of this Red army newspaper as an advance herald of Soviet foreign policy became outstandingly clear in 1947 just before the final foreign ministers' conference held by the Big Four.

At that time, Marshal Vassili Sokolovsky, Russian military governor in Soviet-occupied Germany, gave a lengthy interview to the Soviet-controlled press in Berlin. In it he outlined accurately and in detail the line Foreign Minister Vyacheslav Molotov took on the matter of Germany at the Big Four conference.

This same pattern of having General Sokolovsky cue the propaganda line has been repeated often. On October 1, 1948, for example, the Russian commander gave another interview and foretold precisely what Russia's position would be when the Berlin question came before the United Nations.

The Berlin crisis also provided Rundschau with a historic role. It was this newspaper which gave the tipoff on the blockade. This happened last January, when the newspaper first denounced the Western Allies as partitioners of Germany and added that "there is no room in Berlin for the adherents of the partition of Germany." After that the paper's demand for the exit of the Western Allies became shriller and shriller, reaching its peak with the announcement of the blockade.

It may seem strange that the Soviet Union should choose to make known much of its foreign policy in a Red army newspaper, printed in German and distributed in Berlin and the occupation zone. But there are good reasons for it.

In Berlin, the Taeglische Rundschau speaks not only to the Germans but to top representatives of the three Western Allies, and to military missions from both east and west. Here in Berlin it has access to the excellent German technical skill in putting its paper together. It has an unlimited supply of newsprint. And it doesn't have to worry about the reaction of its own people to the news it prints.

'Atom Prospectors' Defy the Cold

By Jack R. Ryan
Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Got any prospecting blood in your veins? Like to find a fortune in the ground? Yearn to go down in history as a pioneer '49er of the Atomic Age?

Then scout around and find yourself a strike of at least 20 tons of good-grade uranium ore. If you do, grateful Uncle Sam will send you a check for $10,000 for your contribution to national security—and pay you many times that amount for the ore itself.

Aside from a grubstake, what you'll need most for this prospecting job is a Geiger-Mueller counter (cost: $100 up) and plenty of energy and patience.

The Geiger counter is for detecting radioactive minerals, chief of which is uranium.

If you find a deposit of ore that makes the counter's dial swing, the Atomic Energy Commission will be happy to look over a 10-pound specimen to see if you've hit the jackpot.

Undeterred by Snow

BUT don't get the idea it's going to be easy. Since the commission first put up that $10,000 prize and guaranteed high prices for uranium ore last April, hundreds of prospectors have been shipping samples to the Raw Materials Laboratories at Grand Junction, Colo., and New York for analysis.

In fact, right now when deep snowdrifts cover many of the most promising areas of the West, the specimens are still pouring into the New York lab at the rate of 11 a day.

Every sample, even if it's obviously nothing more than a hunk of lava, is acknowledged at once by mail. Then when the geologists and chemists get to it on the waiting list, the sample is analyzed.

He Gets a Report

FIRST they take its radioactivity pulse with an intricate laboratory version of the Geiger counter, studded with flashing lights, dials and stop-watches. If the mineral's "beta count" is too low, the technicians usually classify the specimen carefully and send the results back to the prospector so he'll know what it was he found, even if it wasn't uranium.

But if the radiometric report looks promising, the sample gets a thorough analysis that may involve polarizing microscopes, magnetic separators, X-rays, flourescent tests under ultraviolet lamps—or even a machine called a "super-panner." It does in a hurry just what the oldtime prospector did so laboriously a century ago when he panned gold in a creek bottom.

The New York laboratory receives specimens from everywhere except the Colorado plateau area of western Colorado, Utah, Arizona and New Mexico. The most important uranium-bearing mineral in this tableland zone is bright yellow carnotite, and carnotite samples are sent to the commission's laboratory at Grand Junction, Colo.

However, pitchblende—the black and very heavy ore from which radium is extracted—is still the No. 1 source of uranium. Its biggest known deposits are in the Belgian Congo, Czechoslovakia and in the Great Bear Lake region of Canada.

But discoveries of one or more of the 115 known uranium-bearing minerals also have been reported in California, Alabama, Alaska, Australia, Greenland, several countries of South America and Europe, Madagascar, Mozambique, Burma, China and elsewhere.

The AEC plans to publish a prospectors' guide within the next few weeks to aid uranium seekers.

3 Outstanding Men Symbolize the 'New Chicago'

By Luke Carroll

CHICAGO, Jan. 29.—"Twenty-six" and "Hooligan" and those who enjoy these fascinating dice games haven't been bothered too much. The same can be said about horse betting parlors and the girlie shows. It's also true that much remains to be done in improving the city and State services.

Yet there have been changes in the political picture that are almost revolutionary for Chicago and Illinois.

No better illustration of what has happened could be found than at the recent induction of Adlai E. Stevenson as the thirty-first Governor of the State. Next to him on the platform at Springfield were the other two officials who epitomize the change—Martin H. Kennelly, Mayor of Chicago, and Paul H. Douglas, junior United States Senator from Illinois.

The fact that these three men, wholly different in every way except for membership in the Democratic Party and a hearty distaste for political machines, were elected with the assistance of the Democratic machine here, is one of the most significant phases of the move.

A Far-Flung Trio

TWO YEARS AGO, the three men were widely separated. Kennelly was running his moving and warehouse business here. Stevenson, whose grandfather was Vice President under Grover Cleveland, was with the American delegation to the United Nations. Douglas, who had had one brief fling in politics in the city council, had returned to the quiet of the campus as professor of political science at the University of Chicago.

Jacob M. Arvey, a power in Chicago politics but usually a behind-the-scenes operator, had returned from Army duty in the Pacific. He took over the task of running the Chicago Democratic organization, a job which had been handled by Edward J. Kelly at the same time that he tried to run the city as mayor.

One of Arvey's first pronouncements was that the time had come to end the spoils system in government. His whole theory of civic duty had been changed, he said, during his hitch in the service.

At the same time "Boss" Kelly announced he would not be a candidate for reelection, so the Democratic machine was looking for a new candidate.

Arvey sounded out some of the city's outstanding businessmen, offering the full support of the Democratic Party with no strings attached. Kennelly was reluctant to leave business for his first political job until Marshall Field, publisher of the Chicago Sun, and other leaders persuaded him to run. The result was a tremendous victory.

A Stubborn Council

KENNELLY has gone about his new job much in the same manner as he ran the warehouse company. Although undramatic, he has accomplished much despite the less than enthusiastic support of a city council that clings, for the most part, to the old way of doing business.

His achievements include expansion of the Civil Service system; creation of a central purchasing authority; complete renovation of the city's Traffic Courts and installation of a "fix-proof" ticket system; purchase and improvement by the city of the transit facilities, and fundamental changes in the school system to remove it entirely from politics.

To get these improvements approved by the city council, the mayor has had to compromise along the way. Everywhere for example, Twenty-six and Hooligan are played. In Twenty-six, the object is to throw a selected number at least 26 times in 13 throws of the 10 dice in a cup. The pay-off is in tokens which can be exchanged for merchandise, usually liquid. In Hooligan, the gambler must score a total of 83 or more points in a designated number of throws. The odds range upward from 4 to 1 and the bets are usually limited to 25 or 50 cents.

The girlie shows continue in all sections. Designed primarily to attract convention visitors, these performances go far beyond the New York burlesque of pre-LaGuardia days. From time to time the authorities crack down on these shows, but the effect is negligible.

Working on Housing

THE MAYOR has made little progress in public housing, one of the most needed improvements here. But he is working for such a program, and his great tenacity gives reason to hope.

He has not been able to find money to improve the street cleaning department to a point where collections are made oftener than once a week; neither has he done anything to provide the residents with better ambulance service than police patrol wagons equipped with stretchers.

In the city council, the roadblocks are formed by Democrats. There is reason to believe that Governor Stevenson will encounter the same difficulties as Mayor Kennelly, but with the roadblocks formed by the Republican members of the Legislature, the sole survivors of the Republican State machine.

Adlai (pronounced Adlay) Stevenson, who is 48, is slightly built and medium tall. His nose is prominent and wrinkles of good humor frame his sharp gray eyes. He is beginning to stoop a little and his straight, black hair is receding rapidly.

When he talks he sounds like Ronald Colman, especially on the radio, and to some this creates a picture of an intellectual snob. The picture is completely inaccurate, and he proved it during the campaign when he translated the language of international diplomacy into chatter easily understood by farm hands.

Now, however, he must deal with State Senators and Representatives, many of whom are long accustomed to back-room deals and horse trades.

Towering War Hero

SENATOR DOUGLAS has long been a source of irritation to the professional politicians here, and it was a surprise when the Chicago organization leaders went to him hat in hand to ask that he run for the Senate against C. Wayland Brooks.

After he had assured himself that he would be given a free hand, the tall, gray-haired former alderman threw himself into the campaign with tremendous vigor. In his usual outspoken manner, he not only told his audiences what to expect from him, but he also guaranteed that no commitments had been made.

His record in the last war helped. Fifty years old, he enlisted as a private in the Marines. When he came home with the rank of lieutenant colonel, he wore two Purple Hearts, his left arm hung useless at his side and his 6-foot 2-inch frame had shrunk from 230 to 165 pounds.

There are many cynics here who remain unconvinced, after two years, that machine politicians can work hand in hand with outstanding civic leaders without one or the other suffering. Some say that this most unusual marriage was arranged only because the professional politicians concluded that good government and good politics coincided.

In line with this theory, the cynics point out that the professional politicians have not extended this sort of alliance below the top rungs of the political ladder. The true test will come when candidates for minor offices—the city council and the State Legislature and similar posts—are named.

Virginia Gets Copy of First Printed Code

Special Dispatch to The Post

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA., Jan. 29.—Virginia's first printed code of laws, the 1662 "Lawes of Virginia," can now be found in the Commonwealth itself.

One of the six known copies in this country is now on display at the University of Virginia's Tracy W. McGregor Library. It was purchased at auction at Sotheby's, in London, in November, and has just been delivered.

The other five copies are in libraries throughout the country, including the Library of Congress in Washington.

These laws were issued during the Governorship of Sir William Berkeley and were sent to England for printing, because there were no presses in Virginia. Fifty years earlier there was a compilation of the military orders of Governor Dale under the title, "For the Colony in Virginia Britannia. Laws Divine, Morall and Martiall," but these are not considered laws. The 1662 code was the first compilation of the acts of what is now the oldest legislative assembly in the world.

Strange and interesting are some of the acts. Postal regulations are under the heading, "Publique Letters, how to be Conveyed." This act imposes a fine of 350 pounds of tobacco for each default in immediate delivery of letters "superscribed for the use of his Majesty, or the Publique." To facilitate enforcement, the recipient of letters was ordered to "endorse the day and hour he received them," with this proviso: "And where any person in the Family . . . can write."

Possibly to remedy such a state of affairs, under "Provision for a College" it was enacted: "That for the advance of Learning, Education of Youth, Supply of the Ministry, and Promotion of Piety, there be Land taken up or purchased for a Colledge and Free School, and that there be with as much speed as may be convenient housing Erected thereon for entertainment of Students and Scholars."

In view of the reference to piety, "entertainment" presumably had a narrower meaning in those days.

The Laws of Virginia:

XXXVII.

Tryals by Juryes.

WHereas the Seventieth Act made in 1642. and continued by the Ninety-first Act, 1657. seems to restrain both Plaintiff and Defendant from Trial by Juryes, unless the Plaintiff in his Declaration, or the Defendant upon Entry of his appearance, do desire the same; which restriction is quite contrary to the Law of England, by which, the Tryal of all matters of Fact, is as appropriate and inherent in the Jury, as matter of Law is in the Judges: for which cause, and that we may in all our Tryals come as near as may be to the Laws of England, by which, we are to be governed as our present capacities will admit: Be it enacted, That, every Morning the Court sits, whether the General or County-Courts, the Sheriff of the County in which it sits, shall impannel a Jury to attend the Court that day, to try such Cause, as the Court shall find proper to be referred to them; and that whenever a Jury is sent out, an Officer sworn to that purpose shall keep them from meat and drink, until they have agreed on their Verdict.

Hung juries were probably rare in seventeenth century Virginia. This section of the 1662 code decrees that a court officer "shall keep them from meat and drink, until they have agreed on their verdict"

Mexico Forced to Boost Its Wheat Yield

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

MEXICO has increased its wheat production about 25 per cent, Carlos M. Cinta, general manager of Nacional Distribuidora y Reguladora, and delegate to the International Wheat Conference, said last week.

The increase, Cinta said, was necessary because of lack of a guarantee that Mexico would always be able to buy wheat at a fair price in the world market. Mexico, he reported, formerly was forced to import between 260,000 and 300,000 tons, but this year will require only 200,000 tons from outside.

However, Mexico would prefer to use the land now being sown to wheat for other purposes. Wheat is not an efficient crop in Mexico—it could benefit more by raising corn or beans. Mexican wheat is of a soft variety and must be mixed with hard wheat from more northern areas to produce good bread.

Hereafter, Cinta believes, considerable of Mexico's wheat purchases will be from Canada or other exporters other than the United States. Mexico will buy where it can sell its products—such as cotton and cotton textiles. In those lines it is a competitor, not a customer, of the United States.

Cinta brought his young son with him to the wheat conference, and has entered him in a Warrenton school to start what he plans to be six years of education in this country.

Atomized Fertilizer

GOVERNMENT scientists in all parts of the country have been doctoring fertilizers, both artificial and manure, with atomic energy isotopes to find out how, when and where growing crops use them.

Last week they told about their discoveries to the fertilizer industry—the men who make and sell plant food.

About 10 per cent of phosphorus fertilizer is actually used by plants, Dr. W. L. Nelson, an Agriculture Department soil scientist, reported.

"This low efficiency of utilization emphasizes the importance of fertilizer placement studies," Nelson said.

N. S. Hall, soil scientist of the North Carolina Agricultural Experiment Station, reported that weather conditions affected the use of phosphorus. Experiments were made with barley, wheat and sugar beets in Colorado, corn in Iowa and North Carolina, ladino clover and orchard grass mixture in New York and cotton and tobacco in North Carolina.

Phosphorus placed as "side dressing" at the time of first cultivation in dry areas was not utilized at all by growing plants, he said. But used the same way in wet sections, it was as good as if mixed in the plant row.

Phosphorus applied to the soil was absorbed by corn early in the growing season. Later, however, corn absorbs little phosphorus from fertilizer, indicating that fertilizers placed late are of little value. On the other hand, potatoes depend heavily upon phosphorus all through the season. Nelson attributed the difference to the type of root system—the corn developing more extensive root systems than potatoes.

Russia Follows Suit

THE change in Argentina's attitude toward a world wheat agreement—it sent a delegate this year, but only an observer before—is reportedly due to a shakeup in the Peron cabinet at Buenos Aires.

Miguel Miranda, who virtually ran Argentina's economy as president of the National Economic Council, was ousted 10 days ago and officially resigned Wednesday, giving ill health as the reason. Immediately upon his ouster, Argentina announced the appointment of a delegate to the wheat conference, Dr. Juan Scarpati, counselor of the Washington Embassy. Additional members of the delegation are expected to arrive soon.

Other delegates to the conference attribute Russia's sudden determination to send a delegation to the change of front by Argentina. The Russian announcement followed that of Argentina by 24 hours, and the Russian group was here within five days. The Soviet, some believe, didn't want to be the only wheat exporter to be left out of a world agreement.

McGrath Plays Healer, Eyes on 1950

By Jack Bell
Associated Press Staff Writer

THAT man you see treading lightly over political eggs is Chairman J. Howard McGrath of the Democratic National Committee.

McGrath, 45-year-old supervising architect of President Truman's November election victory, has an even tougher job now. It's his task to keep his many-faceted party operating as something of a unit, so that when the 1950 congressional elections roll around the Democrats will have a legislative record they can talk about.

With this in mind, McGrath has set out to heal the political wounds brought about by the Southern revolt against Mr. Truman's civil rights program.

It will have to be a quick process. The President's determination to push his anti-poll tax, antilynching and fair employment practices commission proposals is certain to pitch another battle with the Southerners before this session of Congress ends.

Canny Republicans have been trying to get the fighting started early. They maneuvered to push a filibuster-killing rule change before the Senate. The Democratic-controlled Rules Committee blocked this. There is evidence that McGrath had a hand in that action.

McGRATH also apparently has been busy trying to woo some followers of Henry A. Wallace back into the fold. He has made it plain that Wallace himself won't find any further welcome in the party unless he repents—which he isn't expected to do. But Wallace's running mate, Senator Glen Taylor of Idaho, is back in Democratic good graces—at least outwardly. Taylor got the same seniority and committee treatment as his Democratic colleagues.

Some Democrats outside Congress went a long way before the convention trying to get Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as a replacement for Mr. Truman. They, too, have been told that all will be forgotten.

In their case, the test for future party favors is whether they actively supported the President after he was nominated.

Even that test seemingly isn't being applied to some of the Southerners. Except for isolated instances, McGrath has shown no inclination to crack down on the patronage of some of those who strayed into the States' Rights ranks.

There is no love lost between the national chairman and Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, who headed the States' Rights ticket. But even Thurmond, as a Governor, got an invitation to the President's inaugural.

Senator Ellender (D., La.), who had been marked by some Truman supporters for punishment, hasn't felt any yet. In fact, Ellender recently was consulted in the filling of a long list of 1950 census-taking jobs in his State.

Ellender's Defense

ELLENDER claims that State party rules required him to support the Thurmond-Wright ticket if he was to be a nominee for reelection to the Senate. The Louisiana Senator's chief sin—from the Administration viewpoint—was his failure to plug and to attend a New Orleans rally at which Vice President Barkley spoke during the campaign.

Senator Eastland (D., Miss.), who openly backed the Thurmond-Wright ticket, may not be consulted about patronage matters. But there have been no signs the Administration is going out of its way to slap him down.

Senator McClellan of Arkansas incurred White House displeasure last spring when he said the Democrats couldn't win with President Truman as their nominee. Yet he came out with three choice committee spots in the Senate reorganization.

In the House, balking Southerners generally escaped punishment. However, Representative Rankin (D., Miss.) lost his place on the Committee Investigating Un-American Activities. Under a new ruling, he couldn't have that and become chairman of the House Veterans Committee.

Puerto Rico Isle Again Is Pawn Of War Games

TO SUGAR and cattle add a new major industry for the little known United States Island of Vieques—the business of hemisphere defense.

Satellite of Puerto Rico, Vieques long ago had its share of fighting and gunplay as a hideout for rebellious Indians and, later, pillaging buccaneers. The eastern half of the 20-mile-long island is now permanently dedicated to Navy maneuvers, and will shortly repeat its 1948 role as an "enemy" held beach in amphibious tests of combined service forces. Participation of Canadian army units this year underlines the hemisphere character of the operations, the National Geographic Society comments.

Vieques has for half a century been a United States isle. Somewhat smaller than the District of Columbia in area, it lies 8 miles east of Puerto Rico.

Like smaller Culebra Island to the north, and Mona Island, 50 miles west of Puerto Rico, Vieques is one of the 77 municipal districts under the Puerto Rican government.

Kefauver's Appointment

The designation of Senator Estes Kefauver to be chairman of the District Home Rule Subcommittee is the most favorable step toward self-government for this disfranchised community since the new Congress convened. Mr. Kefauver is eminently qualified for this work. As one of the architects of the reorganization of Congress, while he was a member of the House, he knows the urgency of relieving Congress of its burdens as city council for Washington. As a profound believer in democracy, he understands the yearning of this community to direct its own municipal affairs. And as an astute student of government, his work in this field is certain to command respect among District residents as well as among his colleagues in Congress.

No less significant is the fact that Senator Kefauver's appointment reemphasizes a genuine interest in our home-rule problem on the part of Chairman McGrath of the Senate District Committee. So fine an appointment must be interpreted as a go-ahead signal to the home-rule movement. Indeed, the other members of the subcommittee, Senators Matthew M. Neely and Margaret Chase Smith, are also committed to the principle of local self-government for the District. We have no doubt that this trio, with the help of President Truman and Senator McGrath, can bring to fruition the District's dream of managing its own local affairs once more.

It is to be hoped that the subcommittee will resist the temptation to sponsor another elaborate study of the home-rule problem. The studies that have been made in recent years are numerous. All the data is available to enable the subcommittee, with the assistance of local civic groups, to write an appropriate bill for enactment at the present session.

Fortunately, the problem has been simplified by the President's request for authority to reorganize the District government along with Federal executive agencies. If this authority is given, the home-rule measure can be devoted solely to a grant of self-governing powers and the creation of machinery to put the new government into effect. Details of reorganization can be left to executive action. That would have the great advantage of not crystallizing the structure of the local government in the proposed home-rule charter. The prospect of simplifying the charter should also enable the Kefauver Subcommittee to get a bill ready for action more promptly. That is a matter of great importance—as indicated by the loss of the home-rule bill in the Eightieth Congress for want of time to complete the debate on the House floor.

Gieseking's Departure

Walter Gieseking, the eminent German pianist, has been hounded out of the United States by demonstrators who feel he worked with extreme Nazis. Previous investigations of his particular case, however, don't offer much help in weighing the evidence. Originally blacklisted as a former Nazi by American Military Government in 1945, he was cleared two years later. The State Department, which gave him an American visa in Paris, says no information was developed to show he was a Nazi. But the Immigration Service, when he arrived in New York, thought there was enough to warrant a full inquiry, and more information came to light at the hearing which Mr. Gieseking decided not to go through with. One can say, at least, that the matter of Mr. Gieseking's admissibility as a visiting artist has been very badly managed.

But the broader question is still to be faced. It is involved equally in the case of Wilhelm Furtwaengler, who has recently canceled his contract to appear as guest conductor with the Chicago Symphony. Like Gieseking, Furtwaengler has been accused of Nazi sympathies, and in both cases musicians on this side threatened to have nothing to do with orchestras or concert series that sponsored them. It is the same broad question first put by the return to this country of Kirsten Flagstad, whose misdeed was to have gone back to Norway in 1941 and spent the war at the side of her notoriously collaborationist husband.

How long are Americans going to continue denying the artistry of former enemies because, in effect, they did not openly oppose their own governments? We would, to be sure, think the more of Mr. Furtwaengler and Mr. Gieseking, as we do of Mr. Toscanini, had they declined to make music at all during the Nazi regime. We should likewise have a better opinion of the current Soviet composers if they would stand up for freedom of artistic expression instead of toadying to the musically illiterate pontiffs of Marxist-Leninist-Stalinist doctrine. But musicians and other artists are not, perhaps unfortunately, less susceptible than other people to what passes in their own countries as patriotism. To expect them to act the role of traitors—as it would be interpreted under totalitarianism—is simply to expect too much—more than we would expect or tolerate in American artists in time of war.

ECA "Watchdog" Report

The report of the joint congressional committee established under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1948 acknowledges that "the workings of the act during the last nine months have contributed much to the economic rehabilitation and political stability of western Europe." However, that handsome tribute to the value of the work done by ECA is followed by sharp criticism of specific policies and suggestions for change that would, in our opinion, hamper rather than promote the progress toward further recovery.

The committee undoubtedly shows sound judgment in emphasizing the importance of currency stabilization in accelerating European recovery. But its criticism of ECA for putting primary emphasis on supplying the means of production in Europe rather than currency reform indicates a lack of appreciation of the delicate nature of the problems confronting that organization. In calling for a more direct approach to currency stabilization the committee apparently means that the ECA ought to outline a program of currency reform and make its acceptance a condition of receiving aid.

Sound currencies cannot be insured by laying down ultimatums. They have to be based on systems of taxation that prevent continued inflation. And the first requisite of an adequate system of taxation is a domestic economy strong enough to supply the Government with the needed funds. In stressing the commodity, as distinguished from the monetary approach, therefore, the ECA has really been attacking the root cause of currency instability. Moreover, advice on questions of currency reform has to be offered tactfully. Even the most diplomatically worded suggestions that reflect on the political competence of foreign governments are resented, as experience has shown.

The committee also criticizes the ECA for making loans to impecunious countries and suggests that it might be better to put all aid on a grant basis until participating countries have recovered sufficiently to qualify as borrowers on a more normal loan basis. As a matter of fact, Congress itself is responsible for the emphasis put on loans, since it provided that only 4.3 billion dollars of appropriated funds could take the form of grants. That arrangement encouraged resort to loans as a means of making a larger sum available for use. What Congress should do is to leave the ECA free to decide whether aid should be given in the form of grants or loans in any given case.

The committee's suggestion that further foreign aid appropriations might be adjusted to take into account acceptance of a revised reparations program by recipient countries is thoroughly mischievous. Administrator Hoffman should have been praised instead of criticized for his success in halting dismantlement of German plants through diplomatic approaches to France and Great Britain. However ill-advised the dismantling program may be, the United States is party to international agreements respecting reparations that we are pledged to observe unless modifications are made with the assent of all concerned. If Congress were to swing a club over the heads of ECA participants by making acceptance of a revised reparations program a condition of aid, the friction and delay that the committee seeks to avoid would be dangerously intensified.

Committee attacks on the ECA for the meager results of its strategic stockpiling program betray a perverted conception of the purpose of the recovery program. The report actually states that the provisions relating to stockpiling "appear to reflect the intent of Congress that the countries of Europe should emphasize in their recovery programs the production of strategic materials and that the United States should share in this production as an offset to the depletion of its own reserves of materials which has been brought about by the war and by our foreign-aid deliveries." That declaration is grist for the mills of Russian propaganda agencies. If it were a true statement of purpose, the United States could, with justice, be denounced as a hypocritical, self-seeking nation intent on building up its military strength under the guise of launching a program for furtherance of European economic recovery. Instead of giving ECA increased responsibility for this stockpiling program, as the committee recommends, such activities should be transferred to a separate agency entirely divorced from the aid program, in accordance with the wishes of ECA officials.

While the committee has "put the finger" on the most controversial features of the ECA program, its criticism appears to have been misdirected. As a result its recommendations for changes in policies and procedures also miss the mark.

Small Potatoes

The Department of Agriculture has seized upon an intriguing explanation for the decline of the potato. This much-maligned vegetable seemingly has been the victim of slim waistlines and overzealous dietitians, with the result that per capita consumption has fallen from a healthy 195 pounds in 1910 to a mere 118 in 1948. The department, of course, has something of a vested interest in promoting potato-eating. It has been stuck with enormous quantities of potatoes at a price-support cost of some 200 million dollars since the war, and potato production seems to go up as acreage allotments go down.

We dare say there is some merit to the contention that it is popular ideas about reducing, rather than the potatoes themselves, that have been causing the trouble. For example, a medium-sized baked potato contains only 100 calories. This is twice as much as a cup of tomatoes, but only half as much as four stewed prunes—and only two sevenths as much as a piece of apple pie. Actually, potatoes are from 78 to 85 per cent water, with a little carboydrate, vitamin C and vegetable protein thrown in. It's not the potaoes, but the gravy that goes with them, that strains the belt.

Nevertheless, we suspect that the Department of Agriculture has invited a pretty mess by trying to undermine a popular notion. It's like finding out suddenly that spinach isn't good for you. We await the discovery by the bread lobby, butter industry, sugar magnates and whipped-cream trust that they too have formulas for the streamlined figure.

Reorganization's Toll

Undoubtedly former President Hoover knew whereof he spoke when he referred to the "cries of anguish" that will greet the forthcoming report of his Commission on Reorganization of the Executive Branch of the Government. Any reorganization plan that is meaningful must necessarily be ruthless. It is logical that the Hoover report will call for the elimination of Federal jobs and Federal agencies, and that it will invade the cherished provinces of many an administrator. Of course the persons likely to be affected can always muster plenty of reasons for maintaining the status quo.

It is to the credit of President Truman that he seems disposed to treat the Hoover recommendations with the seriousness that the painstaking study warrants. He has requested sweeping reorganization powers to enable him to carry executive reforms into effect. These powers should be granted, and there is no reason in principle for excluding certain regulatory agencies from attention, as requested by Democratic congressional leaders. We do not know what, if anything, the Hoover Commission has in mind for those agencies, but certainly there is nothing sacrosanct about their operations.

Neither, for that matter, is there anything sacrosanct about the Hoover report. The test of its validity will be the reasonableness of its recommendations. If there can be no excuse for yielding to the wounded pleas of entrenched bureaucracy, neither can there be justification for change merely for the sake of change—or for policy's sake. In any event, it is doubtful whether any reorganization will approach the somewhat neolithic desires of Comptroller General Lindsay Warren.

Irvine L. Lenroot

The death of former Senator Irvine L. Lenroot the other day just before his eightieth birthday brings back memories of an era that already seems remote. Mr. Lenroot was a power in the land during the Wilson, Coolidge and Harding Administrations. In earlier years he had been an ally of Robert M. La Follette in Republican politics in Wisconsin. It seems strange now that Mr. Lenroot, who came to be regarded as a conservative in later life, should have broken with La Follette to follow Theodore Roosevelt in 1912, while the Progressive Mr. La Follette clung to standpat President Taft. But Roosevelt had unfairly used La Follette as a stalking horse and then deserted him in favor of a third-party movement for himself. The final break between the two Wisconsin leaders came when Mr. Lenroot supported the United States' entry into World War I against Mr. La Follette's opposition.

In the subsequent fight over the League of Nations Covenant, Mr. Lenroot was a reservationist but not an irreconcilable. On the eve of President Wilson's fatal tour on behalf of the League, Mr. Lenroot went to the White House and urged the President to agree to the elimination of Article X, which committed all members of the League to the defense of the territorial integrity of all other members. The treaty providing American adherence to the League would be accepted by the Senate, Mr. Lenroot said, with that one change. Wilson remained adamant, with the result that the United States never became a member of the League.

Subsequently Mr. Lenroot fought doggedly for American adherence to the World Court. "I would rather give my support to the World Court and be defeated for reelection than to oppose it and be reelected," he said in 1926. Apparently it was that courageous and farsighted stand that defeated him in Wisconsin's isolationist climate of the mid-twenties. It was in 1920, however, that the Senator really missed the nod of fate in his direction. When Warren G. Harding appealed to him at the Republican National Convention to become his running mate in the presidential contest, Senator Lenroot hesitated and before he consented to let his name go before the convention Calvin Coolidge mustered sufficient strength to take the vice presidential nomination. Had he accepted in time to get the full strength of the kingmakers behind him, Mr. Lenroot would have become President on Harding's death.

AT THE NORTH WINDOW

Let no bird sing against this muffled glass,
No oriole, nor thrush.
Let but the one gray reconnoitering gull
Pass through this bitter canyon and return.
For now beyond the buoy the cradled born
Summons the air-transported host,
And silver-motored gulls convoy it in upon the shore.

Somewhere in vistaed blossom-trees
Ten thousand birds are singing, and spears of sun
Lie splintered on the grass. But here is siege
Phalanxed against the windowlight, with one gull
Winging out, round head bent on serious beak.

Then let no balanced spear break on this stone;
Let not one red note pierce the massive day:
Let there be no bird, but the far night singing.

Letters To The Editor

Gieseking's Ouster

Within a short recent period, there have been two closely similar incidents as to the attempted importation of German musicians—Furtwaengler as guest conductor for the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, and Gieseking under private management for an initial concert at Carnegie Hall, New York.

The charge against both of these musicians is Hitler-collaboration; and as a result of public protest, neither will make the planned appearances. We are not, as has been brazenly charged, "keeping hatred alive." We are protecting ourselves against the infiltration of those who can condone the doctrines of cruelty and hate. The two who have been rejected, might well have been the first wave of a flood.

During our early days, our few colleges were outnumbered and outclassed by institutions of the Old World. Today, the situation is reversed; and we can abandon slavish subservience to the self-advertising of arrogance—in whatsoever country such arrogance may arise. Let us look a little harder for merit in the talent of peace-loving countries, including our own.

Inaugural on Television

Eric Reisfeld (letter published January 26) complains that the television industry's presentation of the inauguration was a sad spectacle because (a) most pictures were "out-of-focus" and (b) the production lacked continuity.

As an engineer for the television industry I must speak up.

Technically speaking, the inaugural telecast was, on the whole, of as good a quality as the best television shows that have been produced. If Mr. Reisfeld saw "out-of-focus" pictures, it was the fault of the particular receiver he was watching, or else he is too hypercritical of the pictures obtained with the television system which has been standardized in this country.

As regards the ability of the cameramen, all the television cameramen in Washington have sufficient experience in photography and television to enable them to know how to obtain the best pictures possible. They do not put "out-of-focus" pictures on the air. Our standards are too high to permit us to radiate inferior pictures.

Productionwise, the inaugural telecast could have benefited from a rehearsal, if one could have been arranged. But this isn't Hollywood. We had to try to do the program right the first time, and while audiences may not have seen all the floats, they did see the outstanding features of the parade on television.

"Distinctive" Uniforms

Like many veterans of the "Old Regular Army," I have wondered why every change in design of the United States Army uniform has been a copy of the British army uniform, or so it has appeared to me.

In the AEF we adopted the "overseas cap", wrapped leggings and foreign service chevrons on the sleeve although of a distinctive design, as was the wound chevron, they appeared to be a British idea. Until now I was pleased to note that we had retained our distinctive rank insignia. There appeared in your issue of January 26 a picture of the "distinctive" United States Air Force uniform which shows the adoption of the British rank insignia for this uniform. I wonder how long it will be before United States Army personnel will "wear" sticks and officers will wear crowns as shoulder rank insignia.

Inaugural Care

I should like to express deepest gratitude to the Army doctor, two sergeants, Red Cross nurse, and gray lady who were in charge of the emergency Red Cross trailer at Constitution and Louisiana aves. during the inauguration parade.

My 6-year-old son fell over a concrete curb near the trailer and severely cut his upper lip. As we hurried toward the trailer, a sergeant came and led us inside. There everybody set to work on the little boy, giving me, the distraught mother, every assurance that he would be all right. Today he is completely healed. I cannot say enough in praise of those people who worked kindly and efficiently, not only with us but everybody who came to them for help.

Symphony Merger

During the past few weeks, there has been a good deal of talk about "combining" the Baltimore and National symphonies. Both the advocates and opponents of the idea have missed the most important and immediate result of such a move—the unemployment of at least half the musicians comprising these organizations.

Each of these two orchestras employs about 90 people. If the orchestras "combined," at most 110 people would be used. A larger orchestra is not musically desirable. What would become of the other 70 and of their families? There are barely enough symphony jobs in the country now, without eliminating an entire orchestra.

Instead of threatening these people with unemployment—the ever-present spectre of seasonal work—why not assure their futures through a Government fund? The interest from such a fund would bring peace of mind to underpaid symphony musicians, and assure the future of the orchestra. It is a grim and ironic thought that the capital of the "pocketbook of the world" is in constant danger of losing its symphony for lack of money.

Religious Education In Virginia

I would like to reply to Martha R. Atkins' letter entitled. "Religious Education in Virginia" which appeared in your issue of January 11. There are certain inaccuracies in that letter which need to be made clear.

1. The Loudoun County Committee on Religious Education has no closed meetings. This is a county-wide group of people interested in having religion taught to the children of the county. The committee meets twice a year; in the fall and in the spring. The meetings are announced in the three county papers and visitors are welcome. The officers of the county-wide group meet about once a month and even here visitors are welcome.

2. The letter went on to say that the majority of the people present at the meeting on April 22, 1948, felt that the committee should "buck" the Supreme Court ruling. On the contrary, it is the avowed purpose of the committee to abide strictly by this ruling. The writer did not mention that on April 12, 1948, the assistant attorney general of Virigina said, ". . . The mere use of public school buildings during regular school hours for nonsecretarian, noncompulsory religious instruction, under a released time plan divorced from the type of school supervision criticized in the Champaign case, would not be forbidden by the McCollum decision, in my opinion."

In the light of this opinion, plans were laid for another year's work. The Loudoun plan does not violate the above opinion of the assistant attorney general of the State of Virginia and is not under the supervision of the superintendent of schools as the article maintains. The teachers are hired by the county committee through the Virginia Council of Religious Education and their salaries are paid by voluntary subscriptions of interested citizens.

3. The suggestion by Mrs. Atkins that the teachers of religion ought to interest children in the broader field of religion; i. e., teaching the Bible as history and acquainting the children with the various religions of the world solely, naturally found no wide approval in the meeting. She was told that the seventh grade did study other religions and admitted that she hadn't known that at the time of the April 22 meeting. The curriculum for the classes in religion in the State of Virginia is set up by the Virginia Council of Churches, and is available for inspection by anyone.

We want our children to know what nazism, fascism and communism are but we most certainly don't want them to feel that anyone of these is as fine a way of government as our democracy is. That is our feeling about the religion of the Bible. We feel that it is the best religion in the world and though we want the children to know about other religions we most certainly do not want that to be the whole emphasis.

4. Finally, in reply to the idea that the taxpayer's money is being wasted because of the fact that the public school teacher is not teaching while the Bible teacher is present, I would like to say that the public school teacher is still responsible for the children not taking Bible and is still "working." In fact, if you want to take this approach to the problem there are other times as well when the teacher is not working and the taxpayer's money is being "wasted." Most schools employ a music teacher whose salary is paid, in most cases, by the Parent-Teachers Association. When that teacher comes, the public school teacher doesn't work. Should we therefore argue that music ought to be dropped from the educational experience of the growing child?

Religion has always been a part of America. Every year millions of high school seniors gather at baccalaureate services to listen to God's word. Few object to this. The Bible and the Lord's Prayer are used in the schools. Only a handful object. Prayer is used at the opening of the Senate. Scientists, philosophers and many others who formerly scorned religion are now returning to it, not any religion, but to Christianity, as the only thing which can save the world. Loudoun County will continue to sponsor religious education in the public schools as long as it is declared constitutional in the opinion of our lawmakers.

President, Loudoun County Committee on Weekday Religious Education.

Penalized Efficiency

By Andre Visson

Belgium And ERP

THERE IS an old French saying that it is dangerous to be wise when surrounded by fools! This saying is today recalled by many Belgians when they look at what is happening to their country within the framework of the European Recovery Program.

Before the ERP was even established, Belgium on her own initiative fulfilled what the recipients of American aid to Europe were asked to do. The Belgians put their financial house in order and devoted all their efforts to the increase of their production. They stabilized their currency. They halted inflation. They modernized their industrial equipment. They succeeded in 1948 in raising their industrial production 25 per cent above the 1938 level. They traveled farther than any other European country on the road of economic integration. In fact, they have set an example of integration by organizing, together with the Dutch and the Luxemburgers, the Benelux group.

In order to expand their foreign trade, they opened, even before the Marshall Plan began to function, credit for 16½ billion Belgian francs—about 350 million dollars. And out of the 250 million dollars allocated to them from ERP funds for 1948-1949, $207,500,000 was earmarked "conditional aid." This means that in exchange for the $207,500,000 that Belgium was to receive from the United States she would put at the disposal of other Marshall Plan countries an equivalent amount in Belgian francs.

IN OTHER WORDS, Belgium has always behaved as a model country under the Marshall Plan, and would have been entitled to the No. 1 reward, had the ERP administrators issued a reward for "efficiency." Belgian recovery has indeed been praised to the skies by many American and European visitors to Belgium. They spoke of the "Belgian miracle"; they expressed their admiration for this oasis of liberal economy so successfully cultivated by Belgium's Prime Minister, Paul-Henri Spaak, and his financial aides, among whom Camille Gutt, now chairman of the International Fund in Washington, was unquestionably entitled to the oak leaf badge.

But instead of receiving any special awards from the ERP, Belgium is faced with increasing difficulty in selling her industrial production, with reduction of her tourism, and with growing unemployment. The number of unemployed which numbered about 80,000 in 1947, increased to 150,000 in the summer of 1948, and has now reached 270,000. This is a very impressive figure for a country with a population of eight million. Translated into American terms, it amounts to five million unemployed.

This situation is a source of great worry to many Belgians. And this worry is aggravated by the fact than instead of being helped in their efforts to promote their exports the Belgians are being advised to reduce their imports.

THE BELGIANS are perplexed. They thought that the main purpose of the Marshall Plan was to increase the living standard in western Europe. But now it looks as if they are being invited to lower theirs. It is a bitter pill to swallow. And Soviet propaganda, having quickly recognized this vulnerable spot in ERP, is sending siren appeals to the Belgians. The Soviet papers Pravda and Izvestia are trying to prove that Belgium would be better off without the Marshall Plan and that eastern European markets are of greater importance to the Belgian economy than the Marshall Plan.

Belgians are, of course, eager to develop their trade with the countries behind the iron curtain. But they have too much common sense to let themselves be seduced by the Soviets. They are too well aware of the important place they have assured for themselves in the Western economy. They know that being a great western European workshop, they must sell a certain amount of goods to the West, because it is only there that they can buy the indispensable products for this workshop if they want to maintain their present standard of living.

For this reason the Belgians strongly resent the cuts which Britain has imposed on the importation of Belgian goods. They resent the British treasury regulations which allow British tourists a certain amount in French francs, Italian liras, and even Swiss francs, but no Belgian currency.

Belgium is not asking for any grants. She does not seek any favors. She only wonders why, having conscientiously fulfilled all her obligations toward ERP, she cannot obtain from ERP better facilities for maintaining her foreign trade on the 1947-1948 level. To be sure, certain Belgian goods may be too expensive for the world market. But so long as the main reason for the slowing down of Belgian exports is the scarcity of Belgian francs, the Belgians do not see why they should be penalized for having been a model member of the western European community.

Matter of Fact

Point 4 Began as a 'Punchline'

By Stewart Alsop

THERE has been a great deal of speculation about Point Four in President Truman's Inaugural Address—the "bold new program" for raising world living standards. Is this a major policy decision, comparable to the Marshall Plan? Is it a "Fair Deal" for the world? Is it, as the Daily Worker would have it, a scheme for guaranteeing the imperialist profits of the soft drink manufacturers and the oil companies? Or is it really nothing at all?

The best way to put the "bold new program" in its proper perspective is to examine the way in which the Inaugural Address was written and the way Point Four came to be included in it.

The first step, some time before Inauguration Day, was a discussion between President Truman and Clark Clifford, his chief adviser and speech writer. Truman outlined in a very general way the sort of thing he had in mind for the speech—a major foreign policy address, including a challenge to the philosophy of communism, a review of what had been accomplished in the past, and hope held out for the future.

Clifford then went to see Robert A. Lovett, then Undersecretary of State, and discussed the presidential ideas with him. Clifford and Lovett agreed that the next step was to have the State Department prepare a version of the Inaugural Address to submit to the President.

Major responsibility for this task fell on State Department Counselor Charles E. Bohlen. Bohlen and his aides produced a preliminary draft which seemed to Truman and Clifford interesting, but too involved and intellectual for the purpose. Especially since his direct approach succeeded in the campaign, Truman has had a taste for the simple declarative sentence.

Underlining One Idea

THEREFORE, Clifford redrafted the speech, retaining many of the State Department ideas. The result was a simply written contrast between communism and freedom, a brief review of the American effort to "restore peace, stability and freedom to the world" and a statement of strong support for the European Recovery Program, the Atlantic Pact and the rearmament of western Europe.

But all this had been said before and it seemed somehow inadequate in what was designed to be a major policy address on a memorable occasion. While the speech was in preparation, moreover, China was falling, and the evidence was mounting that ERP alone would not permit real economic stability in Europe by 1952.

The idea of some sort of plan to benefit both the industrial and backward areas of the world by raising living standards and increasing purchasing power in the underdeveloped areas has long been current. Already there have been sporadic efforts in this direction—the World Food and Agriculture Organization, the ERP counterpart funds, the World Bank.

Moreover, Truman had for some time been thinking along these lines. Clifford suggested that the time had come to throw a spotlight on the idea and the President agreed. Clifford, therefore, redrafted the speech and placed great emphasis on Point Four. He submitted the finished product to both Lovett and Dean G. Acheson. They were somewhat surprised by the emphasis on Point Fourt, but they approved it.

Truman's Hand Apparent

FROM all this, certain points emerge. First, the decision to call for a "bold new program" definitely orginated in the White House rather than in the State Department or elsewhere. This suggests the leading role which President Truman is determined henceforth to play in making foreign policy.

Second, although Truman called for a "program," nothing even faintly resembling a program now exists. Assistant Secretary of State Willard Thorp has been assigned by Secretary Acheson to draw one up, but the raw material he now has to work with is no more than an idea, and an idea still very fuzzy around the edges.

In one version, the idea sounds like little more than a fancy scheme for guaranteeing a return on American capital invested abroad. In another, it sounds like a serious attempt to raise world living standards by "making the desert bloom like a rose." This certainly could not be accomplished simply by private capital invested abroad for profit. In fact it would require a great and costly national effort and Truman himself seems to have ruled this out.

From the foregoing, it is clear that Point Four came to be included in the Inaugural Address, in part, simply because the occasion seemed to require something new and striking. But it also seems possible that the President has sensed that ERP and the Atlantic Pact may not, by themselves, be adequate to halt Soviet and Communist expansion, especially in Asia.

It is just possible that out of the still fuzzy idea of the "bold new program" will emerge a third pillar of American foreign policy, to stand beside ERP and the Atlantic Pact. But it is also entirely possible that Point Four will peter out into nothing and be forgotten.

One Noted for Sloppiness

Stalin Has Odd Brood of 'Heirs'

By Alex Singleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Jan. 29.—Who will run Russia if death, illness or retirement ends Josef Stalin's long reign?

No one can say for sure. But two men seem to have the inside track.

One is dour, squat Vyacheslav Mikhailovich Molotov—"The Hammer"—Russia's Foreign Minister, Stalin's voice in international affairs, the man who made "niet"-for-"no" the language of Soviet diplomacy.

The other is Lavrenty Pavlovich Beria, 49-year-old boss of Russia's police, like Molotov, a member of the all-powerful Politburo, a tough guy with a rough temper.

That is based on the best information available here, material pieced together from diplomats and foreign observers who could be expected to know—as well as any Westerners can know—what goes on behind the Iron Curtain.

Molotov and Beria: One the man who helps Stalin mold foreign policy; the other the hard-handed shepherd of affairs at home; both of them stalwarts of the Bolshevik regime; both of them schooled in the strategy and terroristic tactics which lifted the Communists to power.

Next to Stalin, they have top billing on the Russian scene. For proof of this, look at the few available official pictures of the Politburo as a group. Molotov on Stalin's right. Beria on his left. To the protocol minded Russians, this is more than coincidence.

The Sloppy Confidante

THERE are others, too, who might move up if a need arises for a successor to Stalin, who in any event will have a big say in that choice; men who will have a voice in Russia's affairs for an indefinite period.

Perhaps next would come Georgi Malenkov, scowling party stalwart who served for eight years as Stalin's secretary and who has taken over a big chunk of the late Andrei Zhdanov's work in masterminding the Cominform.

Sloppy? Yes, with his baggy brown party uniform draped around his short, fat frame. Surly? Almost without exception. Yet Malenkov is credited with being one of the few close to Stalin—or at least as close as anyone can get.

Then there's Lazar Moiseyvich Kaganovich, the only Jew in the Politburo, a black-mustachioed, leather-lunged engineer. He made a name for himself as Commissar of Heavy Industry, built Moscow's subway system, still has a dominant voice in major industrial decisions. He's known as a trouble shooter. In that role, he was sent to the Ukraine two years ago to stiffen party discipline, spur farm production, step up building, curb Ukrainian nationalism. He did.

Lined up behind these four—Molotov, Beria, Malenkov and Kaganovich—are eight other members of the Politburo. Some are aging, obviously beyond their prime. Others are in their ascendancy and may, in coming years, take on increasing authority in the Kremlin. The list:

Hero of Revolution

1. Marshal Klement Voroshilov. Born in poverty, he climbed to Communist heights as a result of personal bravery in the civil war and through his early and loyal support of Stalin. The years have slowed him down and his duties have been reduced. A white-thatched mane sets off a complexion which grows ruddier each year. Russians who know him call Voroshilov a "very human man."

2. Andrei Andreivich Andreyev. Now ailing, he once held a choice position under the Soviet sun as director of all agricultural efforts—no small task in a land where the farm is the basic industry. Short, stocky, dapper, with a close-trimmed black mustache, Andreyev has been in at least a partial eclipse—perhaps, in part, as a result of accusations that thievery from the state developed on the collective farms during the war.

3. Anastasiy Ivanovic Mikoyan. Watch him as the dark horse in the race—especially if tension eases between East and West. An Armenian with a Charlie Chaplin mustache, an intellectual with a sharp eye for the ruble, he has charge of Russia's trade policies, both domestic and foreign. Under an alias he once traveled to the United States to study the food industry. Out of the trip came the introduction to Russia of frozen foods, cellophane for wrapping, grapefruit juice and corn flakes. A realist, he saw the possibility of a wartime black market and took steps to prevent private profiteering. He set up an official black market—under government control.

4. Nikita Sergeivich Khruchev. He is—or at least was—the big shot in the Ukraine. He hit the skids, however, when the Ukraine began acting uppity two years ago, when the Kremlin found it necessary to send Kaganovich down into the Soviet breadbasket to put things in order. Balding, good-natured, a life-long Communist, Khruchev has had a big job in putting the Ukraine back in working order after the German destruction there. He's still at it, but his influence in the Politburo has been on the wane.

Scholarly 'Youngster'

5. Nikolai Alexeevich Voznessensky. In his early 40s and the youngest member of the Politburo, he has the job of state planning—one so important he has little time to play around with politics. A big, broad-shouldered chap with a huge shock of dark brown hair, he moved into the front rank as a scholar, as a member of the Komsomols—the Young Communist League.

6. Nikola Shvernik, now President of the U. S. S. R. Brush him off as a contender. He's a functionary front man with little power or influence.

7. Nikolai A. Bulganin. As Minister of the Armed Forces he exercises supervision—although probably not actual control—over millions of men and rubles. He began his career as a banker. He brought to his present post a talent for organization, a passion for efficiency, a personal gift for dealing effectively with large numbers. A graying goatee matches his graying hair. A piercing voice booms out from beneath piercing eyes as he reads the orders of the day on state occasions. Those orders hew close to the party line. They're probably written by the propaganda bureau.

8. Alexei Kosygin. He's the newest member of the Politburo, has little to say. Perhaps his importance can best be measured by the observation that he occasionally walks alone without a bodyguard—an uncommon practice for Soviet big shots.

That's the line-up.

There's no shoving in this queue; no outward ambition to dominate the scene as Stalin's logical successor. That's unhealthy in Russia.

Stalin himself has shown no signs of stepping down. He's getting on in years—69 last December. There have been stories that he's ill.

But there's plenty of evidence he's still active. He gets to his office in the Kremlin each afternoon and works until late at night, often until 6 a. m.

Pal With Rookies, Tommies Are Urged

LONDON—(AP).—War Minister Emanuel Shinwell has appealed to British troops to treat newcomers to the service—usually the butt of practical jokes and horseplay—with friendly comradship.

"The young chaps who are coming in will need a warm welcome," he said. "Let us all try to make them feel at home as much as possible in what, for them, will be strange and new surroundings."

Mental Thermometer

By Alton L. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Editor

BOSTON, JAN. 29.—A grade of zero is perfect on a new kind of "fever thermometer" for detecting mental illness.

The zero means you're normal.

This "thermometer" is a rating scale in the form of a chart. It indicates by a number how sick a mentally ill person is. It's not unlike a thermometer that tells how high your temperature is above normal.

It's something new and hopeful in the evaluation of mental illness. It tells more accurately whether a person is getting better or worse, and how effective any treatment has been. It may help in learning how important chemical changes in the body may be in causing mental illness.

'Normalcy' Varies

THE CHART is called the Worcester rating scale. It was developed and is being used by Dr. William Malamud, professor of psychiatry at Boston University School of Medicine, and Dr. S. L. Sands, research director of Worcester State Hospital. Dr. Hudson Hoagland and Dr. Gregory Pincus of the Worcester Foundation for Experimental Biology are doing the studies of body chemistry in mental illness.

Unless you have an obvious mental illness, you would score zero on this scale. You'd get a zero even if you are slightly neurotic, as most people are. The reason is that the thermometer starts with a zero of what is normal for you.

There's no attempt to say what "normal" is for everyone. For example, some people are normally optimistic in mood. Others are pessimistic. Either attitude is still within normal limits.

A person's normal mood is one of the 22 items that Dr. Malamud checks on his chart. Others are appearance, sleeping habits, awareness, thought processes, speech and memory.

Dr. Malamud first learns what was normal for the mental patient in each of the 22 items before he got sick. Then he judges how much the person varies from his own normal level, and puts down a number, from one to seven, for the degree of variation.

Sharp Swings Shown

IF THE optimist is still an optimist, he rates a normal zero in mood. But if he's changed into a pessimist, he gets 1. If he's swung way over into exhilaration or deep depression, he might get a score of 6 or 7.

Each of the 22 items is scored in this way. The total score—whether 40, 76, or 100 or more—is simply a measure of how sick he is.

Another test can be made after treatment by electric shock, drugs or other methods, to see what it did for him. The chart shows whether he was helped or not, and in what ways.

Mental illness brings subtle chemical changes in the body. They can be found by testing the body fluids such as the blood. Most are due to changes in the way that very important gland, the adrenal cortex, is acting.

The chart offers a new way of learning what these changes mean, and whether they may be a cause of some of the symptoms in mental illness. The changes in the illness can be measured more accurately against any changes in the body chemistry.

A PENDANT to be worn down the back when a lady has a low-cut gown, is on display at the American Museum of Natural History. She wears a silver collar, open at the back of her neck. A V-shaped chain down her back holds a crystal, the shape of a lipstick container, but only about half as long. The exhibit shows new ideas in jewelry, all built around natural crystals of little-used minerals. These include beryl, white topaz and various colors of quartz. The crystals appear just as they come from the earth, without cutting. They range from the clearness of water through tints of all shades. These semi-precious jewels are larger than ordinary gems.

Air Force and Navy pilots are testing a new, easier-to-read altimeter that may prevent some kinds of aviation errors. It has a two-digit counter that makes it quicker and easier to read altitude. The counter is like an automobile mileage counter, and makes one revolution per 1000 feet. At 16,080 feet, the pilot would see the number 16 registered on the counter, while a pointer would indicate the additional 80 feet.

The altimeter is said to mark the first radical change in this basic flight instrument. It was designed and developed by the Square D. Co.'s Kollsman instrument division, New York, at the suggestion of the Air Force. Work was started after a study by Dr. Walter F. Grether of the Air Force Medical Laboratory showing the types of error likely to occur in reading the usual multiple-pointer altimeter.

More than 4,500,000 United States' school children—about one in every five—have defective vision, a test survey by the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, Inc., New York, shows.

Dr. Franklin M. Foote, executive director, urges five steps:

Medical care and examinations to discover serious eye defects at an early stage.

Regular vision-testing programs in all schools.

Proper lighting of classrooms and proper choice of paints and decorations to avoid glare.

Desks and chairs so designed as to allow children to read with body, head and eyes in the correct position, plus more legible reading material.

Special care, including improved lighting and larger-type books, for children with subnormal vision.

Scarce Marks Give Trouble In Germany

By Edwin Hartrich

FRANKFURT, Jan. 29.—Western Germany is afflicted with an acute shortage of money which suddenly developed at the end of the holiday season. As a result, the Deutschmark has almost doubled in value on both the black market and Swiss exchange within the past few weeks.

Accompanying this is a widespread landslide of local prices, Frankfurt newspapers report that prices of consumer goods, such as shoes and other necessities, have dropped 30 per cent in the last few days. Further decreases are expected.

The Bank Deutscher Laender, the equivalent of an occupation Federal Reserve Bank for the 11 western German states, has called a halt to further extensions of short-term credits to German manufacturers and business firms, originally granted when the new money was introduced last June. This has caused a further round of scrambling for the elusive cash.

Another factor causing the serious scarcity of money was the wholesale purchasing by Americans in Germany of Deutschmarks for their pre-Christmas shopping. The western German black markets have been emptied of millions of Deutschmarks. Before Christmas the Deutschmarks sold for approximately 5 cents each. Now the price has risen to almost 10 cents.

This development gives encouragement to conservative German politicians, headed by Prof. Ludwig Erhard, economic director of Bizonia. The professor has long called for the removal of all price controls to enable the new western German money, as well as its economy, to reach their normal levels.

Conversely, the rise in the Deutschmark value is a blow to the Socialists, who demand retention of price controls and other paraphernalia of a planned economy.

DP Act Changes Face Roadblock

By Drew Pearson

THE Democrats went to all sorts of trouble to defeat Chapman Revercomb as Senator from West Virginia, because of religious discrimination in his Displaced Persons bill. Even Governor Dewey refused to make a speech for Revercomb in West Virginia because of the charge that he had discriminated against Catholics and Jews. But now it looks as if Revercomb's defeat was in vain.

The new Democratic chairman of the Judiciary Committee is Senator Pat McCarran of Nevada. It is the Judiciary Committee which passes on displaced persons legislation, and to handle it McCarran has carefully appointed a subcommittee guaranteed to make no important changes in the Displaced Persons Act.

They are: Eastland of Mississippi, McGrath of Rhode Island, Democrats; Jenner of Indiana and Donnell of Missouri, with McCarran himself as chairman.

All of the subcommittee share Revercomb's views about displaced persons—except Senator McGrath. But he will be completely boxed in. It is unusual for the chairman of a full committee to sit on a subcommittee, but McCarran is so anxious to block liberalization of the Displaced Persons Act that he appointed himself.

All of which means that changes in the act will have to come from the House Judiciary Committee, where live-wire Chairman Celler of New York is already busy.

Curley's 'Frozen' Refrigerators

PUT out in the cold by the voters, former Senator Curley Brooks of Illinois never got to use the new refrigerators which he ordered for each Senate office. Appropriated by Republicans, they helped to defeat him for reelection. Now, inherited by Democrats, they haven't been put into use.

Reason: The dynamo in the Senate Office Building isn't powerful enough to operate them. So they have never been hooked up. Even now, several months after delivery, the controversial refrigerators are still standing unconnected in the Senate offices—while the dynamo undergoes alterations.

Meanwhile, the Senate custodian delivers a bucket of ice each morning to the Senate offices.

How Lesinski Got Paddled

DOWN through the years, chairmen of congressional committees have reigned supreme on Capitol Hill. They could pigeonhole important bills, grant or deny public hearings, hire and fire clerks and committee personnel. Also, they have controlled committee patronage plums.

The Congressional Reorganization Act was supposed to change this, but it hasn't—until last week when two able, young members of the House Education and Labor Committee, John Kennedy of Massachusetts and Wingate Lucas of Texas, Democrats, demonstrated that a chairman is no bigger than his committee.

The man they upset was flannel-mouthed Congressman John Lesinski of Detroit, Mich., who boasts that he never went beyond the fourth grade yet is in charge of legislation affecting the education of the Nation.

Lesinski had called a closed-door meeting of his committee to "introduce" his hand-picked new staff, including former Congressman Frank Hook of Michigan, when young Kennedy inquired if Lesinski had "consulted the Reorganization Act."

"What do you mean?" sputtered Lesinski.

"I mean you have no right to make any appointments of staff employes without the majority approval of this committee," replied Kennedy. "If the Reorganization Act means anything, let's abide by it. If not, let's scrap it."

"That act applies to firing as well as hiring," broke in Lucas. "You had no right to discharge Bing Mathias (a clerk) and lock him out without our approval."

"I have every right to choose an advisory staff with whom I can work in harmony," shot back Lesinski. "Fred Hartley made his own appointments."

"You are talking about the custom," said Kennedy. "I am talking about the law. You have not lived up to the Reorganization Act."

"Well, go ahead and interview these men if you don't think they are qualified," blustered the chairman.

The committee did, and was amazed when each of Lesinski's appointees gave Detroit as his address.

"What are you planning to do, John," finally inquired Georgia's John Wood. "Run for Mayor of Detroit? You'd have a good start with all this patronage."

Note—Lesinski fired Mrs. Jennie Carter, a mother with two children to support; and Mrs. Myrtle Locher, a widow—both Democrats. But he kept on the payroll Mrs. Mary Gilbert Saunders, daughter of the former National Association of Manufacturers lobbyist, Maj. Gen. Harold Gilbert. Mrs. Saunders was the only clerk the Republicans would admit behind closed doors while they wrote the Taft-Hartley Act. The other Republican staff member retained by Lesinski was Mrs. Frances Los of Michigan.

Submerging a Safeguard

NEXT to Communist sabotage, the thing most likely to destroy the American system is cartels and vertical trusts. The bigger certain monoplies get, the easier it is for any government to take them over. This is what happened in Germany, Russia and Fascist Italy. It could happen here.

In Congress, the House operates the Un-American Activities Committee, a standing committee, supposedly to probe Communist sabotage. But in the Senate, backstage maneuvers are now almost complete to kill the standing committee which hitherto has helped to prevent communism by protecting small business.

Under the Republicans, the Small Business Committee functioned entirely on its own, not as a subcommittee answerable to an over-all chairman. GOP Senator Wherry of Nebraska proposed to keep it that way and got an agreement to this effect from Democratic Senator Hayden of Arizona, chairman of the Rules Committee. Senator Murray of Montana, scheduled to be chairman of the new Small Business Committee, also wanted it independent, but he doesn't get along with Wherry—though both are working toward the same end.

Finally, Democratic Leader Lucas of Illinois referred the matter to the Banking and Currency Committee, which voted 13 to 0 to swallow up the Small Business Committee. Banking and Currency will now appoint a subcommittee which, however, may destroy the power to make forthright and independent investigations.

Note—During the war, the Army-Navy allotted 50 per cent of their contracts to only six companies. The concentration of Army-Navy business with big corporations since the war has remained just about the same.

The Gallup Poll

2 in 3 Back Un-American Probe

By George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

IN THE STORM of controversy that has been raging around the House Un-American Activities Committee, a substantial majority of voters who have heard or read about the work of the committee approve of what it is trying to do. Approximately two out of every three want the committee to continue.

However, the best-informed among the voters, those who indicate that they are most familiar with the work of the committee, are the least in favor of its continuing. But even in this group more favor continuing the committee than favor abolishing it.

That is the indication from an intensive survey just concluded by the institute, using its multiple-question polling technique developed in 1946-47.

Voters questioned in the Nation-wide sampling were asked whether they had heard of the work of the committee, then asked what they felt to be the chief argument in favor of continuing the committee and the chief argument in favor of abolishing it. Finally each was asked how he himself stood on the matter of continuing the committee.

The results:

"Have you heard or read about the House un-American Activities Committee?"

Those best informed are the college trained people, as the following table shows:

Volcano Crater a War Memorial

Looking out over the crater of the Punchbowl

By Don H. Carlson
Associated Press Staff Writer

HONOLULU, Jan. 29.—In the peaceful crater of an extinct volcano overlooking the Pacific, the Army is burying hundreds of American war dead.

Soldiers, sailors and marines who died on battlefields across the Pacific are being brought here to rest in the new National Cemetery of the Pacific.

An unknown servicemen who died in the Pearl Harbor attack on December 7, 1941, was the first to be interred in the new cemetery. He was buried January 4.

About 200 of his World War II buddies are being buried daily through January and February.

The body of Ernie Pyle, war correspondent beloved of the GIs, who was killed by Japanese machinegun fire on tiny Ie Shima near Okinawa, will be brought here for burial. His grave, like all the rest, will be marked only by a simple granite stone set flush with the ground.

Rank Effaced

IN THE Cemetery of the Pacific there will be no segregation of graves, Lieut. Gen. John E. Hull, Pacific Army commander, said. Privates and colonels, apprentice seamen and commanders will be laid side by side.

By the end of February, 8000 servicemen will have been buried in the red soil of the 35-acre crater. Eventually, there will be more than twice that many graves.

The men died on such scattered battlefields as China, Burma, Guadalcanal, Saipan, Guam, Okinawa and Iwo Jima. Next of kin in most cases have requested overseas burials, Hull said. During the summer, many of Hawaii's sons will be returned for interment.

Unique among the Nation's 90-odd national cemeteries, the National Cemetery of the Pacific is in the crater of a volcano which has been inactive for hundreds of years. The volcano, Punchbowl, is one of the last evidences of volcanic activity on Oahu Island. It is a sister volcano of Hawaii's famed Diamond Head.

In Hawaiian legends, Punchbowl is described as a "mountain of sacrifice." Natives were immolated in the old crater for breaking taboos of ancient gods and high chiefs.

Residents Objected

RECORDS reveal that Punchbowl was first suggested as a cemetery site 50 years ago when Hawaii was still a republic. Sanford B. Dole, President of the republic and later the first territorial governor, vetoed the proposal.

Following the First World War, veterans' organizations began a campaign to have a national cemetery located in the crater. The drive died out, but was resumed at the outbreak of World War II.

During the early years of the war, the idea of a cemetery in the crater was strenuously opposed by many groups in Honolulu. They argued that Punchbowl was too small, that a better site could be found nearer Pearl Harbor and that the city's water supply would be in danger of contamination.

After lengthy debates and thorough investigations, these arguments were all brushed aside. Then the proposal was taken to Washington.

A bill for creation of the cemetery passed Congress early in 1948 and was signed by the President June 28. More than $1,170,000 was earmarked for the project. Construction was started in August.

The cemetery is now in the final building phase, and Army engineers estimate it will be ready for dedication about May 30, Decoration Day.

New Leadership Needed

'Static Liberalism' Bothers Dos Passos

THE possibility of a new liberalism working toward "integration of the worker into ownership" is foreseen by John Dos Passos, the author.

Dos Passos, whose most recent novel in his series of chronicles of contemporary American life, "The Grand Design," was published early this month, said Jeffersonian democracy was more or less based on the farmer owning his farm. In early New England it was the same thing, and if we are going to produce a new democracy we have got to have the working man believing he has a firm stake in it.

"Certainly if we don't produce something like this we are going the way of Russia and Germany," he said in his quiet, hesitant fashion during a recent visit to Washington. "We might produce a totalitarianism that would knock out Russian totalitarianism, but I don't think very much would be gained.

"When you get to talking to people who are working in industry you get little glimpses of this new approach, but I don't think anybody has actually started it yet."

Label Is Threadbare

LOOKING back to the days when he was emerging as a prominent young liberal author, Dos Passos said, "In the '20s there was revolt against the old nineteenth century American ideas and customs, and that was something you could get your teeth into.

"Now there is a sort of fog of static liberalism that no one will clarify, and all the propaganda that comes from the Communist Party certainly doesn't help any.

"What we need is a new liberal leadership, but I think it will have to invent some new word. (Words get worn out; they get so they mean different things, like Hitler and Stalin's use of the word 'democracy').

"We have got to move pretty rapidly toward giving every one a stake in the community to buck this despotic control from above."

Underdog's Viewpoint

IN explanation of his own attitude, Dos Passos said that "for some reason I tend to see things from the point of view of the man on the bottom, instead of the man on top.

"My father was a corporation lawyer. He certainly wasn't a Socialist, but I think men of that generation had a higher regard for men as men than the generation that followed."

Currently Dos Passos, after years of living on Cape Cod, is moving by degrees to a farm in Westmoreland County, Va. He thinks "The Grand Design" is the last of the chronicle novels for the present, and he is planning to give more time to a book on Jefferson's ideas on which he has been "working off and on since 1940." He is also thinking of publishing a collection of his articles.—LEE GROVE.

Britannica Editor Just a Middleman

By William J. Conway
Associated Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO, Jan. 29.—Four strangers took their ease in a club car on a train. They began to talk and introduced themselves. One was a top flight chess player. The second was a well known actress, the third an important Government official.

They turned to the fourth. He was a tall, tweedy chap, plain of dress and soft of speech. He said:

"I'm Walter Yust. Editor of the Encyclopedia Britannica."

Everybody laughed. They thought it was a gag. This fellow sitting there with a martini in his hand didn't look and act like—well like a highbrow scholar.

Yust (pronounced Yoost) looks and acts more like what he was for 17 years, a newspaperman. He now serves as a middleman in the knowledge market. He gets facts from experts and passes them along to the public.

. . . He paid GBS $68.50

His ever changing "staff" of writers is scattered around the world. Each year he assigns articles to about 1000 men and women. Each gets 2 cents a word. Albert Einstein earned $86.40 for his think piece on Space-Time. George Bernard Shaw received $68.50 for an opus on socialism.

Holds Them Down

HOW well do distinguished people write?

"Very well," Yust says. "They have something to say and they know how to say it."

"We always ask for 10 per cent fewer words than we can use," Yust says. "They always go over the wordage limit."

There was one memorable exception. The captain of one of the warships sunk at Pearl Harbor mailed a manuscript on naval tactics December 31, 1941. The letter which came with it said:

"I wrote a little too much and cut it with a pencil. Please excuse this, but I lost my typewriter, and my ship, in the attack."

Yust is 54 now. He is in his eleventh year as editor-in-chief of all Britannica publications—the big reference set, Britannica Jr., Britannica Book of the Year and Britannica World Atlas.

He never has had the time to read the 38 million words in the 24-volume senior set. Fresh copy pours in at an annual rate of two million to five million typed, penned and penciled words in a score of languages.

"I couldn't possibly read all the material that comes in," Yust says. "That's why I have six assistants."

Smart Stockholders

YUST may know personally only 10 of the 1000 contributors with whom he deals in a year's time. When he wants an article, he gets the advice of men who know the subject. He usually finds them at the University of Chicago, which is loaded with scholars and owns the preferred stock in Britannica to boot.

When the scholars pick the authority who should do the piece, a letter goes out and in due time the article is delivered. But it took six years of patient persuasion to get Carl Sandburg going on a new Lincoln biography.

There are headaches—and big ones—in the business. When the first atom bomb burst, it knocked holes in about 500 Britannica articles, ranging down the index from alchemy to uranium. All had to be rewritten.

Errors filter into the books now and then. Kibitzers usually spot them in a hurry. But one survived long enough to become a classic. It was an abstruse mathematical formula. It was printed upside down and remained in that position for 15 years. Nobody but the author—who hadn't seen it—knew the difference.

Australia Exploits 'Paint Box' Cave

SYDNEY, Australia—(AP).—A cave used as a "paint box" by generations of Stone Age Australian aborigines in western Australia has been leased for commercial exploitation of red ochre. Known as Wilgie Mia (Paint Cove), it is 40 miles northwest of Cue and 400 miles northwest of Perth, western Australia's capital. For many centuries Australian aborigines have used its bright red pigment to paint their bodies for corroborees, to paint their totem designs and for barter with other natives.

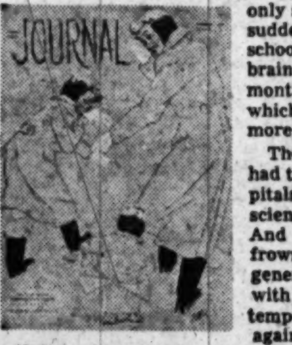
A condition of the lease is that the soft ochre running through a haematite lode in the cave may be removed only from the floor of the cave and that the aboriginal art on the walls must be preserved and the aborigines given free access to the cave. The cave is on an aboriginal reserve. Aboriginal art, with its freshness, verve and glowing colors, is becoming widely appreciated abroad and in Australia.

The Magazine Rack

By Katharine Graham

WITHOUT DOUBT the outstanding work of the week is John Gunther's "Death Be Not Proud," in the Ladies Home Journal. But it is only for the strong minded or the very strong hearted.

It describes, almost day by day, the illness and death of Gunther's only son, Johnny, when he was 17. Quite suddenly, just after he had returned to school after a happy spring vacation, a brain tumor was discovered. Fourteen months later, after a horrible illness which he and his family combated with more than human strength, death came.



The family had tried everything. They had tried the usual best doctors and hospitals. They had looked into every new scientific possibility related to the field. And they had even tried a doctor frowned on by the medical profession generally, who claimed to cure tumors with diet. This resulted in amazing, but temporary, improvement—and then again heartbreak.

Johnny himself possessed such ability and fortitude that he was able to take the examinations, and stand up and graduate with his class at Deerfield, when he had been out of school and desperately ill for more than a year.

After all the heart-rending scenes, the clinical details, experience in the medical world, the philosophizing on life and death, one sentence summarizes all that Gunther learned. He puts it this way," "I wish we had loved Johnny more."

Harper's is publishing the book, of which this is a condensed version.

Also in the Journal, J. D. Ratcliffe describes efforts made by the medical profession to reduce maternal mortality in, "We Can Make Childbirth Safer." Review boards have been organized in many towns, says Ratcliffe, to review cases of mortality before assembled doctors and discuss whether or not trouble could have been avoided, and if so how.

Commendable as are the efforts being made in this direction, what will be the effect of these obstetrical case details on feminine readers? If the purpose of such an article is to spread the type of meeting described, could it not be better accomplished through medical journals?

GOOD inauguration coverage, some fine pictures of dogs and a round table on housing are to be found in this week's Life. A nice concrete subject like housing seems to be better round table material than some others in the past.

Question before the table was, "Can the housing industry produce more houses and better houses cheaper?" Some ideas thrown into the discussion were: William J. Levitt's, that the builder should become big enough to cope with the big forces dominating his business and his supplies; Frederick H. Allen's proposal to set up a 100-million-dollar "General Housing Corporation" patterned after General Motors; Carl G. (Lustron) Strandlund's theory that houses should be designed and turned out like cars at a factory, then shipped to dealers to erect on the site.

YARDVILLE, U. S. A., in McCall's, is a design for living that's here. In Philadelphia, the planning commission has an elaborate blueprint for making over the town. While awaiting Utopia, the commission, together with McCall's, decided to see what could be done now.

A representative block in the industrial-residential section was selected and the residents were persuaded to make over their yards according to a communal plan. The block was transformed, and the lives of the inhabitants, too.

COSMOPOLITAN has been getting better by the month since the advent of Herbert R. Mayes of Good Housekeeping as "supervising editor."

Inez Robb writes a superenthusiastic rave on Bess Truman entitled, "And Maybe We Were Wrong About Her, Too." "Everyone on the presidential train—press, crew and politicians—ended the tour devoted to the First Lady . . . she looked out for their comfort and health as unobtrusively as she does her husband's," writes Miss Robb.

Mrs. Truman, along with some others, "didn't think that her husband had a Chinaman's chance," she reveals. But "far from irritating the President, the First Lady's doubts delighted him. He clutches her pessimism as other men hang onto rabbits' feet, for never in his successful political career has he run for office when she thought he would win."

CORONET tells, among other things, how to get your 1948 income tax refund. And on the other hand it gives practical advice on "How to Make a Million." Readers of both pieces should be well off indeed.

Also recommended are Time's profile of Cole Porter (the composer's on the cover) and Collier's "I Stole a Million," the confessions of an insurance racketeer who got away with it for 15 years before he was caught. Also see House Beautiful's demonstration of an ideal magazine rack, page 62, the only one of its kind we've seen ready made. The same magazine's "Practical Gardener" is now on the stands.

Notes on the Margin

By Lee Grove

JOSEPH HERGESHEIMER, the novelist whose "The Three Black Pennys" and "Java Head" have found their place in American literature, paid Washington a brief visit last week.

Sprucely dressed, with close cut white hair and eyebrows like thatched eaves over quick-moving eyes, he was full of sprightly thoughts on a variety of subjects, from bartenders' debasement of daiquiris with grenadine "because the girls like it pink," to the state of the Union.

Extracting a Havana from a large red morocco cigar case, he had a word for youth: "You are lucky if when you are young you can do something you want to do. I left school at the age of 15 on the plea that it bored the hell out of me. I went to art school, found out I was not a painter, and went to Europe and just looked at things for three years.

"Young people should find out what they need. They have an instinct for knowing what they need. Out of what I saw in Europe I wrote for years to come. There is an intellectual metabolism that keeps itself free so it takes what agrees with it."

ON ART APPRECIATION: "The truth is that what is called art is of tremendous sheer technical concern. There is nothing nebulous in the attitude of an intelligent person toward painting. Painting is a master mechanic's job."

ON DEFINITION: "The curse of definitions is that they include too much."

ON HERGESHEIMER: "I live in south Jersey. The house is so close to the Atlantic Ocean that the windows are encrusted with salt. The town is so small there's no railroad.

"I have a wife, have had her so long that I like her, and though we have uncertain tempers it is more often amusing than not."

ON HIS WORK: "I quit writing the year before I was 50. I got tired of writing about people and wanted to find out more about life.

"I have been reading for 15 years and working on a book now for three years: a long study of the creative imagination; no Freud and no aesthetics. I hate hooey. There is something childish about the creative mind. The book is going to run about 80,000 words, a short book nowadays."

ON THE UNION: "The difference between a republic and a democracy is the density of population per square mile. Democracy does not interest me on the plane that all people are created equal. A republic gives a person a chance for individuality."

Hergesheimer, who will be 69 February 15, said he felt that modern industrialism left no room for individuality, and thus robbed men of a certain integrity.

Perhaps it was coincidence, but John Dos Passos, who was 53 on January 14 and felt that his experience of the national life extended a little farther into the past because of association with an older-than-usual father, also when here expressed concern over the loss of identity in modern industrialism.

Chennault's Book of Adventure Highly Spiced With Criticism

"Vinegar Joe" Stilwell (left) and General Chennault were comrades-at-arms when this picture was made at a Fourteenth Air Force field in China in 1943. The late General Stilwell is Chennault's principal target in his new book

By J. Reilly O'Sullivan

Associated Press Reporter O'Sullivan, now on the New York desk, covered the fighting in China from 1942 to 1944 and for a time was attached to the United States Fourteenth Air Force.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—The United States is losing the Pacific war to Communist expansion and World War III is in the making in the Orient, Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault (ret.) warns.

But there's still time to do something about it in China, he says, despite the Chinese Communist military triumph.

Chennault, first American to fight the Japanese in the air, swings a policy pen pointed at Soviet aims to tip the world balance of power in the Far East and also at United States "brass hat" bungling which he says contributed to China's civil war debacle.

Leader of the "Flying Tigers" against the Japanese, and since head of an airline in China, Chennault tells his story in "Way of a Fighter," published Monday by G. P. Putnam's Sons.

His old CBI theater commander, the late Gen. Joseph Stilwell, and former Secretary of State Marshall are singled out for special criticism.

A complete Communist victory in China, Chennault writes, could touch off other victories in southeast Asia, giving the Reds a string of bases from Saigon to Siberia. "Then the stage will be set for the unannounced explosion of World War III."

He seriously questions that Russia will make any more than probing skirmishes in Europe until her Asiatic flank is secure.

A Base for Nationalists

INSISTING that it is not too late for effective action in China, Chennault holds that United States military aid should be given top priority—that a military decision is necessary before political and economic reforms can be attained.

"It is certainly not impossible for a small force of stout men who know the terrain to apply the best of modern equipment against critical Communist weak spots and halt the advance in its tracks," he writes. "This would save the lower Yangtze Valley and south and west China as a base in which Chinese nationalism could reorganize . . ."

He apparently has in mind an air force such as he led against the Japanese invaders.

General Marshall, who went to China in the fall of 1945 as a special emissary, is blamed by Chennault for forcing a truce in the civil war at a time when the Central Government forces were winning. United States military aid was withheld, he relates, and eventually, as a result of truce moves, the Chinese Communists got into Manchuria where they had access to the Japanese military stockpile seized by the Russians. Chennault estimates there was sufficient materiel to equip one million men for 10 years of fighting. The Communists subsequently "chewed up" Nationalist divisions running out of American supplies.

Chennault says Marshall had orders from the State Department which were "utterly impossible to carry out. They were given to him by a State Department that was the source of Russian policy now admitted to be a grevious error."

Marshall's mission was to stop the civil war and attempt to bring about a coalition government, including Chinese Communists.

"Marshall did not originate that policy, and when he became Secretary of State he was the leader in the fight to change it," Chennault adds.

Calls Road a 'Boondoggle'

THE STILWELL-CHENNAULT feud and the feud between Stilwell and Chiang Kai-shek get extensive airings in the book.

Chennault declares that before Stilwell was relieved of his CBI command he "poisoned Sino-American relations for two critical years and hamstrung effective Allied cooperation on the Asiatic continent."

He details the final blowup between Stilwell and Chiang over Stilwell's insistence on supreme command over the Chinese armies when both had come to distrust and loathe each other. He dwells on Stilwell's "obsession" to retake northern Burma, from which he walked out in retreat in an earlier campaign, calls the Stilwell Road "a worthless boondoggle" and scores what he terms "Vinegar Joe's" vigorous opposition to the Himalaya hump airlift which carried most of the supplies to China.

Chennault looks upon Stilwell as a violent partisan of infantry, who had little knowledge or respect for the employment of airpower or of large-scale planning. He recites that Stilwell frequently held up critical supplies for American fliers in China, the only United States forces which actually did any fighting there, and refused to bolster Nationalist armies in east China against a Japanese drive that eventually forced abandonment of United States and Chinese air bases.

"There was considerable truth, along with malice, in the oft-repeated description of Stilwell as 'the best four-star battalion commander in the Army,'" he writes.

Packed With Adventure

BUT THE book is not primarily a recital of high-level maneuvering and bickering. It is the adventure-filled life story of a fighter pilot who proved his theory of air tactics and made history. It also is a first-hand account of the war in China from 1937 on, and the glowing deeds and many frustrations of the American Volunteer Group, the China Air Task Force and the Fourteenth Air Force which Chennault commanded.

And Chennault presents evidence designed to show that Chinese Nationalist troops do have a record of fighting valiantly and successfully on their own, to belie the thesis of Stilwell and others that they are more or less useless unless trained and officered by foreigners.

Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer is credited by Chennault with retrieving the Sino-American situation when Wedemeyer succeeded Stilwell in China. Moreover, Chennault points out that Wedemeyer, in his postwar administration, averted the first real Communist threat to the vital industrial north and the lower Yangtze Valley by "leap-frogging" Nationalist troops over the Communist belt by air to strategic cities in the north.

Wedemeyer's suppressed report on China still should be made public, late as it is, Chennault urges.

A Microscope on Deficiencies

What War Has Done to Education

By Fred M. Hechinger

THE IMPACT OF THE WAR UPON AMERICAN EDUCATION. By I. L. Kandel. University of North Carolina Press. 285 pp. $4.25.

EVEN the layman, whose only interest in education is the schooling of his own children, could not overlook the impact of the war on this country's education. From the special Army training courses at the colleges during the war to the endless variety of educational opportunities under the GI Bill of Rights, the link between national defense and school has become a commonplace.

Mr. Kandel's painstaking record, however, is neither a commonplace nor a popular book. It is a compilation of facts, developments and important documents which will constitute an indispensable reference source to all those interested in, and concerned with, education. And perhaps it should also be recommended as equally indispensable to those who are dealing with the profession of war and national defense.

"Education for democracy cannot merely be taken for granted. What goes on in the schools every hour of the day, on the playground and in the classroom, whether reflecting methods of control by the teacher, or opportunities for self-expression by the pupils, must be checked against the fact that the children are growing up to live in a democracy." The author thus quotes the late Franklin D. Roosevelt in a message to an educational conference shortly before America's entry into the war. It opens a thorough discussion of the importance of leadership in time of crisis—and education's task to provide the leadership.

Abortive Revolution

PARTICULARLY valuable is the documented record of the educational deficiencies shown during the war. Those deficiences—under the microscope of the draft and the public spying into the private citizen's no longer private affairs—led to the realization that in spite of vast progress made in the business of mass education, we are still stuck somewhere in midstream. The concept of secondary education for all was recognized as revolutionary, but the revolution was far from successfully concluded.

In higher education, the need for orienting our course, Mr. Kandel points out, was even more evident. It became strikingly clear through the numerous searching plans for a new general or liberal education which are expertly condensed in the book. But at the same time the author warns that a "return" to the liberal training of the Middle Ages would be a fatal step backward. He calls for the classical ideal.

The book analyzes the failure of liberal education, but it also adds a highly important warning concerning more drastic failures elsewhere. "A liberal education is far more than the acquisition of knowledge; its aim should be to give meaning to life and a guiding philosophy for action," it says. "The Nazis were not lacking in knowledge and especially such knowledge as was directed to their immediate aims; what led to their destruction was the deliberate rejection of humanism and moral and spiritual values."

Segregation Ignored

THE only serious shortcoming of Mr. Kandel's book is the omission of the problem of segregation and discrimination in the American school. Undoubtedly the war had an important impact on that aspect of our schools.

But in the summary of "Lessons of the War," the book rightly concludes that education has been led forward by a new demand for three major areas of study: humanities, social sciences and natural sciences. International consciousness has been awakened and has called for education toward world understanding. And the public has come to realize that education is a national responsibility which cannot be left to the mere chance of local interests.

Mr. Kandel's book fortunately does not try to show that education should be thankful to the war; but it rightly indicates that the horror and waste and degradation of armed conflict have made education and educators more mature.

Husband's Papers Her Lifelong Concern

Dolly Madison's Great Mission

By Sterling North

DOLLY MADISON: Her Life and Times. By Katharine Anthony. Doubleday. 426 pp. $4.50.

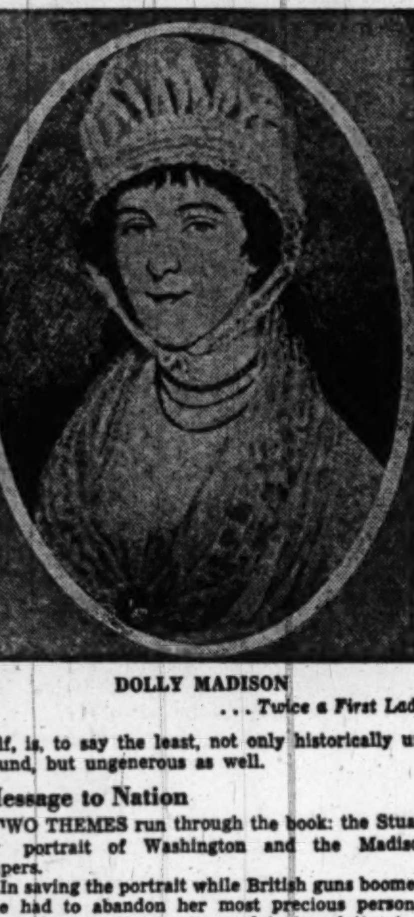
THIS is the spirited story of a Quaker maid who became to all intents and purposes the First Lady of the Land during the Presidency of the widowed Jefferson, as well as under the Presidency of her husband, James Madison.

As the serene and well-balanced mistress of the White House, Dolly Madison set the tone for the society of the infant Capital on the Potomac, and in her old age, after the death of her famous husband, became the unquestioned social arbiter of Washington.

An individualist of great common sense, she has somehow managed to survive as one of the most glamorous women in the history of the Republic.

She knew every President from Washington to Zachary Taylor, and every one of them bowed to her charm and respected her intelligence.

Born Dolly Payne in North Carolina, she met Madison when she was a 26-year-old widow in Philadelphia and he a 43-year-old member of the Continental Congress. As wife of Jefferson's Secretary of State (who was soon to be President), she extended her interests into every realm of politics. But since she always used her talents and energies in the cause of others, she was usually credited with unselfish devotion to her husband and her country.



DOLLY MADISON ... Twice a First Lady

A Consistent Guardian

DURING the War of 1812, when the British attacked Washington, she not only kept a level head, managed the frightened servants and organized a strategic retreat, but remembered to save Madison's state papers and a Stuart portrait of Washington.

In her old age, when, after years of retirement at Montpelier, she returned to Lafayette Square, she was to know the pinch of poverty. But despite lack of money, and mental anguish caused by her wastrel son, she never faltered in her determination to protect the papers she had once saved from fire, while maintaining the poise of a true First Lady.

Katharine Anthony makes Dolly Madison a believable and lovable figure of flesh and blood. She is, however, happier in picturing Dolly during the Presidency and long years of retirement than in the turbulent period of her young widowhood and first years with Madison.

She is totally unfair to Dolly's good friend, Aaron Burr, a common failing among current biographers and historians. For many years Burr has had less than justice, but for a biographer of Dolly Madison to always attribute the worst of motives to the man who introduced her to her husband, the man whom she designated as the guardian of her son and the man who always looked after the best interests of her mother as well as Dolly herself, is, to say the least, not only historically unsound, but ungenerous as well.

Message to Nation

TWO THEMES run through the book: the Stuart portrait of Washington and the Madison papers.

In saving the portrait while British guns boomed, she had to abandon her most precious personal possessions, as she was to explain in a letter to a newspaper written when she was 80.

During the years of his retirement until his death, Madison worked tirelessly on his further papers. Madison's notes on the Constitutional Convention are practically the only first-hand account of how the great document was hammered out at Philadelphia in 1787.

During her husband's old age, Dolly Madison was not only his nurse and constant companion, but his amanuensis as well. After his death, despite lack of funds and the indifference of Congress, she did not cease to struggle until these precious papers were published and the Nation made aware of their priceless heritage.

This is a readable and reasonably accurate biography which does justice to a great woman. Worthy to stand with Katharine Anthony's previous lives of Catherine the Great, Queen Elizabeth and Marie Antoinette.

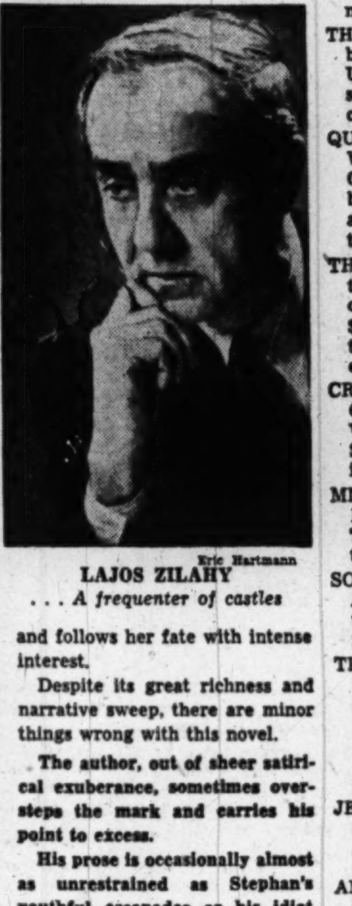
Zilahy Revises History

Hungary's Fabulous Feudalism Captured

THE DUKAYS. By Lajos Zilahy. Prentice-Hall. 795 pp. $3.50.

IN HUNGARY there will never again be estates of hundreds of thousands of fertile acres in the hands of single aristocratic families, or playboy counts and Dresden china countesses with castles in Austria and Hungary, town houses in Vienna, Buda and Paris.

Using satire mellowed with nostalgia, Lajos Zilahy, Hungary's greatest novelist, has written the imposing saga of the Dukay family with particular emphasis upon Count Stephen Dukay and his two daughters, Kristina and Zia.



Eric Hartmann

LAJOS ZILAHY ... A frequenter of castles

When Stephan, the dashing young cavalry officer, gambler, roisterer and profligate, came into his ancient inheritance, it amounted to some 52 million dollars' worth of land, vast houses, herds of livestock, paintings, businesses and jewels. To this he added yet more wealth by marrying Princess Klementina Schayenhehn-Elkburg (Countess Menti), a lady carved from ice who bore him five children and did not repay his faithlessness in kind.

Of these, one boy is an idiot, a second becomes a homosexual and a Nazi, and the third (who is considered no aristocrat) becomes a dependable agronomist.

Blame the Child

IT IS the two daughters, however, who interest the author. Using the questionable device of a diary kept by Kristina, Zilahy allows himself to take certain liberties with history, explaining to the reader how untrustworthy a young girl's diary may be.

Kristina (the elder of the two) is a thoroughly unlikeable, neurotic girl, most of whose life is spent in a mad but fruitless pursuit of the Emperor Charles, who in real life, of course, married Zita.

I suspect that the fact Zia still lives (and dreams of restoring her son Otto to the throne) modifies the plot of this novel. Zilahy could hardly have allowed a real affair between Kristina Dukay and Charles, since that might really have annoyed the erstwhile Empress.

While the count, and to a lesser extent the countess, are credible and well-drawn characters, their daughter Kristina is almost as improbable as her diary. The author fails to make the reader believe, for instance, that she would have been entrusted with secret negotiations in a wild attempt to get the Austro-Hungarian Empire out of World War I, or that she would have nursed the King on his deathbed, or that she would later have been shot in a ghetto.

Authentic Scenery

ZIA, the younger daughter, is much more likeable and much more believable (although she must have been almost the only heiress in Hungary to divide her estate among her peasants for reasons of social justice). The reader becomes emotionally involved in her life and problems and follows her fate with intense interest.

Despite its great richness and narrative sweep, there are minor things wrong with this novel.

The author, out of sheer satirical exuberance, sometimes oversteps the mark and carries his point to excess.

His prose is occasionally almost as unrestrained as Stephan's youthful escapades or his idiot son's obscenities.

On the other hand, no more elaborate petit point of vestigial feudalism in Hungary exists in modern fiction. The author, who has lived in many of the castles (and was a close friend of several of the fabulous Esterhazy family), has captured for all time the ritual, pageantry, costumery, morals, manners and traditions of a way of life which continued to exist up to the beginning of World War II.

Here were aristocrats so politically illiterate that they had no idea who the "Bolsheviks" were when the Red revolution hit them in 1919. They lived like maharajas, were as superstitious as gypsies, as romantic as children and as immoral as the gods of Mount Olympus. Already they begin to sound like something in a fairy story.—S. N.

They're Professional People

Best-Sellers a Hobby To Luncheon Speakers

A DOCTOR, a musician, a department store executive and a book reviewer make up the panel of authors who will be the guest speakers at the next Book and Author Luncheon of The Washington Post, to be held Wednesday, February 9.

All four are better known today as authors of best-selling books than they are for their day-by-day occupations.

The doctor is Dr. David Bradley, author of "No Place to Hide," the record of what he observed at the Bikini tests of the atom bomb. "No Place to Hide" has been distributed as a special "extra" book by the Book of the Month Club and is also being published in condensed form in the February issue of Reader's Digest.

The musician is Sigmund Spaeth, author of the current "A History of Popular Music" and of a total of 21 books in the field of music, ranging from "Barber Shop Ballads" to his "Guide to Great Orchestra Music." He is known to periodical readers as music critic for national magazines and New York newspapers, and to radio fans as an expert on the Metropolitan Opera Quiz and as the "Tune Detective."

The department store executive is Ernestine Gilbreth Carey, who is coauthor with her brother, Frank B. Gilbreth, jr., of "Cheaper By the Dozen," which is also appearing in condensed form this month in the Ladies' Home Journal. It is the hilarious story of the home life of the extraordinary Gilbreth family: The late Frank B. Gilbreth, famous efficiency expert; his wife, Dr. Lillian Moller Gilbreth, named the 1948 "Woman of the Year," and their 12 children.

The book reviewer is Sterling North, whose book reviews appear in The Washington Post every Sunday and in many other newspapers throughout the United States. Mr. North's book is "So Dear To My Heart," the story of a boyhood in rural Indiana. "So Dear To My Heart" has just been made into a movie by Walt Disney.

The luncheon room will be held in the presidential room of the Hotel Statler at 1 p. m. Wednesday, February 9. Tickets, at $3 each, are on sale at the book departments of Kann's and Woodward & Lothrop, and at these book stores: Airport Book Shop, Ballantyne's, Brentano's, Better Mouse Trap, Francis Scott Key Book Shop, Community Book Shop, David Pearlman's, Paul Pearlman's, Pursell's, Savile Book Shop and Whyte's.

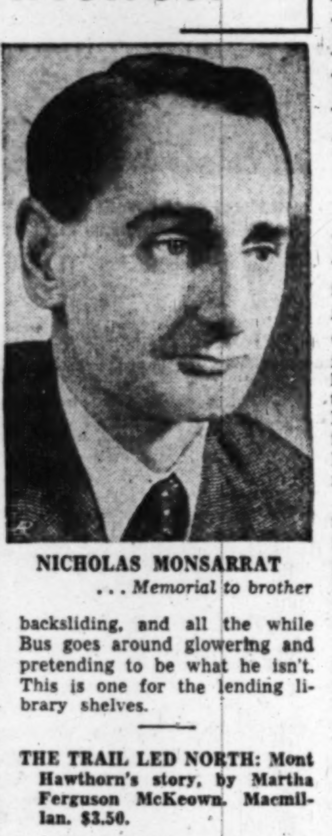
In a Nutshell

MY BROTHER DENYS. By Nicholas Monsarrat. Knopf. $2.75.

THIS is a biography and autobiography of two brothers. The father was a Liverpool surgeon. Nicholas attended college when the father was at the peak of his profession, and the boy had plenty of money. Denys went off to study during the depression. Nicholas tried to be a lawyer and turned into an author. Denys was meant to be a doctor, but joined the artillery in World War II and was killed in North Africa. This book is not only a memoir, but a memorial to a brother whom the author loved with a love of which he now can never tell him. It is also a charming picture of a family.



NICHOLAS MONSARRAT ... Memorial to brother

THE HANGMAN'S TREE, by Dorothy Cameron Disney. Random. 277 pp. $2.50.

DR. VICTORIA GRANT had not seen Maggie (now Mrs. Fairlee) for four years and was most anxious to see how marriage had affected the once successful businesswoman. One look at Maggie invited a second, a third and a whole series of questions. Why was she emulating the first Mrs. Fairlee in dress, manner and appearance? Why couldn't she accept the fact that Rose Fairlee was killed in an automobile accident five years ago and forget the entire matter? Maggie's persistence in this direction slackened, however, when two murders were committed. Victoria took over and proceeded to dissect the whole situation. Excellent.

THE THREE FEARS, by Jonathan Stagge. Doubleday. 188 pp. $2.25.

DAPHNE WINTERS, the actress, has fear of fire, fear of poisoning and a terrible case of claustrophobia. Daphne and her five proteges are invited to tea by a rival actress, Lucy Milliken. One of the proteges is murdered. It seems that every character in this book is just that: a character. Two of them are psychiatrists. And there are too many phobias, contrived circumstances and ridiculous situations.

LEW REESE AND HIS SCIO POTTERY, by Norman E. Nygaard. Greenberg. 176 pp. $2.50.

THIS story of a "business with a heart" tells of the Horatio Algerish rise of a potter's apprentice to head of the famed Scio pottery in Scio, Ohio. The author does not do justice to his subject, is often repetitious and delights in detail. However, his subject matter is interesting enough to carry the reader along. Called "America's answer to communism," the pottery is run by Lew Reese for the profit and benefit of his employes and the town of Scio. Gutted by fire in December, 1947, the story chronicles its rebuilding by the workers, aided by all other industries which had felt the touch of Reese's Good Samaritan policies.

WICKED WATER, by MacKinlay Kantor. Random House. $2.75.

A DRIFTER named Bus Crow brags in the Glad Hand saloon that he has killed 67 men, and finds himself commissioned generalissimo in a range war between the cattlemen and the homesteaders. At the end of the war it is apparent that Crow is not the hero he boasts of being. ... And the ... get killed, and a United States marshal tries to solve murders about which there is no mystery, and a girl named Mattie MacLaird keeps reforming and then backsliding, and all the while Bus goes around glowering and pretending to be what he isn't. This is one for the lending library shelves.

THE TRAIL LED NORTH: Mont Hawthorn's story, by Martha Ferguson McKeown. Macmillan. $3.50.

UNCLE MONT, coming over day after day for a chat with niece Martha, filled her so full of stories about the rugged life he had lived in salmon canneries in our West and Alaska, and in the Klondike prospecting for gold; that she turned them, and him, into this unusual book. He tells it all in the first person, and she puts it down honestly, not glossing over his faulty grammar and not losing anything, either, of the color and excitement of his pioneering youth. She's a fond niece, and you'll be a fond reader, and wish you could sit by her and hear him tell about the man who made a living fighting bulldogs, the burned hands which under the bandage grew webs between the fingers, the Chinaman and his battle with a halibut, the ship's passenger who died and was salted away until land was sighted, the old Indian woman who, instead of pinning her sewing needles into her dress, stuck them handily through her lower lip.

A Strong Case Is Made for ITO Charter

A CHARTER FOR WORLD TRADE. By Clair Wilcox. 220 pages plus 113 pages of documents and index. Macmillan. $4.50.

FOR almost four years Clair Wilcox has been in the forefront of the State Department's fight to preserve and extend Cordell Hull's principles of freer international trade. Now, from his vantage point as director of the Office of International Trade Policies, he has gone thoroughly into every aspect of the great Havana Charter for the International Trade Organization.

The charter is expected to reach the Senate for ratification in a few weeks. This book explains and defends each of its provisions, and also gives the background out of which the various parts of the charter evolved.

Like so many others engaged in the struggle against world trade barriers, Dr. Wilcox sometimes sees the new charter as the be-all and end-all of world recovery. But he is frank enough to say that some of its provisions are compromises which are far from ideal, and he makes a powerful case for the charter as a long-range instrument for prosperity and peace.

His book is authoritative source material for a congressional struggle that will be almost as important as the debate on the United Nations Charter itself.—FERDINAND KUHN, Jr.

Editor to Write Life of Hughes

MERLO J. PUSEY, associate editor of The Washington Post, has signed a contract with Macmillan for a biography of the late Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, the New York publisher has announced.

The Chief Justice, who died last August, repeatedly declined to write his memoirs, but spent considerable time with Pusey reviewing the details of his career. Pusey also has exclusive use of Hughes' personal and public papers.

Pusey is the author of "The Supreme Court Crisis" and "Big Government: Can We Control It?"

Anthology of Negro Poetry Presents a Rounded Picture

THE POETRY OF THE NEGRO, 1746-1949. Langston Hughes and Arna Bontemps, editors. Doubleday. 429 pp. $5.

EDITED by two well-known writers, this book is something of a departure from the expected in that it includes not only poems by Negro authors, but poems about the Negro by white authors, and a section of Caribbean poetry much of which is translated here for the first time.

The relevancy of the Caribbean poems is a little obscure, and may be due to the editor's own enthusiasm, but no one is going to cavil at the inclusion of an extra section of pleasant reading.

More pertinent is the section of poems by white authors on the Negro, for it serves to round out a picture and remove a suggestion of the Negro living in a vacuum.

"The common thread," the editors say in their preface, "is the Negro's experience in the Western World." From a reading of these poems it would appear that this experience was mainly that allowed to any other human being, except for slavery and the evils that have persisted since the Civil War. Inevitably, this heritage of evils has bruised the Negro psyche, and the wonder is not that it appears, but that it does not appear more.

The poems by American Negroes are in a chronological order and reveal the paucity of writers until after World War I. Langston Hughes' poem, "Let America Be America Again," is included in a version rewritten since the days it appeared in a pamphlet published by the International Workers Order, together with an apostrophe to Lenin and other poems, and a topical passage on the depression has been omitted. Coon-huntin' Pictured for Caveman Cult HOUND-DOG MAN. By Fred Gipson. Harper. 247 pp. $2.50.

IF YOU agree with Hemingway that "Huckleberry Finn" is America's finest novel, you will enjoy "Hound-Dog Man." If, on the other hand, you agree with Van Wyck Brooks that such stories stem from the "cult of the caveman and the child," you will turn from Fred Gipson's Texas tale with a slight shudder.

Gipson, himself a hound-dog man, loves coon-hunting with bugle-voiced hounds, fishing catfish, wandering by moonlight down lonesome river valleys and drinking whisky from a jug. He loves tall hunting tales told by firelight, good fiddle music and square dancing.

He also seems to enjoy bloodletting for its own sake: His otherwise enjoyable book includes enough mayhem and murder of innocent small animals to satisfy the trapping and hunting fraternity for weeks on end.

The story covers about five days in the lives of 12-year-old Cotton Kinsey and his pal Spud, who are allowed to go on a coon-hunting expedition with Blackie Scantling—a hound-dog man still unfettered by matrimony.

They fight angry bulls, range hogs who invade their camp, cornered raccoons and a villain named Hog Waller. They kill wild turkeys, possums, squirrels and other game; eat prodigious meals of turkey, catfish and kindred victuals, and pack a lifetime of adventure into less than one week.

Minor characters throughout the book are sharply etched by the observant author. Grandpa Wilson, Dave the bronc-buster, Fiddling Tom and his pretty daughter Dona (who has set her cap for Blackie) all come effortlessly alive on these pages.

Not since Stephen Vincent Benet's "Mountain Whippoorwill" has fiddle music been captured with such perception and emotion in mere words. And not since MacKinlay Kantor's "The Voice of Bugle Ann" has hunting with hounds been made to seem so romantic. Cotton's yearning for a dog of his own and his final acquisition of a one-man pup is as sensitively imagined as anything in "The Yearlings."

A warm piece of homespun Americana, full of the sights, sounds and smells of the vanishing frontier.—S. N.

India Viewed In Lead Role In S.E. Asia

SOCIAL FORCES IN SOUTHEAST ASIA. By Cora Du Bois. 78 pp. University of Minnesota Press. $2.

EVENTS IN Indonesia give timeliness to this series of three lectures on the peoples of southeast Asia. One of the great turning points of history may be in process in this part of the world. Dr. Du Bois examines it through the eyes of an anthropologist, but with sharp insight into the political forces stirring there.

She does not believe all southeast Asia will fall under Communist control. But she thinks the Western powers must show greater intelligence than, for example, the British and the Dutch did in Indonesia after the surrender of the Japanese. She argues that a great opportunity was muffed in Indonesia in 1945 and after, except, perhaps, by the Indian troops who policed Java before the Dutch troops returned there.

India, she predicts, may become the leader of southeast Asia, politically and culturally. Her discussion of the role of the new India will help a reader to understand the recent Asian conference as New Delhi and Jawaharlal Nehru's role as a spokesman for the aspirations of all of southeast Asia. CORAL AND BRASS by General Holland M. Smith and Percy Finch

In Coral and Brass the Marines' most colorful combat general tells the story of the Marines' bloody march across the central Pacific to the very threshold of Japan. It is a controversial and outspoken story. General Smith thinks the "Big Brass" made mistakes—and he says so with blistering effect. He pulls no punches and he spares no reputations. He points many a moral on the pressing question of armed forces unification. Outside the Washington Monument Looking In

Ellis, seen from helicopter, shoots from Monument window

By Walter Wood
Post Reporter

FOR the first time in history, close-up, eye-level photographs of the top of the Washington Monument were made last week.

The two views—showing visitors looking out of the 555-foot shaft's top windows—were made by The Washington Post from a Marine Corps Piasecki helicopter.

Marine Lieut. Robert A. Longstaff, 25, of Jersey City, N. J., hovered the sausage-like craft with its whirling double rotors a scant 75 to 100 feet from the marble obelisk with perfect safety. Cameraman Charles Del Vecchio, 38, 806 Princeton pl. nw., strapped inside the vibrating machine so he wouldn't fall through the door opening, made the pictures.

A ride in a Piasecki—an experimental airplane built to carry eight Leathernecks in combat gear, plus a pilot and copilot—is a shaky sensation.

However, in the hands of a war veteran like Longstaff, the helicopter leaves the ground for the vertical climb upstairs with the ease of a Manhattan elevator. And it doesn't leave its occupants' stomachs on the ground.

The photographer and the picture editor of The Washington Post were aboard when Longstaff took off Monday from the Washington Monument Grounds, where helicopter No. 819 had been exhibited during Inaugural Week. They were granted permission to accompany Longstaff on the return trip to the Marine base at Quantico, Va., to make these hitherto unseen pictures.

The door of the craft was removed to provide Del Vecchio clear vision for "shooting" his pictures. Longstaff climbed the Monument as if on an outside circular staircase, moving slowly upward and around. Upon reaching the window level, he "parked" in midair.

The Piasecki stood so close to the windows that a conversation could be carried on with the persons peering out, were it not for the thunder of nine cylinders in a 600-horsepower radial engine.

The aluminum cap on the 3300-pound capstone and the platinum-tipped lightning rods were plain to see. Copper lightning rods between the white stone slabs in the pyramidion gave the rich appearance of gold-inlaid ivory.

The vibration made it necessary for Del Vecchio to shoot at the high speed of 1/500th of a second at F. 8. He used a Speed Graphic camera with a 135 mm. Optar lens set at 75 feet. His Type B film was developed for six minutes in DK.50 formula.

The Washington Post had Cameraman Arthur Ellis, 37, of 765 Princeton pl. nw., stationed inside the monument to photograph the helicopter as it was seen from the window. Ellis used a K-2 filter to cut the haze which hung over the Mall and all but hid the Capitol. He shot at 1/320th at F5.6. The Type B film was also developed six minutes in DK.50.

G.W., Hoyas Lose in Armory Before 6000

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

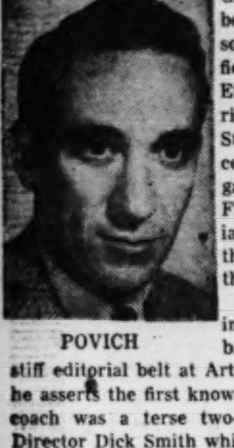
To Whom It May Concern:

DON'T WAGER that Bobby Feller can throw a baseball faster than Bobby Jones swings a golf club . . . when Army engineers measured the speed of Feller's best pitch with electric cameras at Griffith Stadium in 1946, it registered 98.6 miles per hour. But at the point of impact with a golf ball, Bobby Jones' driver was traveling at the rate of 113 miles per hour, according to stroboscopic photographs.

Sid Luckman delivers a generous tribute to Bob Margarita, Georgetown's new coach: "Bob's going to be a great coach. I don't merely think so—I know so. With the Bears, no backfield man ever came any smarter . . ." Ever hear of Robert Herman Julius Friedrich? He's more identifiable as Ed Strangler) Lewis, the former champ recently elevated to the ministry of propaganda by the wrestling trust . . . Frank Filchock has switched teams in the Canadian Football League and will quarterback the Ottawa Club at $7500 a year, more than he received with the Redskins.



POVICH

Brian Bell, sports editor of the Washington and Lee student paper and fullback on the varsity football team, takes a stiff editorial belt at Art Lewis, recently resigned head coach . . . he asserts the first knowledge the school had that it didn't have a coach was a terse two-word telegram from Lewis to Athletic Director Dick Smith which read: "I quit," despite the fact Lewis was under a two-year contract . . . Bell also accuses Lewis of rerouting schoolboy talent that was headed for Washington and Lee, to Mississippi State, his new post.

FIGHT MANAGER AL WEIL took a double beating when his man, Tommy Bell, was knocked out by ancient Jackie Wilson in nine rounds at Los Angeles the other night. The gate receipts were far off because fans refused to patronize an unheated arena during the Los Angeles cold wave . . . Hialeah is boasting about its new "precision" photo-finish camera, selected after tests at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology showed the margin of error to be only five-thousandths of an inch . . . too small to be discerned by the naked eye.

Referees of the District Boxing Commission are hiring a lawyer to represent them in demanding higher fees, which are as low as $12.50 per night, at the indoor arenas . . . Jack Hagerty, who took over as Georgetown University athletic director, is consulting his coaches in all sports before arranging their game schedules, a formality that was overlooked by Rome Schwagel, his predecessor.

Don Bulmer, 23-year-old printer's apprentice in the Washington Post's composing room, will testify that catching isn't the best position for an aspiring big leaguer in the minors. Before quitting baseball, Bulmer played with eight minor league clubs and on seven of them was forced to compete for the job with a player-manager . . . the fund-raising campaign against heart disease is a worthy effort if only for the reason heart disease kills more children from infancy to the age of 14 than the next six leading causes combined.

THE PRESENTATION of the Rev. J. Hugh O'Donnell Trophy, symbolic of the national football championship, to Athletic Director Fritz Crisler of Michigan, is dripping with irony. It's a Notre Dame award to the man who found many excuses for not scheduling a Michigan-Notre Dame game . . . until this week, Willie Pep was the favorite to regain his world featherweight title from Sandy Saddler, the man who knocked him out. But the odds have shifted and Saddler is the 7-to-5 choice to retain the title when they meet in the Garden next month.

The fact that Lou Boudreau signed his $75,000-per-year contract with Cleveland as a player-manager, not merely as a player, permits the Indians to cutback his pay more than the maximum 25 per cent whenever they want to depose him as manager and retain him as a player . . . in listing Outfielder Earl Wooten as a pitcher on their 1949 roster, the Nats are apparently humoring him. He tried pitching at Chattanooga and couldn't win.

Bucky Harris, new manager at San Diego, may yet wind up in the same league again with Buck Newsom, who has had an offer to go to Hollywood; the baseball team, that is . . . Newsom was on the verge of getting the managerial job at Charlotte, N. C., until his name got into the papers, unfavorably.

A WASHINGTON television survey reveals that the Turner Arena wrestling matches on Wednesday night is the favorite program of video watchers, and that Jim Gibbons is rated the top local television announcer . . . Chesterfield, which has bought the radio-television rights to the Nats' home games, will blend the play-by-play descriptions of Arch McDonald and Bob Wolff.

Ed Klieman, the pitcher obtained from Cleveland, isn't succumbing easily to Clark Griffiths' salary offer for 1949. In the off-season he is a sales-promotion manager for a Cleveland department store and thus has an eye for good business . . . the contract signed by Joe Page, Yankee relief pitcher who won only seven and lost eight last year, contains a good-behavior clause which was overlooked last season.

Hunch bettors in the Derby will recognize a betting medium in Joe Goodwin's nominee for the race, Kentucky Colonel, one of the better 3-year-olds now at Hialeah . . . a Hollywood golf pro, after each lesson, presents a beginner with a six-shot picture sequence showing his swing and what's wrong with it . . . President James Garfield had a pool table installed in the White House during his Administration, and it was thrown out by his successor, President Chester Arthur.

Ray Flaherty Becomes Head Coach Of Rockets

By Jerry Liska

Chicago, Jan. 29 (AP).—Ray (Red) Flaherty, once a coaching hero of the rival National Football League, today was named head coach of the rebuilt Chicago Rockets in the All-America Conference.

The surprise announcement by League Commissioner O. O. Kessing swept out Coach Ed McKeever after a lamentable one-season showing. The Rockets won one game and lost 13.

Flaherty thus returns to the new league. He coached the New York Yankees during 1946 and 1947 before quitting the AAC in a row with owner Dan Topping early last season.

The genial 44-year-old native of Hayden Lake, Idaho, had entered the All-America Conference after seven coaching seasons with the Washington Redskins, whom he directed to two National Football League titles.

Flaherty said he had signed a one-year Rocket contract, but did not disclose his salary.

McKeever Contract Still Running

McKeever, signed for three years at $65,000, must settle with the league for the remaining two years of his pact, Kessing said.

Flaherty's selection was the All-America's answer to the challenge of dragging the inept Chicago entry up by the bootstraps for a Chicago box office showdown with the National's powerful Bears and Cardinals.

Flaherty said his new coaching staff and player personnel—including an undisclosed number from the merged Brooklyn-New York City Club—would be revealed along with the identity of a new Rocket ownership next Tuesday.

The new Chicago franchise, as previously announced by the league, includes $300,000 already "on the line" for 1949 operations.

"New Deal" for Chicago

Flaherty said the Chicago Club would have a "new deal" from top to bottom, including a new name.

Red said he will install his favored single wingback offensive on the erstwhile T-formation Rocket club. Ironically, the present Rocket roster includes Halfback Dewey Proctor and Tackle Nate Johnson, two Yankee players Flaherty gave to the Rockets last year.

Flaherty has been coaching professionally since 1936, excepting a three-year hitch in the Navy from 1943 through 1945.

A former star end and assistant coach with the New York Giants, the Gonzaga product entered the head coaching ranks in 1936 with the Boston Redskins, and when that club became the Washington Redskins coached them from 1937 through 1942.

His 1936-37-40-42 Redskins won the National's Eastern Division titles and in 1937 and 1942 the team whipped the Chicago Rockets in the playoff for the league crown.

Both Flaherty's 1946 and 1947 Yankee teams won the All-America Eastern Section titles, but lost both league playoffs to the Cleveland Browns. At the outset of the 1948 season, Flaherty and Topping tangled over a floundering by the Yankees. Flaherty reportedly charged the club was weakned by player "gifts" to weaker league members, and in a huff parted company with the Yankees after the season's third game.

Flaherty was succeeded by Norman (Red) Strader, his Yankee assistant, who now directs the Brooklyn-New York entry, and will collide with his former understudy.

Coach Paul Brown of champion Cleveland jokingly commented that "it looks like the championship will be played in Cleveland or Chicago next fall. I'm glad to have Red back to butt heads again."

Kessing said the fate of McKeever was uncertain. The contract of the fiery former college coach at San Francisco, Cornell and Notre Dame now reverts to the league, which presumably can either buy him off or assign him to a lesser job.

McKeever, when informed of his ouster, declared:

"I really believe they got themselves a good man."

He said he had heard from the

Flaherty 1st, Best Coach of Redskins

Ray Flaherty, named yesterday to coach the Chicago Rockets, was the Washington Redskins' first and most successful coach.

At the helm of the 'Skins from 1937 through '42, he piloted them to two world championships, and one Eastern Division title. His worst season was 1941, when the 'Skins finished third in the Eastern Division with a 6-5 record.

His best year was his last, 1942, when the Redskins won 10 out of 11 games, and then whipped the Chicago Bears, 14-6, for the title. He resigned before the 1943 season to accept a commission in the Navy. Under his direction, the Redskins won 49, lost 17 and tied 3.

Hogan Uncorks 64 to Take Phoenix Lead

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 29 (AP).—Ben Hogan, the Hershey, Pa., golfing king, equalled the Phoenix Country Club competitive golf record of 64 today as he moved into a third round lead in the $10,000 Phoenix open with a 204.

Hogan finished with a pair of birdies as his approach shot landed within six feet of the pin on the seventeenth to give him a three. He chipped on the eighteenth within two feet of the flag.

Two years ago, when he won the tournament here with a 72-hole score of 270, Hogan also had an 18-hole score of 64—that time on the second round. He shares the record with several other professionals.

Pressing the former Texan, who figures to quit the winter circuit and settle down in Fort Worth, Tex., after the Phoenix open, was Jim Demaret, Ojai, Calif. He turned in a 65 today, even after missing a foot and a half putt on the sixteenth. Today's work left him with a 205 total.

Cary Middlecoff, Memphis (Tenn.) dentist, and Marty Furgol, Albuquerque, N. Mex., were red hot. They came in deadlocked at 207.

Sam Snead, who led the first round and slipped to second place at the end of 36 holes, again found his putting on the skids and wound up with a 209. He had an even par 71 today.

Deadlocked at 210 were Dick Metz, Virginia Beach, Va., who had a second round lead with 137; Lloyd Mangrum, Niles, Ill., former National Open titlist, and Bill Nary, Phoenix.

Eastern High, Central Win

Bob Selby, a 6-foot 3-inch junior, starting his first game for Eastern, and Jimmy Pantos, Central's high-scoring forward, sparked their teams to victory yesterday in the best-played Interhigh basketball double-header of the year at the Armory.

Selby pumped in two timely field goals and a pair of foul shots in the last four minutes as the Ramblers pulled away to a 32-27 win over McKinley Tech in the first game.

INTERHIGH LEAGUE STANDINGS

Coolidge	3	1	.750	Ch'mberlain	1	5	.167
McKinley	2	2	.500	Bell	0	5	.000

Pantos, who set the Interhigh scoring record of 26 points only two weeks ago, poured in 25 yesterday as the Vikings overpowered Western, 48-34, in the nightcap.

With their triumphs, second-place Eastern and third-place Central, continued to creep up on league-leading Wilson, which has won all four of its starts. Eastern's record is, 3-0, and Central's, 4-1.

The Eastern-Tech game was an interesting defensive duel with teams deadlocked at 23-all going into the last four minutes. The Ramblers came out of their shell quickly, sticking the unsung Mr. Selby in the pivot slot, and firing passes at him.

In his first opportunity to shoot, Selby drew a foul, made both of his shots, and pulled Eastern into a 25-23 lead. Thirty seconds later, he sank a set shot which widened the gap to 29-23.

With a minute left, Tech cut Eastern's lead to 29-27. Selby

Terp Team Wins Millrose Relay Event

New York, Jan. 29.—Seton Hall won the John G. Anderson trophy for the fastest collegiate relay mile tonight in the annual Millrose games at Madison Square Garden with a time of 3:20.9. Manhattan had the second best time (3:21.7) and the University of Maryland was third with 3:23.3. Winners of the other four races were Penn State, Army, St. Johns and Williams.

The Maryland team, consisting of Paul Ostrye, Mario Salvanelli, George McGowan and Ed Matthews, won over Fordham, Holy Cross and Boston College.

In the race won by Seton Hall, NYU was second and Georgetown third.

Georgetown placed second in the 2-mile relay event which was won by Manhattan in 7:49.7. William Mitchell of Georgetown finished fourth in the 60-yard high hurdles event which was won by Harrison Dillard of Cleveland. Edward Dugger of Dayton A. C. was second and James Gehrdes of Penn State third.

Dwyer's time tied the world indoor mark held jointly by Carey, Conwell and five other sprinters.

George Guida of Villanova, unbeaten this season, edged Frank Fox of Seton Hall by 2 yards in taking the Mel Sheppard 600 in 1:12.3.

Jim Gilhooley of New York University finished third with Dave Bolen of Colorado, the national AAU indoor champion at the distance, a fading last in the four-man field.

Harrison Dillard of Cleveland, Ohio, won the 60-yard high hurdies, as expected, stepping the high sticks in 7.3 seconds. Ed Dugger of Dayton, Ohio, edged Jim Gehrdes of Penn State, the Sugar Bowl champion, for second place with Bill Mitchell of Georgetown fourth.

Tom Comerford of Manhattan led all the way to take the 880-yard run for his fifth straight triumph of the season.

Comerford scored by 2 yards over Tom Dickey of Louisiana State, Sugar Bowl 800-meter winner, in 1:54.2.

Don Gehrmann of Wisconsin captured the Wanamaker mile, coming from behind with a terrific burst of speed to pass Willy Slykhuis of Holland less than ten yards from the tape and snatch the victory in his final strides in the smart time of 4:09.5.

The feature, held on a brand-new track in Madison Square Garden, established Gehrmann as the new king of the indoor milers, succeeding the retired Gil Dodds.

Bowlers Open 3d Tourney For Benefit of Boys' Clubs

The third annual bowling tournament for the benefit of the Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs will be held February 14-March 1, inclusive, on all alleys in the greater Washington area.

This event again will be sponsored by The Washington Post in cooperation with the Duckpin Bowling Alley Operators Association.

Entry fee will be 50 cents with 25 cents going into prize money and the other 25 cents to the Boys Clubs.

Full handicaps will be in effect with a scratch of 128 for men and 118 for women.

Only scores made in league games will be accepted for prize money awards.

A bowler may enter the tournament every time he rolls in a league game.

Bowlers who have not rolled 15 or more games in a league this season must roll from scratch.

Those who go in for the big pins (tenpins) also will be eligible to compete for a separate prize list.

Funds raised in Prince Georges, Arlington and Montgomery Counties will be devoted to recreational units in those counties.

N. C. State Squeezes In, 60-59; Villanova Has It Easy, 64-49

Georgetown and George Washington both lost last night in the first collegiate basketball double-header of the season at the National Guard Armory. Georgetown went down before unbeaten Villanova, 64-49, and George Washington was nosed out by North Carolina State, 60-59. A capacity throng of approximately 6000 saw the games.

Colonials' Late Rally Is Short

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

George Washington undermanned Colonials had the crowd on its feet by scoring two baskets in the last 32 seconds of an uphill battle against the clock, only to lose a heartbreaker, 60-59, to North Carolina State in the second game of the Armory twin bill.

Trailing 60-55 and apparently beaten, the Colonials launched a furious stretch drive.

With 32 seconds left, Ace Adler, lumbering 225-pound G. W. center, broke up the N. C. State "freeze" to grab the ball, charge half the length of the court and drop in a field goal.

With 7 seconds left, G. W. Co-captain Maynard Haithcock picked up an errant State pass and duplicated Adler's feat to bring the Colonials within a point of a tie.

It's a Long Seven Seconds

What happened in the remaining seevn seconds must have seemed like a long time to the visitors, who were trying to protect a 26-game Southern Conference Winning streak.

The Wolfpack tried a back court freeze, but Len Small of G. W., playing the ball, committed what the officials judged to be a flagrant foul. Jack McComas of State missed a foul shot and then took the ball out of bounds. As soon as the ball was passed in, Colonial Gene Witkin committed another foul.

Again State took the ball outside (all this in the final seven seconds, mind you,) and this time, it was Haithcock who did the fouling. There was no time for another foul to be called, the game ending as State passed the ball in for the fourth time.

The Colonials, beaten three times in eight conference games, saved a load of surprises for the defending champions.

Zone Defense Puzzling

The first was a zone defense which G. W. used for the first time this season. It caught the Wolfpack unprepared. Dick Dickey, N. C. State's All-America candidate, was unable to charge inside the Colonial pattern and didn't score his first field goal until six minutes had elapsed in the second half.

Second surprise was the play of the usually lead-footed Adler, who suddenly developed enough spring to outjump such worthies as 6-foot, 6-inch Paul Horvath, and 6-foot, 10½-inch Bob Hahn for the backboard rebounds.

Blond Johnny Moffatt, who Undefeated 'Cats Take 12th in Row

Villanova's winning streak was endangered for seven minutes last night in the first game of the Armory double-header.

That's when Paul Arizin dropped a field goal to give the Wildcats a 12-11 advantage. After that, the visitors displayed too much class and too much Arizin, and Georgetown became their twelfth successive victim, 64-49.

Villanova's smooth performance was applauded enthusiastically by the largest basketball crowd in Armory history. Paid attendance was 5308 and the overflow crowd numbered more than 6000.

In fact, 15 minutes after the first game started, hundreds in the packed lobby were turned away.

Arizin, unstoppable 6-foot-3-inch center who came to town the country's ninth leading scorer with an 18.8 average, fattened it with a superlative 24-point performance.

And it was he who rallied Villanova when the fighting Hoyas took the early lead.

With Johnny Brown driving in for two baskets and adding a foul, and Ray Corley and Vince Leddy adding goals, Georgetown jumped to a 9-4 lead after four minutes.

But then with the score 11-8, Georgetown, Villanova started feeding its big gun. The Wildcats went on a 11-point spree while holding Georgetown scoreless. Arizin made nine of them. Neither John Mazziotta nor John Kelly had any answer when the springy Villa-

Miami, Fla., Jan. 29—A first half blitzkrieg by the University of Maryland petered out in docile submission as Miami University came to win, 58-48, before 1581 in the Coliseum at Coral Gables here tonight.

Maryland started out looking like a sure thing to make it two in a row over Miami. With Ronnie Siegrist and Charley Mack making the most of slipshod Hurricane guarding up the middle, the Terrapins ran up a 21-10 score in the first 10 minutes.

At this point, Abe Friedman joined the Miami lineup and the defense tightened noticeably, allowing the Hurricanes to close it up to 28-22 at halftime.

Brain Injury Healed

Don Black Signs With Tribe For Same Salary as in 1948

Cleveland, Jan. 29 (AP).—Don Black, the pitcher who was struck out by a serious injury, came back today.

Bill Veeck, president of the Cleveland Indians, took a look at the latest medical report and signed the Tribe hurler to a 1949 contract.

With a big grin, Black signed on the dotted line for a salary that was the "same as last year." The figure wasn't announced.

"I couldn't very well ask for a raise, could I?" quipped the Indian pitcher.

Veeck had refused to listen to Black's entreaties until today. He maintained he could not take any responsibilty for placing a player's life in jeopardy, and had told Black that, while he hoped for his recovery, he could not sign him as a player.

Black was at the plate in Cleveland Stadium September 13, against the St. Louis Browns, as the Tribe drove down the homestretch toward the American League pennant and the world championship. Something snapped and he collapsed.

Doctors found he had suffered an aneurysm—a broken artery—at the back of the brain. For a time he was critically ill. From a hospital bed he heard the Indians were having a Don Black Night. (He received more than $40,000), and later listened to the World Series by radio, but did not fully comprehend what was going on. Braden operated and the headaches ceased. By December 23 Black was "home for Christmas." One of his two daughters, 6-year-old Donna, had written Santa Claus to bring him home for the big day.

Dr. Braden reported to Veeck today that the latest X-ray examinations showed there was "no possibility of any recurrence of the injury."

The surgeon said the artery condition had existed from birth, but that the operation had made Black "better than he was 10 years ago, except that his long hospitalization weakened him."

Cuban Cute But No Puncher

Gavilan May Have Outhustled Ike But He Certainly Didn't Hurt Him

By Red Smith

Copyright, 1949, N. Y. Herald Tribune

NEW YORK, JAN 29—In 1948, Ike Williams was the Fighter of the Year because the New York boxing writers said so. On Friday evening, Kid Gavilan became the conqueror of Ike Williams because two judges in Madison Square Garden said so. Therefore, Kid Gavilan is the Fighter of the Decade, or something. This, kids, is logic, pure as ever was except that it ain't necessarily so.

It ain't necessarily so that Gavilan, an able welterweight, whipped the lightweight champion. Ruby Golldstein, the referee, didn't think so. He scored four rounds for Williams, four for Gavilan, called two rounds even and gave each fighter eight points. The menial at this typewriter didn't think so. The score here was five rounds for each man and eight points apiece.

It ain't necessarily so that Williams must, on the word of two good judges named Harold Barnes and Artie Schwartz, abandon all thought of stepping up into the welterweight division to make passes at Sugar Robinson's title.

It does not necessarily follow that because Williams couldn't beat Gavilan, who couldn't beat Robinson last summer, Ike would stand no chance with Sugar Ray.

Fact is, the Williams-Gavilan bout was a far better fight than the Gavilan-Robinson turn in Yankee Stadium last August. Losing a split decision to the Cuban muchacho, Ike looked at least as good as Robinson did winning, and maybe better.

Ike couldn't stiffen Gavilan. Neither could Robinson. Neither has anyone else.

THE QUESTION OF Williams going grailing among the welterweight dragons rests in the laps of the gods—a pair of tabloid dieties named Mr. Blinky Palermo, who owns and operates Ike, and Mr. Coeur De Leon Rains, chairman of the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission.

Under New York rules, Ike couldn't fight for the welterweight championship without relinquishing his lightweight title. It is understood, however, that no such sacrifice would be demanded by Coeur De Leon Rains, who is noted for his fearless docility with Herman Taylor, the Philadelphia promoter.

There are several reasons why Ike has no wish to yield up his lightweight title without a struggle. He is a natural 135-pounder to whom weight presents no problem. As a kid he revered the memory of Joe Gans, dreamed of succeeding to the throne Gans had occupied. Most important, welterweights are worth no more money on the hoof or dressed for market than a lightweight.

If Williams should go to Philadelphia and add Robinson's title to his own championship, the chances are the New York Commission would take no immediate action. Eddie Eagan is a confirmed believer in crossing no distant bridges. He wouldn't have to make with any ukase until Ike wanted to defend one title or the other in New York.

GAVILAN'S victory-by-fiat was popular with the crowd because the Cuban was the underdog in the betting and because he is the flashy sort of operator who looks like a killer from any seat more than five rows back.

He is a real cutie, this flatnosed, flat-footed veteran who is supposed to have won 66 amateur bouts at the age of 11. He takes punches well, but he doesn't have to take many because he is always moving and his bobbing head is as difficult to hit as a three-horse parlay.

You had to be close to the ring to see how artistically Williams picked off punches with his gloves, blocked them with forearms, elbows, and shoulders, rode with them or rolled away from them. He is a craftsman of the first order, fascinating to watch as he stalks an opponent, hooking solidly, his venomous right hand cocked.

Gavilan's punches swirl like snow flurries and land with only slightly greater force. The Kid bothered Williams and outbustled him and tired him but he never hurt him. Gavilan is infinitely more effective in the gallery than in the ring.

IN THE LAST ROUND, for example, Williams landed heavily to the head, then Gavilan kicked up a blinding squall of leather that had the crowd gibbering. He must have thrown hundreds of punches in that final half minute and if a single one landed it was unseen from this seat. Yet that harmless tornado gave him the round, and the fight, on the cards of both judges.

Well, a fine time was had by all. This was one of an unbroken successions of highly entertaining shows which have brought steadily increasing business to the garden since Harry Markson became chairman of the program committee.

The rising graph of gate receipts and public satisfaction suggests that Harry is either the smartest promoter extant, or the luckiest. From the fans' point of view, there is no difference. Anyhow the winter's boxoffice figures make one fact apparent, the remedy for boxing's business recession is more matches like those we've been seeing.

The Kid's Way of Taking Decision

IS HE THE WINNER?—Kid Gavilan, of Havana, looks like anything but the winner in this picture, as Ike Williams (right) of Trenton, N. J., lightweight champion, tosses a right at the Cuban in the final round. But Gavilan, shaking off Williams' right-hand punches, won the 10-round split decision in a nontitle fight in Madison Square Garden

EITHER HAGERSTOWN or Cumberland will have to conflict with harness racing here. Cumberland is the logical choice being too far away to be affected . . . Charles Town must buck both Oxon Hill and Laurel trotters but, despite the general opinion, betting there held up when the West Virginia course was conflicting with Laurel Raceway last year . . . Chicago Dr., a favorite sprinter, is being retired to C. F. Heinicke's Maryland breeding farm. Despite being raced he has already sired seven fillies and colts due to race in 1950 . . . Calumet Farms has enough horses named for the $50,000 Widener (Februry 26 at Hialeah) to stage a pretty good race by themselves—Free America, Fervent, Faultless, Coaltown, Beau Dandy and Whirl Blast . . . Most of Galt Davis' horses are wintering at the Myrtle Beach, S. C., track . . . With Bowie running until December 3 this year, Charles Town probably will cut its normal 18-day December meeting to 15 days, according to Secretary Leeds Riely . . . James Lee, a colored jockey, holds the national record for riding all the winners on a program— six at Churchill Downs June 5, 1907, other boys have ridden six and seven winners but never the entire program . . . At Marlboro, September 11, 1930, Johnny Adams rode six winners, all the mounts he had on an eight-race card.

Chapman's victory gave him a leg on the Ponce De Leon Cup.

Howard Wins Again, 41-37

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 29.—Howard University won a rough C. I. A. A. game here tonight, 41-37 from Virginia State College. Bison Walter Wright's 14 points led the scoring as three Howard players and one member of the home team fouled out. Howard has now won six of eight C. I. A. A. games.

Poor Lions Mauled, 14-4

Cleveland, Jan. 29.—The Cleveland Barons remained in a tie for first place in the Western Division race tonight by handing the Washington Lions their thirty-eighth setback of the season, 14-4, and a new American hockey loop record for setbacks in a row—14.

The Lions, stunned by the early offensive blasts of the winners, were never in the game. The winners rapped home six goals before Harry Dick made it 6 to 1 at 18:57 of the first period.

Chirp Brenchley made it 6 to 2 before the avalanche of tallies beban again and when the third period started, it was Cleveland by 9-to-2 margin.

Johnny Holota and Freddie Thurier paced the winners with four and three goals apiece. Thurier's "hat trick" enabled the Cleveland center to tie the all-time American Hockey League mark set by Les Cunningham, former Cleveland center, at 233 goals.

Washington plays at St. Louis Sunday night.

Card Boxers, Syracuse Meet Here Saturday

A smart Syracuse University boxing team that lost only one match last year will try to resume its winning ways next Saturday night when it comes to Catholic University to help the Cards launch their 1949 campaign.

The home team will be up against an experienced team with a couple of matches under its belt, but Coach LaFond's pupils think they'll be ready for the test. Syracuse held Miami to a 4-4 draw in their Orange Bowl battle.

Jimmy Rollier, 165-pound Eastern champion, Julie Levine, knockout 175-pounder, and Marty Crandell, a rugged heavyweight, are Syracuse's top trio.

LaFond has had his men training since mid-December. The Cards were late getting started last year and had a couple of shiners administered by Virginia and Maryland before settling down to win four in a row.

Fights Stribling at Turner's

Smug Hursey's Back Where He Started

It seems like yesterday, but it's been two years since that moon-faced kid, Smuggy Hursey, was knockin' em stiff at Turner's Arena.

He bowled over Jimmy Mandell, flattened Howie Brodt and polished off Charlie Hayes. Then he shifted to Uline Arena and gave Billy Arnold the whipping of his life in a 10-rounder they're still talking about. Next victim was Sonny Horne, the cutey.

Then came Griffith Stadium and he mowed down Aaaron Perry, Bee Bee Washington and Danny Kapilow, the latter with the first punch he threw in the first round. Then came another fight with Kapilow. That was a draw.

Next was Tommy Bell, of old with stiff jabs and a walloping right. They said Young Smuggy was in over his head with Bell and they were right. At the end Hursey's eyes were closed, his lips were puffed and Bell was pleading with the referee to stop it.

Was that the beginning of the end for the Smug, the kid who earned more than $40,000 in less than a year of scrapping? The evidence says yes. He's won only a couple of fights since that ill-fated September night of 1947, one over an inept Cecil Hudson at the ball park and not even Smuggy was proud of that victory.

He left Washington, latched himself on to Henry Armstrong and went West. He picked up two fights, lost both and now he's back home again, ready to start over.

Home Monday night he'll climb back into that same Turner's Arena ring—this time against Ken Stribling, another local boy.

He's rested for two months, "been tryin' to get back that zip," he says. "I got going too fast for a young fighter, but I know how to handle myself now. Wanna stay here and get back on top."

The opportunity is here. But if he loses to Stribling, he'll be scratched off the list . . . this time for good.

Fulks Leads Philly to Win Over Knicks

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—Joe Fulks and Eddie Sadowski, Philadelphia's high scoring twins, led the Warriors to 78-73 Basketball Association of America victory over the New York Knickerbockers today at Madison Square Garden.

Fulks, the circuit's leading scorer, dropped in 27 points to take high scoring honors. Sadowski was not far behind with 22. Carl Braun led the losers with 14. Ray Lumpp, newest member of the Knicks, collected 12 markers in his home debut.

The Knicks, after trailing, 44-39, at halftime, managed to pull even, 47-47, early in the third period, but with Fulks leading the way, the Warriors opened up a 10-point bulge, then checked a fourth period rally by New York to down their Eastern rivals for the second time in three days.

Lindsay, Kirby Gain Golf Final

Miami, Fla., Jan. 29 (AP).—Marjorie Lindsay of Decatur, Ill., stroked her way into the finals of the seventeenth annual Helen Lee Doherty women's amateur golf tournament today and will meet Dorothy Kirby of Atlanta for the title.

Miss Lindsay, who has been playing golf 13 years but never matched strokes with the veteran Atlanta miss in a tournament, ousted Medalist Peggy Kirk of Findlay, Ohio, 2 and 1, while Miss Kirby outlasted Claire Doran of Lakewood, Ohio, to win 1-up in 19 holes.

Miss Lindsay went out in 39 and held a 1-up lead at the turn after trailing to the sixth green. She fattened her margin to four at the thirteenth but lost the next two and halved the following two to win. She missed a birdie by an inch on the tenth, birdied the eleventh with an easy putt and canned a 30-footer on the thirteenth for another bird.

Miss Kirby turned the first nine 2-up but lost the tenth, gained it back on the twelfth and lost the fourteenth. They matched strokes to the eighteenth where both were trapped.

Miss Doran won the hole to send the match the extra distance. On the nineteenth Miss Kirby rammed home a 20-foot putt and Miss Doran barely missed a 17-footer to end it.

Cardinals Sell Pitcher Murry Dickson to Pittsburgh

Schoolboy Notes

Nats Sign Cribbins, Eastern Ace

THE NATS plucked a first base prospect out of the local high school ranks yesterday when they signed Marty Cribbins, Eastern graduate of last June, to a Charlottee, N. C., contract.

Marty is a right-handed hitter and fielder, who batted .400 for Eastern and the Snug Harbor sandlot team last summer. He stands 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighs 170 pounds. He reports to the Tri-State League club at Winter Gardens, Fla., on March 1.

Most likely Armstrong Tech High athlete to succeed is Avatus Stone. If the 6 foot 3 inch senior doesn't make good in professional basketball, baseball, football, or tennis (he's proficient at all those sports) he can play in an orchestra, or enter his paintings in an art gallery. He's an accomplished saxophone player, and a promising water color painter . . . Bobby McLindon, whose two field goals in the last minute beat Gonzaga for St. John's last Thursday, is the nephew of Gerald Burns, star of Western's last Interhigh championship basketball team of 1934 . . . The Landon basketball player treated most gently by his teammates and coach is Lanny Banfield. His dad, Paul L. Banfield, is the school's headmaster. . .

THOSE SPECTATORS who've watched Central's basketball team in its practice scrimmages during the past three weeks, say the Vikings will be even tougher to beat from here on in. The big reason is Lou Glickfield, who recently moved to Washington from Long Island, where he was a basketball star at Long Beach High School. He becomes eligible Monday. Coach Gabe Ferazzi paired Lou against Jimmy Pantos in a scrimmage session last week, and Glickfield not only held Pantos down, but outscored him . . . Sam Wright, Phelps Vocational sprint star, who graduates Monday, will hurry out to Denver University next week to continue his studies. Denver presented Sam with an athletic scholarship . . .

Providence Wins In Overtime, 91-85

Providence, R. I., Jan 29 (AP).—Six straight points by Le Push, after Ernie Calverley's free throw 35 seconds before the end of regulation play had forced the game into overtime, gave the Providence Steam Rollers a lead they clung to for a 91-85 Basketball Association of America triumph over the Boston Celtics tonight before 3680 spectators.

Boston's Gene Stump walked off with scoring honors as he netted 28, most of them on sets from outside.

Stags Beat Jets, 87-81

St. Louis, Jan. 29 (AP).—The Chicago Stags won a rough overtime contest from the Indianapolis Jets tonight, 87-81, in the first half of a Basketball Association of American double header.

The score stood 75-75 at the end of the fourth period, the Jets knotting the count on Jack Eskridge's long shot. In the overtime the Stags showed greater stamina and Ed Mikan poured in the last five points to pace the victory.

Sidwell Wins, 41-33

Sidwell Friends defeated Georgetown Prep, 41-33, in an eighth-graders' basketball game yesterday on the Friends' court. McGhan was high scorer for Friends with 11 points.

Franklin Leads Bowlers

Kenny Franklin knocked down 383 pins to lead his Veterans I team to a 2-1 victory over Veterans II in a D. C. Recreation Bowling League match at Strike-Rite Alleys. The match broke a tie between the two teams and gave Veterans I the first-half championship.

Deal First Completed By Saigh

Pittsburgh, Jan. 29 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates today bought Pitcher Murry Dickson from the St. Louis Cardinals for an undisclosed sum.

A. Roy Hamey, Pirate general manager, announced the transaction which brought the slim righthander to Pittsburgh. The deal was completed with Fred M. Saigh, new Card principal stockholder.

Dickson had spent five years with the Cards. He was in the armed services in 1944-45. Dickson first came up from Houston of the Texas League in 1939. He was optioned to Columbus of the American Association. He returned to St. Louis to stick in 1942.

His best year was in 1946, when he won 15 and lost 6 to lead the National League in winning percentage. His earned run average that year was 2.89. He won 12 and lost 16 in 1948, appearing in 42 games and starting 29.

Now 31, he's 5 feet 10½ inches tall and weighs 157 pounds. His off-season home is in Leavenworth, Kans.

At St. Louis, Saigh said the deal was completed before he succeeded Hannegan as president of the Redbirds.

"I repeat that I'm in baseball to stay and to win, not to establish a selling mart," Saigh said.

"The original thought behind the sale of Dickson was that Manager (Eddie) Dyer would be forced to go with younger pitchers next season."

Dyer, preparing to leave for his home at Houston, Tex., said: "It's true that a manager is inclined to lean toward his more established players. I'll have to find a starting replacement now from among one of our young pitchers—Jim Hearn, Ken Johnson, Bill Reeder, Kurt Krieger and Cloyd Boyer."

Referring to Dickson, Dyer said, "the last two years he hadn't had the kind of seasons we thought he'd have, but he's a good competitor, always eager and willing, and I believe he'll help the Pittsburgh club."

Boudreau is really having the honors heaped on him this year. In addition to the New York award, he was voted "Athlete of the Year" in the Associated Press poll and was named the American League's most valuable player.

It's Long Drop From Indians To Nats but Robinson's Not Mad

THE ROBINSONS—MOM, POP AND ONE-YEAR-OLD EDWARD 3d

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

BALTIMORE, JAN. 29.—First Baseman Eddie Robinson ain't mad over the deal which sent him from the high and mighty Cleveland Indians to the lowly Nats.

"It suited me fine," he was saying at his home here today. "I mean that. I'm happy."

It's difficult to believe that anyone who had been evicted from the home of baseball's world champions and dispatched to a team in the tenement section of the league would be anything but peeved, but Robbie says he isn't.

"I feel I'll be welcome at Washington. I wasn't at Cleveland, or at least I was given the impression I wasn't. Last season was the roughest I've ever spent in baseball."

THE FURORE and excitement in Cleveland attending the Tribe's stretch drive didn't upset Bobbie, but the tactics of Manager Lou Boudreau did.

"He and I just didn't seem to hit it off," Robinson said. "I was in and out of the lineup so often that I scarcely knew from day to day whether I'd play. It broke my spirit, I guess."

There was the time in New York, for instance, when Boudreau called on Hal Peck, who, like Robinson, is a left-handed batter, to take the third strike for Robinson who had swung and missed at two of left-hander Tommy Byrnes' offerings.

"That climaxed the whole business. I had gotten a hit off Byrnes in the first inning and driven in a run. If Lou had sent up a right-hander to swing for me, I wouldn't have been so mad, but when he sent Peck up, that did it. Peck took a third strike."

ROBINSON says he sensed he wasn't the most popular man with Boudreau as far back as spring training. "Lou didn't even bother to ask me how my leg was after I'd been operated on during the winter.

"Don't misunderstand. I don't want to leave the impression that I must be babied, but I do think a manager ought to be at least mildly interested in one of his players. Apparently Lou wasn't in my case."

Robbie's welcome to Washington has already been manifested by Clark Griffith. Griff gave him a raise over his 1949 contract.

"I feel certain I wouldn't have gotten one if I had remained with Cleveland."

MANAGER JOE KUHEL is highly pleased over the deal which brought Robinson, Specks Klieman and Joe Haynes to the Nats for Mickey Vernon and Early Wynn.

"I'm not interetsed in any differences Boudreau and Robinson may have had," Kuhel pointed out. "Robbie is a big fellow with a lot of power. He'll help our attack. He can powder that ball. His fielding is adequate, and his spirit, from my observations, is fine. We're glad to have him."

Off to a great start, batting over .300, Robbie reinjured his leg in June last year and was out of action for three weeks. He finished the year batting .254, but drove in 84 runs and clipped 16 homers.

That's almost as many as the whole Nat team hit last year. No wonder he feels he'll be welcome at Griffith Stadium.

then stepped in to intercept a Tech pass, dribble half the length of the floor and drop in a lap-up to sew up the win for Eastern. Selby scored eight points altogether.

Central Pulls Away

Pantos enjoyed one of the greatest games of his career in the second game, but if he hadn't made such a poor showing on the foul-line, Central could have coasted home at the end. Pantos sank only three out of 13 foul-line tries.

As it was, despite its 14-point victory, Central wasn't a shoo-in until the last 5 minutes. The score was tied on six different occasions, and the lead changed hands eight times. Going into the last quarter, Central held a 32-31 lead.

Central pulled away in the final minutes by stopping Western's Bucky Poston, who had scored 16 points, and by feeding Pantos, who scored 5 points, and Franny Gleason, who added 4 in the late rush. Terry Gregory, reserve guard, gets the credit for stopping Poston, who had been unstoppable.

nova center would pivot, leap up and shoot.

Villanova backed Arizin's scoring with Brooks Ricca's 17 points and a furious defensive game in which they never let up on the Hoyas.

Georgetown was game, though, and trailed by only 34-24 at halftime even after Leo Wolf, Ricca and shy Raiken dropped field goals shortly before the intermission.

In the second half, Arizin again started Villanova on its way with a field goal and a foul. Then the Wildcats varied their attack with Ricca, Sabol and Hannan doing all the scoring until they were ahead, 49-32.

It was Tommy O'Keefe, who kept the Hoyas from being completely outdistanced: Scoreless in the first half, O'Keefe packed seven baskets and two fouls in the last 20 minutes.

In the end, Arizin's 24 points told the story. He missed only 8 of 18 field goal attempts.

At Armory

Two Ticket Takers for 6000 Fans

BIG-TIME COLLEGE basketball here got a big-time reception at the Armory last night—from the public, that is.

Preparations for it were sad, indeed. While the overflow crowd of more than 6000 milled around the entrance, exactly two ticket takers were admitting a thin trickle.

When the people did get inside there were no programs available. They weren't printed because the large gathering wasn't anticipated. Then, both games were interrupted when the game clock went awry.

Despite the amateurish touches, everybody seemed to be having a good time.

A big assist for getting the crowd in a good humor went to Police Boys Clubs No. 4 and No. 11. Their 90-pound teams put on a game between halves, and it attracted as much attention as either of the main attractions.

THE MIGHTIEST MITE, 55-pound Johnny Guice, drew the biggest hand of the night when he dropped two baskets. Johnny, all of 3-foot-6, lives at 491 1st st. sw.

His No. 4 club lost, 20-18, but little Johnny had the satisfaction of getting more applause than All-America Dick Dickey and Villanova's man, Paul Arizin.

Unquestionably, Arizin was the outstanding ball player of the night. He's only a junior but already has attracted the eye of Eddie Gottlieb, Philadelphia Warrior coach.

Al Severance, veteran Villanova coach, was glad to get Georgetown out of the way. He considers Washington his jinx town.

Severance shudders when he thinks of this week's card. His Wildcats have to meet Duquesne, Loyola of Chicago, Baldwin-Wallace and Bowling Green in five nights. If they win 'em all, they'll have a chance to be rated No. 1 nationally.

played high school ball at McKinley Tech four years ago and has been starring for G. W. for two seasons, also saved his best game for the Wolfpack. He was a phantom, dodging driving, feinting and feeding Haithcock who led G. W. scorers with 15 points.

It was Moffat who brought the crowd to its feet at the outset with a foul goal which put GW in front, 1-0. They hardly had time to sit down the rest of the game.

By the time the first half had expired the score was tied three times and the lead had changed hands seven times. The Wolfpack took a 32-31 lead into its dressing room at half time, thanks to a field goal by Warren Cartier and a foul point by McComas in the last 30 seconds.

Rested and apparently invigorated, G. W. at the beginning of the second half showed its best form. Before the Wolfpack could catch its breath, little Gene Witkins had whipped in a field goal and a pair of foul shots, Moffatt and Haithcock had followed with layups, and the Colonials were sporting a 39-32 advantage.

The G. W. lead lasted eight minutes. Then Dickey decided to hit for his first field goal to again put N. C. State in front, 43-42.

With nine minutes left, lead stopped playing see-saw, and the vistors took the lead to keep, 47-46, on a 25-foot set shot by Sam Ranzino.

That shot seemed to bring life into the Wolfpack, and paced by Ranzino, who pumped in three more field goals, they took their 60-55 lead into the last 32 seconds.

Ranzino wound up with 15 points to share scoring honors with Haithcock.

After Nine Years at Temple

Austin College Signs Morrison As Head Football Coach

Sherman, Tex., Jan. 29 (AP).—Ray Morrison today became head football coach of Austin College. He resigned last Thursday as head mentor at Temple University.

Morrison formerly coached at Southern Methodist University and Vanderbilt.

He succeeds Will Pierce as coach of Austin College, which is a member of the Texas Conference. Pierce resigned December 6 after being coach two years.

The length of contract and salary were not disclosed by Austin College officials.

Morrison is to report here March 1 to start spring training.

Austin College last season lost nine games and won two and in 1947 won two, lost six and tied one. It is in a conference with Abilene Christian College, McMurry and Southwestern University.

Austin College this year is celebrating its 100th year of existence. It is a Presbyterian school.

Morrison had been coach at Temple for nine years, going to the Philadelphia school after successful hitches at Vanderbilt and Southern Methodist. He was never very successful at Temple, his teams in only two years finishing on the winning side.

In 1941 Temple won seven and lost two and in 1945 the Owls won seven and lost one. Those were his best years.

His 5-year contract had one more year to run at Temple when he resigned.

Morrison began his coaching career at Southern Methodist in 1915. He was there until 1921 when he went to Vanderbilt for a year. He was at S. M. U. from 1922 through 1934. He remained at Vanderbilt until 1940.

Winner Holds Lead Throughout

Arcadia, Calif., Jan. 29 (AP).—Ace Admiral won the $100,000 Santa Anita Maturity before 52,000 fans today, with Rose Beam second and Dinner Gong third.

Ace Admiral, leading from wire to wire, ran the mile and one-quarter in 2:02 1/5.

Vulcan's Forge was fourth in the field of 12 in this race reserved for 4-year-olds.

Ace Admiral, owned by Mrs. Elizabeth Graham of New York, collected a net purse of $85,200.

Wins by Half Length

The winner paid $6.70, $3.40 and $2.50. Rose Beam returned $6.20 and $4.10; Dinner Gong, $3.70.

Jockey Johnny Gilbert was aboard Ace Admiral.

Make-up Man broke on top, but Ace Admiral quickly overhauled him and went on to win by a half length over Rose Beam.

Make-up Man broke on top, but Ace Admiral quickly took the lead. Rolling down the stretch the first time, Solidarity moved behind his entry mate, with Rose Beam and the handsome Vulcan's Forge just behind.

The pounding procession remained that way around the clubhouse turn, down the backstretch and around the far turn. Solidarity began to fade, and Rose Beam, Vulcan's Forge and Dinner Gong began to move up.

Vulcan's Forge proved undertrained for the route. Dave Gorman sent him at Ace Admiral and for a moment it looked like a real challenge. The Vulcan couldn't hold on, however, and up came Rose Beam and Dinner Gong for a crack at the pace setter.

Neither could make it and the Admiral sailed home, half a length to the good for a convincing triumph.

Rose Beam won $20,000 for second place, Dinner Gong $15,000 and Vulcan's Forge $10,000.

"The colt ran a fine race and he's going to be hard to beat in the Santa Anita Handicap," said Gilbert as his two youngsters, Johanna and Donald, 11 and 13, stood in the winner's circle to pose with their father and Ace Admiral.

"When the drive to the wire came, he showed he had something in reserve."

"We had no excuse," added Caffarella. "We had a good shot at the leader all the way. Rose Beam hung slightly in the last 50 yards."

No excuses were voiced by Arcaro or Gorman, either. Gorman said he believed Vulcan's Forge might have won if Trainer Don Cameron had another week of training. "I think he'll win the big handicap," Gorman concluded.

The handle on the big race was $514,776. Last year the handle on the Maturity was $590,313. The 1948 crowd was 57,500.

The betting handle for the eight-race program totaled $2,847,663. A year ago it was $3,320,411.

Two West Australian girls, Burna Johnstone and Olympic Runner Shirley Strickland, had Blankers-Koen well beaten when she fell. Johnstone won by inches from Strickland in 11.2 seconds.

Despite her skinned knees, Mrs. Blankers-Koen won the 80-meter hurdles in the Australian record time of 11.5 seconds. Doctors later ordered Mrs. Blankers-Koen to take a complete rest.

league of his replacement, but still was in the dark over what settlement would be made of the final two years of his contract.

McKeever has no immediate plans for hunting a new coaching job.

"Smilin'" Ed faced an abrupt, if temporary close to a nomadic coaching career. A product of Texas Tech, he had head coaching flings at Notre Dame (in the 1944 absence of Frank Leahy), Cornell (1945-46) and at San Francisco in 1947.

McKeever's departure from San Francisco for his Rocket job last year caused sharp repercussions on the West Coast as result of an "open letter" Ed left school authorities on the eligibility of San Francisco footballers.

The furore caused by McKeever's "finger-pointing" at his former athletes nearly upset his Rocket coaching job at the outset. Owner Tony Morabito of the San Francisco '49ers demanded that the league act against the new coach, but the matter was ironed out behind closed doors.

McKeever was an assistant coach at Texas Tech from 1935 through 1938. He hooked up as Leahy's assistant at Boston College, serving there in 1939 and 1940, and followed the present Irish coach to Notre Dame in 1941 where he remained until 1944.

Bowling Hereabouts

BOWLING in Washington will chip in with help for the March of Dimes with action on tap on three different funds today.

The lefties will battle the righties at Brookland, starting at 8 tonight. Bob Guethler, Jack Barkley, Harry Aiken, Don Cost, and Joe Wells will try to uphold the honor of the southpaws against Cletus Parnell, Ray Watson, Joe Harrison, Julie Singer, and Karl Gochenour.

At Lucky Strike at seven, Yards and Docks, Navy Department League pacesetters, will meet a Public Buildings League all-star outfit, composed of Lou Freschi, John Hardesty, Al Spivey, Steve Brodie, and Conrad Hilton. The Yardmen will be represented by Joe Furr, Jim Malarkey, Marvin Lewis, Ted Giro, and John Madison.

Penn Recreation also comes across for the polio fund today. Manager Kramer has come up with a three-fifths handicap, 130 scratch tourney. First prize is $100, and entry fee is five bucks. Over 100 keglers are expected to compete.

Some 200 are expected to toe the line for the one-ball competition at Rosslyn, where a $150 first prize is the big plum. Last week 185 competed and improvement is expected. Mount Rainier and Petworth are offering $50 first prize in one-ball tournaments, with the latter lanes giving free entries to everyone rolling an 82.

The Wiltse King Memorial Tournament, which holds its thirteenth renewal today, has attracted a flock of local aces who will journey to Baltimore for the rolloffs.

Hippensteil Rated Top D. C. Netman

District of Columbia tennis rankings, released yesterday at the annual luncheon of the District Tennis Association, showed Air Forces Capt. Robin Hippenstiel as the top singles player in the District.

Hippenstiel's claim to the honor was backed by his District singles title and suported also by victories last year in the Air Forces and Federal Employes tournaments.

The war-seasoned flyer lost a finals match in the Middle-Atlantic to Barney Welsh, perennial local net star, but Welsh passed up the District tourney, which under long-standing association custom, determines the top singles spot. Welsh was left out of the rankings entirely for insufficient local competition.

Jim Thackara and Davy Johnson were ranked in that order behind Hippenstiel.

Gil Bogley, all alone in local junior tennis, cracked the mens' rankings for the first time, sharing sixth place with Eddie Miller. The 17-year-old prodigy went even further in the mens' doubles, all the way to first place with partner Davy Johnson. Bogley still has a year of eligibility left in junior competition.

Middies Beat Bucknell, 56-41

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 29 (AP).—Navy recovered its scoring punch in the second half tonight to gain its eighth basketball victory of the season at the expense of Bucknell, 56-41.

The Middies were never headed, but they were only leading by three points at intermission, 26-23. Twice during that close first half, the Bisons pulled to within one point of Navy.

The Middies turned on the pressure in the second half and slowly pulled ahead. Sophomores Bill Lawrence and Pat Corrigan gave the Navy 10 points in two minutes about midway of the second half to clinch the contest.

Willie Wilson led the Navy attack again with six field goals and three foul shots for 15 points. The rest of the points on the Navy side were well distributed.

For Navy, it was the eighth win as agianst four losses and the fifth victory in a row.

Green Baize Wins Easily At Hialeah

Hialeah, Fla., Jan. 29 (AP).—Showing natural improvement over her recent winter debut, Walter M. Jefford's Green Baize easily led home a classy field of 3-year-old fillies in today's $11,825 Jasmine Stakes.

Victorious in three of her four 1948 starts, including the filly division of Belmont Park's National Stallion Stakes, the bay daughter of Case Ace completed a swift 6 furlongs in 1:10 3/5 as she defeated W. J. Walden's Fighting Fan by 4 lengths.

An estimated crowd of 16,600 saw the wginner earn the $8100 first money for a liberal payoff of $16.70.

Nell K. Disappoints

The disappointment of the dash for "sophomore" fillies was Jim Norris' 9-to-10 favorite, Nell K., which recently beat a similar field. This time she was third all the way and lost the place by a half length.

Nell K. is the fairy-tale filly which has brought belated glory to pauper parents. Her sire, Crowfoot, was a $3000 yearling and failed to earn that amount. Her dam, Sea Elf, cost $450 as a yearling and never even got to the races.

Nell K. won two of five starts as a juvenile, boasting a score in Aqueduct's Astarita Stakes. In her recent successful winter bow, Fighting Fan was second, Bea Right third and Green Baize a tiring fourth. Bea Right finished fifth today.

Alsab's Day Last

Mrs. Albert Sabath's Day, leading money-winning juvenile filly of 1948 with $66,970, finished a slow starting last for the second time this winter. She never got started in the race won by Nell K. here and the same applied this afternoon.

Fighting Fan broke in front in the Jasmine and Green Baize set right out after her, with Nell K. outfooting the others. The positions remained that way to the stretch, where the Jeffords color-bearer swept around Fighting Fan and drew out impressively. Fighting Fan just lasted to stave off Nell K. Sub was fourth.

The winner, Sub, and Alsab's Day are named for the $20,000 added mile and a furlong Black Helen Handicap of March 2.

Just before the Jasmine, Calumet Farm's Free America, rated a strong Widener and McLennan threat, lost a photo decision to his stablemate, Pep Well, in his first outing since running last and bleeding in Belmont's Lawrence Realization last September. The race today was expected to put Free America on keener edge for coming stakes.

Army Schedule Includes 3 Foes From Last Year

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 29 (AP).—Only three of last year's opponents are on the 1949 Army football schedule announced today by Lieut. Col. O. C. Krueger, graduate manager of athletics at the Military Academy.

The Cadets will meet Navy, Harvard and Pennsylvania—the three teams which gave them their stiffest opposition in 1948. Their longest trip will take them to Ann Arbor to meet Michigan, the country's No. 1 team of the past season.

Krueger said the site of the Army-Navy game, traditional finale of both service schools, still is undetermined. The game is expected, however, to return to Municipal Stadium in Philadelphia, where it usually is played.

The 1949 Army football schedule:
September 24—Davidson at West Point.
October 1—Penn State at West Point; 8—Michigan at Ann Arbor; 15—Harvard at Cambridge; 22—Columbia at West Point; 29—Virginia Military Institute at West Point.
November 5—Fordham at New York; 12—Pennsylvania at Philadelphia; 19—Open; 26—Navy at site to be determined.

Ice-Capades Freeze Out Our Caps

ICE-CAPADES TIME in Washington means a temporary eviction for the Washington Caps. The Basketball Association of America schedule makers, taking advantage of the Caps' dispossession, will send the Caps into action six times in the next eight days.

Only one of the six, against New York next Saturday, will be played in the friendly environs of Uline Arena. For the rest the Caps get shunted around from Minneapolis to Indianapolis to Chicago to St. Louis to Fort Wayne. First stop is in Minneapolis tonight.

Everybody's in Act

Six of the 10 wrestlers, all veteran performers, already have been rounded up for the wrestle royal which will be staged in Turner's Arena next Wednesday night. Those already cast include Henry Piers, Bibber McCoy, Joe Kamaroff, Marvin Mercer, Hans Steinke and Emanuel Bonica.

Lions Add Two

The Washington Lions, also bereft of a home temporarily, will be back here Friday night against the Philadelphia Rockets with two new faces in the lineup. George Robinson, left-winger obtained in the deal that sent Ab DeMarco to Buffalo, and Julian Sawchuk, late of the Cleveland Barons, are the new additions. A game in St. Louis tonight is the Lions' last before homecoming.

Donna Makes Touchdown

Donna Atwood, currently decorating the Uline Arena ice as the femine star of the Ice-Capades, tomorrow becomes the third woman in Touchdown Club history to address the club's weekly luncheons. Also scheduled to talk to the Touchdowners tomorrow are Staff Cassell and Abe Rosenfeld, directors of basketball at American and Catholic Universities.

No, It Can't

The Prince Georges County Suburban Baseball League will hold its first meeting of the year Wednesday night at 3424 Rhode Island ave., Mount Rainier. Election of officers and applications of new entries will be the order of business. Can spring be far behind?

Winner Holds Lead Throughout

Arcadia, Calif., Jan. 29 (AP).—Ace Admiral won the $100,000 Santa Anita Maturity before 52,000 fans today, with Rose Beam second and Dinner Gong third.

Ace Admiral, leading from wire to wire, ran the mile and one-quarter in 2:02 1/5.

Vulcan's Forge was fourth in the field of 12 in this race reserved for 4-year-olds.

Ace Admiral, owned by Mrs. Elizabeth Graham of New York, collected a net purse of $85,200.

Wins by Half Length

The winner paid $6.70, $3.40 and $2.50. Rose Beam returned $6.20 and $4.10; Dinner Gong, $3.70.

Jockey Johnny Gilbert was aboard Ace Admiral.

Make-up Man broke on top, but Ace Admiral quickly overhauled him and went on to win by a half length over Rose Beam.

Make-up Man broke on top, but Ace Admiral quickly took the lead. Rolling down the stretch the first time, Solidarity moved behind his entry mate, with Rose Beam and the handsome Vulcan's Forge just behind.

The pounding procession remained that way around the clubhouse turn, down the backstretch and around the far turn. Solidarity began to fade, and Rose Beam, Vulcan's Forge and Dinner Gong began to move up.

Vulcan's Forge proved undertrained for the route. Dave Gorman sent him at Ace Admiral and for a moment it looked like a real challenge. The Vulcan couldn't hold on, however, and up came Rose Beam and Dinner Gong for a crack at the pace setter.

Neither could make it and the Admiral sailed home, half a length to the good for a convincing triumph.

Rose Beam won $20,000 for second place, Dinner Gong $15,000 and Vulcan's Forge $10,000.

"The colt ran a fine race and he's going to be hard to beat in the Santa Anita Handicap," said Gilbert as his two youngsters, Johanna and Donald, 11 and 13, stood in the winner's circle to pose with their father and Ace Admiral.

"When the drive to the wire came, he showed he had something in reserve."

"We had no excuse," added Caffarella. "We had a good shot at the leader all the way. Rose Beam hung slightly in the last 50 yards."

No excuses were voiced by Arcaro or Gorman, either. Gorman said he believed Vulcan's Forge might have won if Trainer Don Cameron had another week of training. "I think he'll win the big handicap," Gorman concluded.

The handle on the big race was $514,776. Last year the handle on the Maturity was $590,313. The 1948 crowd was 57,500.

The betting handle for the eight-race program totaled $2,847,663. A year ago it was $3,320,411.

Two West Australian girls, Burna Johnstone and Olympic Runner Shirley Strickland, had Blankers-Koen well beaten when she fell. Johnstone won by inches from Strickland in 11.2 seconds.

Despite her skinned knees, Mrs. Blankers-Koen won the 80-meter hurdles in the Australian record time of 11.5 seconds. Doctors later ordered Mrs. Blankers-Koen to take a complete rest.

league of his replacement, but still was in the dark over what settlement would be made of the final two years of his contract.

McKeever has no immediate plans for hunting a new coaching job.

"Smilin'" Ed faced an abrupt, if temporary close to a nomadic coaching career. A product of Texas Tech, he had head coaching flings at Notre Dame (in the 1944 absence of Frank Leahy), Cornell (1945-46) and at San Francisco in 1947.

McKeever's departure from San Francisco for his Rocket job last year caused sharp repercussions on the West Coast as result of an "open letter" Ed left school authorities on the eligibility of San Francisco footballers.

The furore caused by McKeever's "finger-pointing" at his former athletes nearly upset his Rocket coaching job at the outset. Owner Tony Morabito of the San Francisco '49ers demanded that the league act against the new coach, but the matter was ironed out behind closed doors.

McKeever was an assistant coach at Texas Tech from 1935 through 1938. He hooked up as Leahy's assistant at Boston College, serving there in 1939 and 1940, and followed the present Irish coach to Notre Dame in 1941 where he remained until 1944.

Hippensteil Rated Top D. C. Netman

District of Columbia tennis rankings, released yesterday at the annual luncheon of the District Tennis Association, showed Air Forces Capt. Robin Hippenstiel as the top singles player in the District.

Hippenstiel's claim to the honor was backed by his District singles title and suported also by victories last year in the Air Forces and Federal Employes tournaments.

The war-seasoned flyer lost a finals match in the Middle-Atlantic to Barney Welsh, perennial local net star, but Welsh passed up the District tourney, which under long-standing association custom, determines the top singles spot. Welsh was left out of the rankings entirely for insufficient local competition.

Jim Thackara and Davy Johnson were ranked in that order behind Hippenstiel.

Gil Bogley, all alone in local junior tennis, cracked the mens' rankings for the first time, sharing sixth place with Eddie Miller. The 17-year-old prodigy went even further in the mens' doubles, all the way to first place with partner Davy Johnson. Bogley still has a year of eligibility left in junior competition.

Middies Beat Bucknell, 56-41

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 29 (AP).—Navy recovered its scoring punch in the second half tonight to gain its eighth basketball victory of the season at the expense of Bucknell, 56-41.

The Middies were never headed, but they were only leading by three points at intermission, 26-23. Twice during that close first half, the Bisons pulled to within one point of Navy.

The Middies turned on the pressure in the second half and slowly pulled ahead. Sophomores Bill Lawrence and Pat Corrigan gave the Navy 10 points in two minutes about midway of the second half to clinch the contest.

Willie Wilson led the Navy attack again with six field goals and three foul shots for 15 points. The rest of the points on the Navy side were well distributed.

For Navy, it was the eighth win as aginast four losses and the fifth victory in a row.

Green Baize Wins Easily At Hialeah

Hialeah, Fla., Jan. 29 (AP).—Showing natural improvement over her recent winter debut, Walter M. Jefford's Green Baize easily led home a classy field of 3-year-old fillies in today's $11,825 Jasmine Stakes.

Victorious in three of her four 1948 starts, including the filly division of Belmont Park's National Stallion Stakes, the bay daughter of Case Ace completed a swift 6 furlongs in 1:10 3/5 as she defeated W. J. Walden's Fighting Fan by 4 lengths.

An estimated crowd of 16,600 saw the wginner earn the $8100 first money for a liberal payoff of $16.70.

Nell K. Disappoints

The disappointment of the dash for "sophomore" fillies was Jim Norris' 9-to-10 favorite, Nell K., which recently beat a similar field. This time she was third all the way and lost the place by a half length.

Nell K. is the fairy-tale filly which has brought belated glory to pauper parents. Her sire, Crowfoot, was a $3000 yearling and failed to earn that amount. Her dam, Sea Elf, cost $450 as a yearling and never even got to the races.

Nell K. won two of five starts as a juvenile, boasting a score in Aqueduct's Astarita Stakes. In her recent successful winter bow, Fighting Fan was second, Bea Right third and Green Baize a tiring fourth. Bea Right finished fifth today.

Alsab's Day Last

Mrs. Albert Sabath's Day, leading money-winning juvenile filly of 1948 with $66,970, finished a slow starting last for the second time this winter. She never got started in the race won by Nell K. here and the same applied this afternoon.

Fighting Fan broke in front in the Jasmine and Green Baize set right out after her, with Nell K. outfooting the others. The positions remained that way to the stretch, where the Jeffords colorbearer swept around Fighting Fan and drew out impressively. Fighting Fan just lasted to stave off Nell K. Sub was fourth.

The winner, Sub, and Alsab's Day are named for the $20,000 added mile and a furlong Black Helen Handicap of March 2.

Just before the Jasmine, Calumet Farm's Free America, rated a strong Widener and McLennan threat, lost a photo decision to his stablemate, Pep Well, in his first outing since running last and bleeding in Belmont's Lawrence Realization last September. The race today was expected to put Free America on keener edge for coming stakes.

Army Schedule Includes 3 Foes From Last Year

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 29 (AP).—Only three of last year's opponents are on the 1949 Army football schedule announced today by Lieut. Col. O. C. Krueger, graduate manager of athletics at the Military Academy.

The Cadets will meet Navy, Harvard and Pennsylvania—the three teams which gave them their stiffest opposition in 1948. Their longest trip will take them to Ann Arbor to meet Michigan, the country's No. 1 team of the past season.

Krueger said the site of the Army-Navy game, traditional finale of both service schools, still is undetermined. The game is expected, however, to return to Municipal Stadium in Philadelphia, where it usually is played.

The 1949 Army football schedule:
September 24—Davidson at West Point.
October 1—Penn State at West Point; 8—Michigan at Ann Arbor; 15—Harvard at Cambridge; 22—Columbia at West Point; 29—Virginia Military Institute at West Point.
November 5—Fordham at New York; 12—Pennsylvania at Philadelphia; 19—Open; 26—Navy at site to be determined.

Business Outlook

—By J. A. Livingston—

U. S. Steel and Public Relations

Back in 1929, even at the year's low price, a share of United States Steel would have cost the average United States factory worker six weeks' pay. At the high price, the cost would have come to more than 10 weeks. But today the price would run to only 1½ weeks' work. And, after the corporation goes through with its proposed three-for-one split, about half a week's work will buy a share of Steel.

Livingston

Two things account for this. Earnings of a factory worker have gone up from $25 a week in 1929 to better than $50 today. At the same time, U. S. Steel stock—along with stocks in general—has come down from its New Era perch. In 1929, Steel common sold as high as 261¾ and as low as 150 (see chart). This year, until the announcement of the proposed splitup and a dollar a share extra dividend, it sold around 70. Then it pushed to 75 and higher.

Irving S. Olds, chairman of United States Steel, explained the splitup simply enough. The directors seek wider distribution of the stock. They want to give more persons an opportunity to buy it. The psychology is obvious. A man with $250 in the bank would be more attracted to 10 shares at $25 a share (which is an even number and fairly large sounding) than to three shares at $75 a share.

Better Public Relations

But why do the directors want wider distribution? That's what's significant. The corporation has never split its stock before. Once it declared a 40 per cent stock dividend. But Steel common has never been a stock for the people. The corporation is invariably linked with the House of Morgan, since the elder Morgan founded it. It has been regarded as a rich man's company. And there's the clue.

United States Steel is becoming public-relations conscious. It puts on a fine radio program every Sunday night—The Theater Guild of the Air. The slogan, "the industrial family that serves the Nation—United States Steel," is designed to identify the corporation with everyone, to rid it of its Wall Street association. A big corporation can use a friend or two in court—meaning Congress. Perhaps the last election brought that home. Inference: The voice of a large number of stockholders might help.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co., with 700,000 stockholders, is well aware of that. When the Department of Justice recently brought suit to compel ATT to divest itself of control of Western Electric, the "widows and orphans" got mad. The idea of endangering their nice $9 a share dividend! They wrote spontaneous letters to both the company and Congressmen—protesting.

"Fantastic Profits"

A glance at Steel Labor, monthly publication of the United Steelworkers of America, the union Philip Murray heads, reveals United States Steel's basic problem. A headline in the January issue declares that the steel industry's earnings are "up in the wild blue yonder." Another declares: "Fantastic Profits Plant Seeds of New Depression." A cartoon shows Mr. Consumer weighed down with an enormous bag labeled "1948 corporation profits—$20 billion plus," and saying, "If this keeps up somethin's goin' ta bust."

Steel Labor leaves you with the impression that the welfare of the employes is disassociated from the well-being of the corporation and opposed to it. Profits are something to be derided, not praised. If the corporation does well, it's at the expense of the worker. And what's true of Steel Labor is true of many other union publications, AFL and CIO alike. Corporations, like United States Steel, can't help but try to combat such an attitude. Their survival is at stake, since labor is a powerful legislative influence on taxes, pricing policies, industrial regulations, labor laws, antitrust enforcement, etc.

Shareholders Outnumbered

Nobody knows just how many Americans own stock. Emil Schram, president of the New York Stock Exchange, often cites a figure of 15 million shareholders. But in view of a Federal Reserve Board sample survey, indicating five million, the Stock Exchange guesstimate seems improbably high.

That's borne out by figures of individual companies. United States Steel has 165,000 common shareholders; General Motors 400,000; General Electric 250,000, and Pennsylvania Railroad 200,00; ATT, as mentioned before, 70,000. And of course, there are duplications. An owner of Steel may also own Telephone, or Motors, or Anaconda. In political power, union members (at 16 million) probably outnumber shareholders by two or three to one.

Wide stock ownership will not immediately win friends and influence people. If a worker becomes a shareholder, he'll still listen to his union leader. He'll still depend on his job, not on his dividends, for his living. As a shareholder, however, he'll receive reports and statements from the corporation. He'll have reason to accept these statements, directed as they are by the company to its owners. He does not always have the same attitude toward company reports to employes. Those, he's almost certain to think, are angled for his benefit. So, through diffusion of stock, corporations can hope to increase understanding of their problems and their role in mid-twentieth-century society.

The antibig business climate not only prompts the courting of the common man with common stock but makes the courting easier. Investors and speculators have not followed up record postwar earnings by buying stock. They have feared that higher wages and higher taxes would cut into profits.

United States Steel exemplifies the point. Last year, earnings amounted to $11.99 a share. If special depreciation reserves are included, earnings hit $18.35 a share. Thus the stock, at 75, sells for from four to six times earnings. Historically that's cheap. But since 1929, investors have held earnings in decreasing esteem. They've paid less and less for more and more earnings (see chart). That fact, plus the stock split up, is why United States Steel common will shortly be down to where a week's wage will pick up two shares of the stock.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 29 (AP).—Wheat led a feeble rally in grains today, aided in part by reports the Agriculture Department had no intention of calling loans on the 1948 crop or of reducing its export goal of 500 million bushels for the crop year ended June 30.

The firmness in wheat carried over into other commodities, although oats could not participate to any extent in the rally. Before the upturn May wheat and corn sank to new lows since last October while May oats made a new low since trading in the delivery started.

Wheat closed ¾ to 1⅜ higher, corn was ⅛ to ⅝ higher, oats were ½ lower to ⅛ higher, rye was 3¾ lower, soybeans were ¾ to 1¼ higher, and lard was 7 to 10 cents a hundred pounds higher.

The fact that parity prices did not decline between mid-December and mid-January as some traders had expected, was a help to all grains. Reports that higher premiums were being paid for cash wheat in some outside markets helped along the buying in the bread cereal.

Several Eastern ports, particularly Philadelphia and Baltimore, were said to be clogged with grain. Railroad cars reportedly were held on track, unable to load grain into already jammed elevators. This situation was attributed to a lack of shipping facilities.

Operating Nets Of D. C. Banks Increase 13%

By S. Oliver Goodman

Combined net operating incomes of Washington's 19 banks increased 13 per cent in 1948 over the previous year, according to the Comptroller of Currency's compilation released yesterday.

Aggregate operating net of the local institutions amounted to $7,514,000, against $6,646,000 in 1947.

Gross operating earnings totaled $[illegible],838,000, an increase of about 9 per cent over the $21,760,000 in 1947. Operating expenses of $16,324,000 were up about 8 per cent.

Wages and salaries showed the biggest increase under operating costs. Officers' salaries totaled $2,578,000 last year, against $2,391,000 in 1947. Wages of employes other than officers aggregated $5,771,000, against $5,420,000 in 1947.

On the income side, interest and discounts on loans spurted to $10,117,000, against $7,745,000 in the previous year. Interest from Government securities fell off to $7,584,000, against $8,310,000 in 1947.

After losses, charge-offs and transfers to reserve accounts, net profits before income taxes totaled $5,284,000 against $6,842,000 in 1947. The drop was mainly occasioned by transfer of $1,661,000 to a reserve for bad debts. No such amount was allocated for this purpose in the previous year. The new move is for income tax purposes.

PROGRESS: The Life Insurance Co. of Virginia showed a net gain of $82,181,547 in insurance in force for 1948, bringing total insurance in force to $1,121,373,915. Hollister V. Schenck, vice president in charge of the company's investment department, was elected a new director. Bradford H. Walker and Robert E. Henley were reelected board chairman and president, respectively, at the annual meeting in Richmond.

CHAINS GAIN: Chain stores, which lost ground during the war, have been making greater gains than independent stores since the war's end, the Commerce Department reported. "In lines where chains are important, their sales in the postwar period have increased more rapidly than those of independents," the department's monthly survey of current business said. The only exceptions were chain drug stores, which have merely held even with the independents, and chain eating and drinking places, which have dropped back. The biggest gains were credited to chain groceries, which now get about 39 per cent of all grocery business, and shoe stores, which get about 52 per cent of all shoe sales. But while chains in most lines do about the same proportion of total business in their fields as in 1929, their share of the trade is "still somewhat below 1941," the survey said.

STORE SALES: The dollar volume of department store sales in the Fifth Federal Reserve District in December were 2 per cent greater than in 1947, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday, and 5 per cent greater for 1948 than the preceding year. The increase for the six Washington stores included in the compilation was 5 per cent greater for both the month and the year.

BANK FIGURES: Highlights of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond's weekly report on 17 member Washington banks:

	Week ended January 19	Week ended January 12
Total loans	$228,014,000	$229,984,000
Real estate loans	78,631,000	80,690,000
Total assets	999,680,000	1,001,956,000
Demand deposits	756,225,000	758,809,000
Time deposits	178,192,000	178,517,000

FORECAST: Edwin B. George, Dun & Bradstreet economist, said he found signs of returning confidence in the furnishings and garment industries that suggest "the liquidation of surplus and distress accumulations of fall goods may spend itself in the first two months of this year." In summary he added: Failing new pressures, the inflation is fading. Our underlying sources of strength are not. Price trends will be mixed, as they should be, although overall both the cost of living and wholesale prices should decline moderately."

Key Stocks Score Small Net Advances

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—The stock market grew pale and sickly this week despite a liberal dosing with high-powered tonics.

The market's unsatisfactory progress, in the face of this outright coddling, put moody Wall Street in a state of acute melancholia. Dejected brokers asked each other if there were any medicine strong enough to put a little weight on stock prices.

Prices, on the average, declined through the week without interruption until Saturday when a mere wisp of demand was enough to boost numerous key issues a trifle.

WHAT STOCKS DID	Sat.	Fri.
Advances	250	200
Declines	181	558
Unchanged	213	227
Totals issued	644	985

During the week around one billion dollars was chopped off the market value of all stocks listed on the exchange.

Top billing in a long list of favorable corporate news items was given to U. S. Steel.

On Tuesday directors of Big Steel voted a special dividend of $1 a share, proposed to stockholders a 3-for-1 split of the stock, and reported the largest earning in 1948 for any year since 1929. The news came out after the market had closed.

The next day steels put on a proper show in response to the news. U. S. Steel raced up more than 4 points and other steel issues tagged along. The rest of the market had all the buoyancy of a convicted criminal. It wasn't like that in the old days, when such news probably would have produced a minor boom.

Wall Street's bulls continued to hope for the best but gloomier prophets claimed it was a case of whistling in the dark. The net effect on the professional group was to play it safe while awaiting congressional action on legislation that will have a direct bearing on the market.

Motorola Announces Portable Television Set

New York, Jan. 29 (AP)—Motorola, Inc. of Chicago, today announced a new 33-pound portable television set with 7-inch viewing tube to sell for $199.95.

A telescoping antenna makes it possible to operate the set in most locations by plugging into a light socket, the company said.

Motorola also announced a new table model with viewing tube 12 inches across to sell for $369.50. Both new sets will be displayed here Monday.

Prices of Shortening Reduced by 2 Makers

Cincinnati, Jan. 29 (AP).—Procter & Gamble announced today a 2-cent reduction in the wholesale price of its vegetable shortening, Crisco. It was the fourth 2-cent reduction in seven months.

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 29 (AP).—A 2-cent a pound cut in the price of Spry, a vegetable shortening, was announced today by Lever Brothers Co., which said it was due to a decline in raw material costs.

Canadian Exports Reach New Peak

Ottawa, Canada, Jan. 29 (AP).—Canada's export trade broke all records in December and brought the 1948 total value of exports from the dominion to the highest point in peacetime history, the Statistics Bureau reported today.

Featured in the year's trade of $3,075,800,000 was a rise of 45 per cent over 1947 in the value of shipments to the United States. This more than offset the generally lower sales to other markets.

It was the first time in a peacetime year that the dominion's exports exceeded the three billion dollar mark. In 1947 the exports totaled $2,774,,900,000.

Lumber Shipments

Lumber shipments of 429 mills reporting to the National Lumber Trade Barometer were 1.7 per cent below production for the week ending January 22. In the same week new orders of these mills were 14.8 per cent above production.

New York Cotton

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—Cotton futures closed firm today with gains of 10 to 25 cents a bale; trading on or shortly after the opening was active, although thereafter business tapered. Most of the buying was attributed to commission houses and trade dealers.

The market was influenced by a higher-than-expected mid-January cotton parity price. The trade demand was said to represent covering against domestic mill accounts and in a small part against export business. There was a fair amount of commission house buying in the nearby March contract. The buying in March was in anticipation of first notice day on February 23. There still remains a large open interest in the March delivery.

The range follows:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
March	32.61	32.72	32.61	32.70	+10-11
May	32.41	32.49	32.40	32.48	+10-12
July	31.40	31.47	31.37	31.38	+2-3
Oct.	28.67	28.78	28.67	28.72	+15
Dec.	28.47	28.52	28.47	28.49	+15
March	28.39	28.39	28.36†	28.36	+14

Middling spot 33.60 nominal, up 12.

Swing Partners! Swap and Swing!

ANDREW BROWN goes back to "the one who's true" and takes Mrs. Brown for a promenade. The couple are new members of the Square Dance Group which meets fortnightly at the Holton Arms Gymnasium on Church st.

ONE of the liveliest groups in town meets fortnightly at the Holton Arms Gymnasium. Known as the Original Square Dance Group, it has held together since 1934, with many charter members still taking active part.

It started as a group for unmarrieds, with another group of young marrieds meeting on alternate Tuesdays. Now both groups are made up of married couples and hold a joint dance on New Year's Eve.

In the Original Square Dance Group this year James DeValse Mann is president and John Dreier is dean. Committee members are Lewis H. Ulman, Mrs. Eleanor Peirce Sprecher, James R. Tencher and Miss Eleanor Powell.

Others in the group include Mr. and Mrs. William Acker, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Davison, G. Bowdoin Craighill, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Gasch, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Hawes, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Perry, jr., Maj. Taylor Simmons, Francis D. Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. Russell True, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Walk and Miss Evelyn Walker.

Dancing begins at 8:45 p. m., and ends promptly at 10:45. Members take their square dancing seriously and become quite expert in the various steps. As much vim and vigor goes into their swings and dives as into any track meet.

Miss Evelyn Davis, the group's caller, is continually adding new dances to the repertoire. Famous guest callers sometimes appear at the dances. One recently added a dance done to the tune of "The farmer, farmer, took another load of hay, hay, hay."

Calling square dances is a lifetime avocation. Typical phrases used are "Promenade through with the old Kentucky Shrew," and "Dance with your darling Nellie Gray," and "The lady 'round the lady and the gent go slow . . . the lady 'round the gent and the gent don't go."

Hessler Photos

Diplomatic Circling

Farewells Overwhelm Departing De Belts

By Elizabeth Maguire

SOCIALLY most diplomatic news centers this week around one couple—the Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Belt. Just about every dinner and every cocktail party on the book is a farewell in their honor.

The handsome Ambassador and his beautiful wife have spread as much good will in this country as it is possible to spread, and now they are leaving for home after a stay here of four years and four months. Their residence in Washington has been longer than that of any Ambassador from their country, but despite that fact Senora de Belt feels that "when you leave, you die a little."

CUBA'S DE BELTS
. . . their tenure here was long

Their parties at the huge embassy on 16th st. have been brilliant affairs. Senora de Belt will be remembered by many as a hostess receiving hundreds of guests, dressed like a young girl in full skirted white lace with a white flower in her hair. Or she will be remembered on another occasion when she wore red velvet and carried a black lace fan.

A POPULAR Ambassadress who is paying a visit to this country is Mme. Martins, whose husband is the former Ambassador of Brazil to this country and present Ambassador to France. Mme. Martins arrived in New York last Wednesday, and her friends here look for a visit from her in the very near future.

Beautiful Nora Martins, her daughter, is engaged to marry Count du Bourg de Borzas. He is blond, age 22, and top top society.

TWO other beauties, Miss Margret Thors, daughter of the Icelandic Minister and Mme. Thors, and Miss Anita Baraibar, daughter of the Spanish Charge d'Affaires and Senora de Baraibar, will represent their countries at the Mardi Gras in Galveston, Tex., on February 25. Ten girls from different countries of Europe have been invited to participate.

GRIGORE PREOTEASA, former Minister Counselor of the Romanian Legation here, whom our Government asked to leave about six weeks ago, has been named undersecretary of state for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in his homeland. Vlad G. Mardarescu, Charge d'Affaires at the legation now, and Mme. Mardarescu, attended the diplomatic reception at Blair House last Monday.

AT THE Chinese Embassy things are in a state of flux. It is announced by Joseph Ku, First Secretary, that they are carrying on as usual. However, the Nationalist government, which sends their pay checks, is tottering, and the future is shaky.

THE Secretary General of the Pan American Union and Senora de Lleras entertained at a dinner last evening for the departing Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Belt.

Guests were the Ambassador of Colombia and Senora de Restrepo-Jaramillo, the Ambassador of Bolivia and Senora de Martinez Vargas, the Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Nieto del Rio, and the Minister of Uruguay and Senora de Mora.

In Pennsylvania

Women Fight Not to Be Outspoken

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 29 (AP).—Representative Jeannette M. Dye demanded today the end of a Pennsylvania law that punishes women for talking too much.

She has proposed a bill in the State Legislature which would abolish "the common-law crime of common scold."

As the legislature's leading protagonist of women's rights, Mrs. Dye says of the common scold law:

1. It's unnecessary. Laws against disorderly conduct and libel cover common scolds.
2. It's discriminatory. Women alone are subject to the law which over the years has exempted men.

"And what's more I intend to do everything I can to end, as far as Pennsylvania is concerned, the farce of subjecting women to a silly law such as that," she told a reporter.

The crime of common scold originated in England centuries ago and was directed against women who became a public nuisance. Punishment was a dousing in a pond while strapped to a ducking stool. The last time such a punishment was inflicted in Pennsylvania was in 1824.

The State Supreme Court ruled then that although the crime of common scold still existed in Pennsylvania, ducking was obsolete as a penalty. It said punishment should be by fine or imprisonment.

DAR Registrars Meet

The State registrar of the District of Columbia DAR, Miss Isabel E. Myrth, will have the final meeting of the year with the chapter registrars Tuesday night at 7:30 in the assembly room of the chapter house.

The Service Set

Prenuptial Parties Fete Arnold Sisters

By Norma Lanum

WITH most of the high-ranking out-of-town inauguration guests leaving for home, Washington's service set has turned a good share of its attention to romance. Namely, the Arnold sisters' wedding plans and the prenuptial parties being given in their honor.

Miss Emily Arnold's wedding to Parkman H. Clancey will take place on February 26, and her sister, Betty, will be married in April to Lieut. James Howard Dallman.

Yesterday's party at the Fort Myer quarters of Mrs. Cortland Schuyler was a real surprise for the girls. What they thought would be merely a mother-and-daughter tea turned out to be a kitchen shower in their honor. And all the gifts followed the green and white color scheme the brides-to-be have chosen for their future kitchens.

Mrs. William H. Arnold came with her daughters and also there were Mrs. Thomas S. Timberman and her daughter, Dooley; Mrs. E. A. Routheau and her daughter, Jody; Mrs. Jesse Matlack and Barbara, Mrs. J. F. Moore and Patricia, Mrs. Kenneth D. Nichols and Joan. Frances Dear was there, too, but since Mrs. W. Richard Dear is out on the West Coast, Mrs. Alfred Gruenther came as mother-in-proxy. Shirley Schuyler shared hostess duties with her mother.

Then last evening the young friends of the Arnold girls got together for cocktails and dancing at the Army-Navy Country Club at a party given by Lieut. Col. and Mrs. James F. Mears.

OVER at Fort McNair's Officers Club last evening there was another large cocktail party. It was given to honor the Army's retiring chief of finance, Maj. Gen. William H. Kasten, and Mrs. Kasten. Hosts for the affair were the assistant chief of finance, Brig. Gen. Eugene M. Foster, and Mrs. Foster. Their daughter, Patricia Ann, assisted.

Among those invited were Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Kenneth Royall, Gen. and Mrs. Omar Bradley, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. J. Lawton Collins, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Leroy Lutes, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. R. A. Wheeler, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. E. W. Rawlings, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Harry Vaughan, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William H. Arnold, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Henry B. Sayler, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Edward Witsell, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Edmond H. Leavey, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas H. Green, Maj. Gen. and Mrs Howard L. Loughry, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. George L. Richards, and all senior officers on duty in General Kasten's office.

Others invited included Senator and Mrs. J. Howard McGrath, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Richmond, Harold Crookes, Mrs. Lois Ransome, and Col. and Mrs. Rufus Holt.

From out of town there were Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Eben of New York, Col. and Mrs. John Elsback of Los Angeles, and Col. and Mrs. W. E. Schiff of New York.

General Kasten, a soldier for 46 years, will stay in Washington after his retirement Monday. Next Thursday he and his wife will be honor guests at a dance at Fort McNair being planned by the finance department officers.

JUST JOTTINGS: Brig. Gen. Vernon Prichard, the Army's new chief of public information, went up to New York Friday with his daughter, Carlotta, to meet Mrs. Prichard. She has just come over from Germany on an Army transport ship. The general recently finished a stint as director of operations, plans, organization and training for the European command. He begins his new job Monday . . . The Fort Myer Woman's Club reelected Mrs. James V. Cole, wife of the post's commanding officer, as president at the meeting Thursday. In fact, the whole roster of officers was chosen to serve another term . . . Capt. and Mrs. Raymond R. Waller have with them for the weekend Capt. and Mrs. William V. Davis of Patuxent River Naval Base, and Friday the Wallers took their guests to the National War College dinner dance.

Heroes' Insignia

Gold Star Kneeling Pads For Cathedral Proposed By Mme. Delattre-Seguy

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

MME. JEAN DELATTRE-SEGUY, who's just back after five months in England, is in the process of launching a most charming idea. It's "kneelers" for the Washington Cathedral's newly-building servicemen's chapel. "Kneelers" are the small cushions, half a dozen to each pew, used during prayer. Mme. Delattre-Seguy's plan, which is approved by the dean, is to have the cushions covered in tapestry stitched by a family member of each parishioner who died in service. The general design, which is not yet fully worked out, will be centered by each individual's shoulder patch or other military insignia and, on the boxed cushion side, his name, organization, birth and death dates. Naturally, unworked canvases will be prepared under Cathedral supervision and workmanship will have to be of high standard.

London Beautician Here

NORAH BROOKS, London's unusual beautician, is arriving for a month's vacation with Lady Astor's niece, Mrs. Lyttleton Fox. Miss Brooks' specialty is a facial treatment which includes face, neck, back massage and such relaxing items as camomille steams. "Everyone," including the royal family, climbs two flights of dark stairs to her small Dover st. salon where, with two assistants, she works her "miracles."

Extra-curricular to the treatment is home work with her special cosmetics and, even more important, discussion of every kind of personal problem with Norah who discreetly combines the qualities of Mary Haworth, Emily Post and private confessor.

"SWING your partner"—Miss Julia Foraker, granddaughter of the late Senator Joseph Foraker of Ohio, and John Van Steenburg step lively through intricate paces of "Swap and Swing"

School on Shoestring

HAVE you heard about the Institute of Contemporary Art started some time ago by Robert Richmond? Formerly with the King-Smith School, he set himself up on a shoestring, has made a go of teaching criticism of poetry, dancing, sculpture. At irregular intervals he has staged the most stimulating evenings in his New York ave. studio. Last week Hugh Chislom read Alexis Leger's poetry, both in the original and in Dennis Devlin's translations. (Devlin used to be en poste here at the Irish Legation.)

Soon Martha Graham and her troupe will give an evening of dance. Some time ago Nobel Prize Winner T. S. Eliot and 18 poets (all Fellows in Literature at the Library of Congress) dropped in to see Gabo's exciting, one-man sculpture exhibit. In a city without a theater, the Institute of Contemporary Art helps fill the void.

Pleasant Pickings

THINGS WE'VE liked lately: The handsome literature in Evelyn Waugh's "Loved One" style, sent by a burying ground, depicting their collection of marble statuary . . . Drew Pearson all dressed up, carrying a can of garbage to his car—for his pigs out in the country . . . The story of the agitated high State Department official's secretary who, making up his charity list for income tax purposes, wrote "Communist Chest" instead of "Community" Chest . . . When General "Red" O'Hare, soon to be military attache in Paris, started to school to learn about his new job, Mrs. O'Hare presented him with a red apple for teacher . . . The Georgetown lady who, on finding her trash can in mid-sidewalk, carefully laid mink coat, white gloves, on newel post, carried the offending utensil inside, then replaced mink and mittens . . . The vivid green and red satin, ankle-length, plus flowing veil, costumes worn by feminine members of Georgetown's Mohammedan Mosque . . . The fact that Basil Fomeen who is conducting in the Carlton's Jungle Room, has made three pianos with his very own hands.

Harris & Ewing.

ADMIRING the posters for this year's Washington Heart Association drive, which begins February 7, are (left to right) Mrs. Marcel Foret, Mrs. Edgar Quayle and Mrs. Robert E. Moran, all members of the committee of physicians' wives planning a luncheon-fashion show on Valentines Day at the Shoreham to benefit the association.

U.N. Club to Show Italian Art

Paintings by Pietro Lazzari, Italian artist, will be viewed at a tea at the United Nations Club from 5 to 7 o'clock: The Ambassador of Italy and Signora Tarchiani will be among the guests. The exhibit will be viewed by art critics Monday afternoon at a private showing, and on Wednesday it will be open to the public, continuing throughout the month.

Among other guests at the tea on Tuesday will be the First Secretary of the Italian Embassy and Signora Ortona, and Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture. Those who will assist in receiving the guests are Mrs. Agnes DeLano, Mrs. Burke Wilkinson, Mrs. Mary Bradley Watkins, Mrs. Robert Portner, John Germond, James Durham and Franz Bader.

Mothers of 'teen-age girls will gather at the home of Mrs. Burke Wilkinson on February 9 for tea and to discuss the forthcoming Northfield Conference to be held June 16-23. Mrs. Keith Merrill will be joint hostess with Mrs. Wilkinson at the tea.

The Northfield Conferences for girls from 14 to 17 have been held for more than 50 years. Nonsectarian religious subjects are discussed at the conferences, and a keen interest has always been taken in them by residents of Washington. Serving on the board of the Northfield League are Mrs. Merrill, Mrs. Wilkinson, Mrs. George Lloyd and Mrs. Norman Perkins.

Among guests at the tea on February 9 will be Mrs. Thomas Clark, Mrs. Lloyd Symington, Mrs. Alexander Zabriskie, Mrs. Robert Whitelaw Wilson, Mrs. William T. Mann, Mrs. Julian Gascoigne, Mrs. E. G. Stoddard, Mrs. John Stenhouse, Mrs. Herbert Harwood, Mrs. Lewis Clark, Mrs. John Joss, Mrs. Richard Miller, Mrs. De Forest Anthony and Mrs. Samuel Beach.

Return From Conference

Mrs. Howard Hyde, director of international relations for the D. C. League of Women Voters, and Mrs. D'Alton Myers, director of public relations for the league, have returned from a conference on the United Nations held last week in New York under the sponsorship of the League of Women Voters in the United States.

Sally Victor's Collection Shows Chinese Influence

Easter Bonnets Paler in Color

Reni Photo

Sally Victor hats are available at Posternak's

TURN OF THE HEAD—A Flirt of a Fan: This little half-bonnet is made of starched white net with fluted edge. Pale pink roses and pink and green rosettes nestle among the folds, and the white net fan also carries a rose.

TUDORTOP—This hat is copied from one worn by Ann Boleyn when she shared the British throne with Henry VIII. It is of black toyo, edged with taffeta. The trimming is a bow of pale ribbon.

HONEYHIVE—A rough natural straw braid loosely sewn together with red wool yarn. Hand sewing makes the hat collapsible and perfect for packing. A large bunch of bright red geraniums trims the right side.

By Peggy Preston
Post Fashion Reporter

ONE OF New York's most talented and successful hat designers is Sally Victor, who has come up with one of the prettiest Easter chapeau collections of the season.

Sally's clientele is relatively small, but it is definitely discerning. Her hats are never cheap, either in price or line. But women who have once tried one almost invariably go back for more.

The Victor devotees give different reasons for their constancy. Some say it is her eye for classic lines, as exemplified in her famous sculptured felts and straws. Others insist it is her talent for colors. Season after season she manages to come up with several brilliant, clear colors that are carried out in straw, felt or whatever type of fabric strikes her fancy.

Some of her New York "steadies" say they buy Sally's hats simply because they like her, personally. As is the case with most of the top-flight hat designers in Manhattan, she sells both retailers and private customers. Those in the latter group claim they have such a good time when they go to her shop that they feel obligated to purchase some headgear.

A quick-witted, merry little woman, Sally enjoys teasing her customers and never hesitates to tell them when a hat is unbecoming.

"Don't buy that," she cautioned one woman. "It makes you look just like me!" Her acid test for any of her creations is whether she herself can wear it. "If it looks good on me, it'll be a knockout on anyone else."

Colors Are Paler

COLORS in the Victor hats this spring are somewhat paler than usual. She offers a Taffyfoam, that is a pale, frosted orange; Coralmoon, a range of coral and orange shades; and a whole family of blues from pale to navy.

Her hats range in size from wide-brimmed sailors to tiny half-bonnets for evening. The latter are delicious tidbits of lace and flowers and Sally recommends they be worn with a cluster of artificial curls pinned high on the back of the head.

One of the cutest tricks she offers this season is a long rope of black velvet, with a cluster of flowers in the center. This, as her model demonstrates, is a very handy gadget to own. It can go around the brim of a soft, straw sailor; can be knotted around the throat; or become a belt when tied at the waist.

The flowered-rope idea is one which any amateur milliner can duplicate.

Ask Anne — Where to Find Handiwork Class

I am interested in learning to print peasant designs on furniture. I have never done it before so I am interested in knowing whether there is a school or an individual that teaches this art? I would appreciate it greatly if you could help me locate such a place or person in the District of Columbia. Also, are there any instruction books on painting peasant designs which I would find useful? P. B.

There is a hobby shop in Georgetown which is starting a class in surface decoration, including decoration of furniture, on February 14. The course will run for eight weeks, one night a week. The meeting night will be chosen at the convenience of those who register for the course. In addition to furniture decoration, painting on paper, glass, toll ware and textiles will be included in the instruction. For further information about the course, call the shop at Dupont 8363.

Peter Hunt's Workbook (Ziff-Davis) contains both instructions and design ideas in color for painting peasant designs. The book can be purchased at most book stores.

I have several cookie recipes I would like to try which call for sour cream. I have hesitated making them, not understanding just what is meant by "sour cream." Do you think the recipe calls for ordinary coffee cream which has soured, or does it mean the thick sour cream you buy in jars in the refrigerator in the grocery store? B. P. M.

You can use either home or commercially soured cream in recipes which call for it. Commercially soured cream has approximately the same fat content as coffee cream, the commercially soured cream being thicker because it has been whipped. If you sour the cream at home, leaving it out of the refrigerator for 24 hours should sour it about right. Just as soon as it tastes sour, it is right to use. To sour cream with vinegar, stir two tablespoons of vinegar into a cup of cream and let stand a few minutes before using.

I am planning to install a stainless steel sink in my new home. However, I recently read that stainless steel is hard to keep polished. Can you give me some information on stainless steel as a working surface, how it would be affected by normal use in a kitchen and how it is cleaned and polished? J. S.

It is possible to obtain different grades and finishes in stainless steel sinks and working surfaces. Some of the grades and finishes are such that they are difficult to keep clean and polished. In selecting your sink, be sure to get one of a grade of steel suitable for that purpose and one that has been polished so that all the minute scratches to which dirt might adhere have been removed. A No. 4 finish is considered an excellent finish for a sink.

I have used a mixture of clear varnish and turpentine on a silver plated tea and coffee set with the result that every time the pots are filled with hot liquid, the heat develops a very disagreeable smell of paint. My problem now is how to remove the varnish. Do you think lacquer would cause the same trouble? R. B.

The varnish can be removed by wiping the piece with turpentine or benzine and then washing it in hot soapy water.

Lacquering metal pieces to prevent tarnish is recommended primarily for decorative pieces which are not in constant use. Because the surface of the lacquer is broken every time the article is washed, it is not advisable to apply lacquer to tea and coffee pots unless they are used solely for decorative purposes. As a matter of fact, if unlacquered silver pieces are washed in soap and water once a week even when they are not used that often, they will keep bright for some time without polishing.

I have recently refinished a Pennsylvania Dutch chair with three coats of linseed oil, followed by several coats of shellac (diluted with an equal amount of alcohol solvent). After each coat of shellac, I rubbed the chair down with fine steel wool. Although several weeks have elapsed since the last coat was applied, clothes of the person sitting on the chair stick to the chair. Can you suggest a way of overcoming the difficulty? Would a coat of varnish help? A. W.

There is a possibility that your trouble is caused by using shellac which was not fresh. Shellac more than six months old is likely to have deteriorated, especially if kept in a tin container. To correct the trouble, it will be necessary to remove all shellac now on the piece. Use alcohol to get it off. Then, before applying the fresh coat of shellac, wipe it well with a cloth to be sure there is no oil on the surface of the wood. If you are not absolutely sure of the freshness of the shellac, pour a little onto a metal surface and let it stand. It should be absolutely hard in 24 hours.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Timid Spinster Teacher, Who Reared Beloved Niece From Babyhood, Asks How to Deal With Girl's Bachelor Beau, Who Doesn't Propose

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This is about my niece Helen, 27, whom I reared from babyhood. She is a sweet unselfish girl and I am very proud of her; but she is not very worldly wise, because I couldn't help her along that line, as I am an old maid school teacher and a timid soul myself.

Above all things Helen wants marriage and children, and that is exactly what I want for her, too, as I know full well it is the best career for a girl, having made my own way since the age of 12. It would mean losing her, but this I am willing to face, for she deserves a happy family life.

Twice I've seen Helen pick up her baby cousin and cry over him, and her desire for babies of her own is really touching. But occasionally she tells me in a facetious way that she doesn't think she will ever need the family silver, as she and John aren't the marrying kind.

Should She Try to End Romance?

SHE ADORES John, a bachelor, 31, who has been taking up her time for the last four years. He seems to be a fine person and I trust him absolutely, but I very much fear he can never love anybody but himself. Helen lives only for weekends, which she spends in his home, or he in ours; and if he is too busy to write during the week she worries almost to death.

He takes Helen to visit all his friends and relatives, and is very generous in entertaining her. Although he is rather careful with money, he spends more amusing her than he spends on himself; but that's as far as it goes. And I am wondering if I should speak to Helen and try to break off this affair, or have a frank talk with the young man?

If I do interfere heavy handedly, I may ruin her young life; and on the other hand I can't sit idly by and see John take up any more of her young life, giving nothing in return. Thirty years ago, a girl's family would have dealt severely with a young man for doing such a thing, but what is done today? S. V.

Woman's Attitude Makes Good Sense

DEAR S. V.: It has been said that a person who acts decisively may make mistakes; but at that, he'll make a better showing, when his life is summed up, than the person who daren't take a positive stand, one way or another, about challenging issues.

Thus after reading your charming letter, here cut in half, which strikes me as being the expression of a rare superior character, I feel strongly moved to say, never mind what's being done today by modern parents, in regard to their young's dating behavior.

In many respects the social tenets which rather strictly governed courtship 30 years ago made a lot more sense, in their effect upon character and constructive outcome, than today's tendency towards "every lad for himself" and "anything goes."

So, for advice, cast yourself imaginatively in the role of meeting this situation as a father might, on Helen's behalf; then take your cue from your own conscience, judgment and intuition, and deal with John as you feel he should be dealt with, after four years' trifling with Helen's yearning love.

Don't Bother to Ape the Moderns

IN YOUR shoes, I'd feel definitely that Helen's "next friend" (in the legal sense) should take John by the ear and bluntly inquire in the old-fashioned way, "Just what are your intentions, if any?" and if he gives no satisfactory answer, then emphatically denounce his selfish dalliance as scoundrelly abuse of an unworldly girl's devotion, etc.

In short, speak boldly, warming up as you go along, suiting your sentiments to his reactions, and making no effort whatsover to sound "modern," since after all it's principles that matter, in this age or any other.

Incidentally, I think it's a shade better all around, from the psychological angle, if you don't speak to Helen first, before wading into John. Whether he takes to his heels or finally musters a proposal, she will have remained in a face-saving position while you put the screws on, so long as he knows she had no advance notice of your endeavor. M. H.

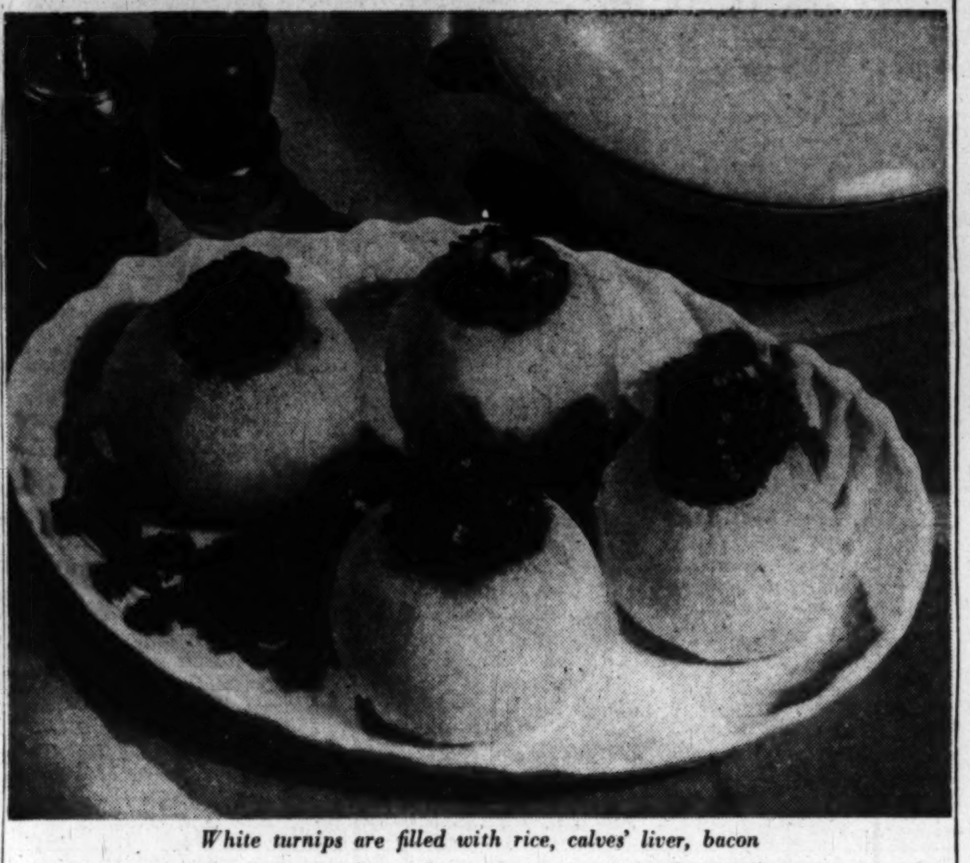
Vegetable Dishes Are Tasty and Budget Savers, Too

Let's give the common root vegetables a chance. There are lots of them and they are available in all seasons. They don't make the figures on your budget shoot up like a fever patient's chart and they are so varied in color, flavor and texture that you can serve one or another of them daily with no hint of sameness.

Strangely enough, there is some question as to whether the white potato is a true root vegetable, but since there is no question at all as to the yellow potato, or yam, the doubt may be dismissed as carping. All root vegetables (and this means the white potato, too) offer fair amounts of minerals and generous amounts of all vitamins except D. They combine well with other foods and can be thriftily utilized as extenders, or glamourized as the highlight of the meal.

Kohlrabi, which contains no starch, is a newcomer to the raw vegetable dish. Peeled, sliced and crisped in ice water, it may be served just as radishes or carrot curls are.



White turnips are filled with rice, calves' liver, bacon

Golden Yams

8 small yams, parboiled and peeled
¼ cup shortening, melted
Brown sugar
Powdered ginger
8 small white onions, peeled and parboiled

Scoop a small hole, just large enough to hold an onion, in each yam. Roll in melted shortening, then in brown sugar. Dust cavities with ginger and place in buttered baking dish. Roll onions in shortening and fit one in each yam. Dust with salt, pepper, powdered clove and ginger and pour remaining shortening over all. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 15 minutes, or until tender, basting with liquid onions were boiled in and fat in the pan. Yield: 4 portions.

Yam Cups

4 large yams
Peel of ½ orange
Peel of ½ lemon
Melted butter
Brown sugar
1 teaspoon minced onion
½ pound sausage meat
Salt and pepper to taste
Pinch of poultry seasoning
¼ cup orange juice
¼ cup sherry
1 teaspoon flour
¼ cup seedless raisins

Peel yams and boil with lemon and orange peel in slightly salted water until tender. Drain and cut a small slice from the bottom of each so they will stand upright. Scoop out centers, leaving shells about three-quarter-inch thick. Roll in melted butter, then dust lightly with brown sugar and place in buttered pan. Chop centers of yams and combine with onion and sausage meat. Stir over moderate heat about 5 minutes. Season to taste and pile into potato cups, moulding as high as possible. Combine remaining orange juice mixture with flour; add to juices in pan and cook until thickened. Approximate yield: eight portions.

Stuffed Turnips

4 large white turnips
3 slices of bacon
½ cup chopped onion
1 thick slice of calf's liver, ground
¾ cup cooked rice
Salt to taste
⅛ teaspoon pepper
Pinch of nutmeg
Pinch of thyme
Pinch of sage
¼ cup broth

Peel and parboil turnips in slightly salted water. Scoop out centers and chop fine. Fry bacon until crisp, remove from pan and crumble. Add onions to 2 tablespoons bacon fat in pan and cook until just beginning to brown. Add liver and chopped turnips and continue cooking three minutes, stirring constantly. Add rice and stir until well blended; mix in bacon and seasonings and stuff into turnip shells. Place in buttered baking dish, add broth and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until tender, about 20 minutes. Approximate yield: 4 portions.

Chicken Livers and Onions in Wine Sauce

1 pound small white onions, peeled
¼ cup butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon meat glaze
Peel of ½ lemon broken in 2 or 3 pieces
Salt and pepper
⅛ teaspoon dry mustard
⅛ teaspoon mace
½ cup sherry or white wine
1 pound chicken livers
1 tablespoon capers with liquid

Cook onions with just enough water to cover. Melt 2 tablespoons butter, add flour and cook over moderate heat until lightly browned. Add meat glaze and 1 cup onion liquid (add water if necessary to make 1 cup), lemon rind and seasonings. Simmer until thickened. Add wine and onions, cover and simmer 5 minutes. Discard lemon peel. Fry livers rare in remaining butter and add to onion mixture; add capers and liquid. Cover and simmer slowly 5 minutes. Yield: 4 portions.

Kiddie Kandy

1 pound raw carrots, grated.
1 pound sugar.
1/3 cup orange juice.
1 tablespoon grated orange rind.
Pinch of salt.
¼ cup chopped candied ginger.
½ cup broken nut meats.

Combine carrots, sugar, orange juice and rind and salt. Cook over low heat, stirring frequently. When mixture is very thick (212 degrees F.), add ginger and nuts. Stir over heat five minutes more and then spread on wet cookie sheet. Cool, cut into small pieces and let stand several hours before serving. Approximately yield: 46 pieces.

Chinese Radishes

1 teaspoon soy sauce.
¼ teaspoon onion juice.
2 teaspoons vinegar.
2 teaspoons olive oil.
2 teaspoons sugar.
1 tablespoon white wine.
¼ teaspoon salt.
Pinch of dry mustard.
Pinch of powdered ginger.
1 large bunch of radishes.

Combine all ingredients except radishes in a jar, cover and shake vigorously. Wash radishes and crisp them in ice water. Cut a small slice off the end of each radish, stand them upright and smash each one with a cup or rolling pin just hard enough to mash it slightly, but not to crush it. Drop radishes in jar of sauce, shake well and let stand an hour or more in refrigerator, shaking occasionally. Drain off any excess liquid before serving.

It's New!

By Lucia Brown

WHAT'LL THEY THINK of next? Someone lying awake nights—evidently suffering from a chill—has dreamed up a new electrically heated mattress. Introduced at the Winter Furniture Market in New York last week, it will be available in Washington sometime this spring.

Those heated suits that keep Air Force pilots snug high above the clouds inspired the inventor of this mattress. It remains a few degrees warmer than body heat—98 3/5 degrees—and the sleeper needs only a sheet or light blanket, even next to an open window. The mattress is safe, too, having been tested and approved by Underwriters' Laboratories. The manufacturer says it will cost only a few dollars more than regular high-grade mattresses, can be run on less than a penny's worth of electricity a night.

HAVE YOU TRIED the new brownie mix, made by the same people that put that good macaroon mix on the market? This rich brown treat for your table comes in a can and is chockful of nuts—plump, freshly shelled cashews. All you do is put the contents of the can in a mixing bowl, add one whole egg and two tablespoons of water and blend thoroughly. After baking in a shallow pan for 35 minutes, you let the brownie mixture cool, then cut it into squares. The can yields 21 large and 49 party-sized brownies.

TO HELP YOU make the most of your storage space, a new "corner bag" for clothing has just reached the market. This big plastic garment bag has a front opening and a special spring feature that holds this opening wide after you unzip it. You can shove the bag way back in the very end of your closet, still handily reach the clothing stored there. Soil-proof and moth-resistant, it is also washable, has a heavy wire frame and electrically welded eyelets.

HERE'S A THREE-FOLD screen that shelters and protects you in a way far beyond the talents of the old-fashioned screen. Actually, it's a good-looking radiant heat unit, covered in a colorful print design. When you want extra heat, you set the screen up and plug it into any AC outlet. A solid heating unit inside each fold radiates beneficial sunshine warmth. It's a wonderful answer to the supplementary heat problem—perfect for shielding the baby from draughts at bath time and for heating the part of the room where old people are sitting. The covering is spotproof, waterproof and fireproof.

The Family Scrapboook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

A Special Treat for Work Well Done

Parents should expect children to help with family jobs without always being paid for them. Nor is it necessary that there be some other kind of an award whenever some task has been well completed. As a part of our being members of a family, young and old alike should expect to do many things for the welfare of the family.

Yet it is a very good idea if now and then, when some special job has been done, that a special sort of treat be given. For instance, Johnny had been working very hard helping his mother clean out the basement which had become very messy. Finally when they were almost through, mother said, "Johnny, I think we've done a very good job on this basement. Maybe we ought to treat ourselves. How about a movie this afternoon?"

The particular value in this sort of thing is that it isn't expected. When it does come, once in a while, then, it is much appreciated. And the feeling that the job was done for the job's sake—not for pay or reward—still remains.

Delicious Fish Sauce

An easily made and delicious sauce for fish may be prepared by melting a quarter cup of butter or margarine and mixing well with four teaspoons of lemon juice and a half teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce. Spoon the sauce over broiled fillets just before serving. This will be enough for two to

Pepping Up Green Peas

For a vegetable shortcake, make a white sauce substituting part of liquid from canned peas for milk; add peas, chopped pimiento and onion juice; serve on baking powder biscuits.

Braise celery in liquid from canned peas; add peas and heat thoroughly.

For a main luncheon dish, add canned peas to scrambled eggs and serve plain or with tomato or creole sauce.

Cream peas and sprinkle with curry powder; serve with chicken or lamb dishes.

For luncheon variety, peas may be heated in leftover meat gravy with bits of meat and served on toast or in potato nests.

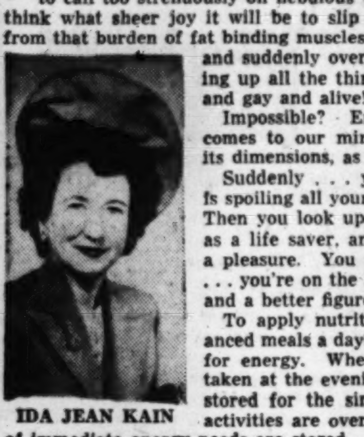
Delete the Trimmings For a Slimming Menu

By Ida Jean Kain

JUST BY A FLICK of psychology you can reduce without having to call too strenuously on nebulous will power. The trick is to think what sheer joy it will be to slip into a size 14 and be free from that burden of fat binding muscles and spirit. Take that slant and suddenly overeating just isn't worth giving up all the things that let you feel young and gay and alive!



IDA JEAN KAIN

Impossible? Emerson said that if truth comes to our mind we suddenly expand to its dimensions, as if we grew to worlds.

Suddenly . . . you realize that overeating is spoiling all your fun as well as your figure. Then you look upon the science of nutrition as a life saver, and eating to lose weight as a pleasure. You won't want fattening foods . . . you're on the happy road to more bounce and a better figure.

To apply nutrition science, eat three balanced meals a day so the calories will be used for energy. When the bulk of calories are taken at the evening meal, more of them are stored for the simple reason that the day's activities are over. Calories taken in excess of immediate energy needs are stored . . . in the solid form of fat.

So eat breakfast . . . it's slimming! Oh, not two doughnuts or sweet rolls and coffee . . . that's just carbohydrates and stimulation. Have fruit, an egg, a slice of toast and coffee. That is nutrition to go on, and fewer calories than the carbohydrate breakfast.

Have a light but satisfying lunch. If possible have something hot. Include one protein food . . . cheese, fish, meat or another egg, to stick to the ribs and stimulate metabolism. Have something chewy, melba toast, a crisp, crunchy salad . . . the very act of chewing is satisfying.

Have a pint of skim milk or buttermilk every day . . . it is filling, not fattening and it acts as a buffer to the nerves.

Dinner at night can be a good meal and reducing. If you dine out and order pot roast, for example, specify without gravy, otherwise it will be swimming in several hundred calories. Have one starch, two vegetables and a light dessert, preferably fruit, or cheese and crackers. Almost any meal can be within 450 calories if the trimmings are deleted.

Do not eat to belt-pressing proportions. Ten minutes away from the meal you will feel perfectly happy and not hungry.

Hair Tricks for Gala Occasions

You can make any occasion a gala event just by dressing up for it—and that doesn't always mean a new dress and shoes. Whether you wear your hair short or long, little touches can add the kind of sparkle that reflects in your eyes when you know you look especially glamorous.

These little touches can be anything, just so long as they are gay and feminine. When it comes to femininity, ribbons are really in their own element.

Victor Vito, New York hair stylist, does a glamour coiffure in the new Empire style, brushing the short hair to give an upswept effect. Tiny satin bows are attached to a bicycle clip, which is worn at the back of the neck, with the ends behind the ears. The small, feminine bows cluster at the nape of the neck and behind the ears.

Long bobs may be plaited into braids along with colorful satin ribbon. Pin your braids coronet fashion for a dramatic effect.

Haircombs that are loose and frame the face look twice as intriguing with a big Gibson bow placed high on the back of the head, near the crown.

The mature woman can glamorize her silver hair for hatless evenings simply by placing pastel velvet ribbon comb bows wherever they look most effective.

Tiny Miss Fosdick a 'Giant' in a Global Classroom

By Fitzhugh Turner

MISS FOSDICK

THE highest ranking woman among makers of foreign policy in Washington is a 5 ft. 1 in., tennis-playing doctor of philosophy who joined the Government to gain background for teaching and who isn't sure now she would like to go back to her classroom.

She is Miss Dorothy Fosdick, 35, younger daughter of the New York clergyman, Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick. Miss Fosdick has been a civil servant for seven years, is a veteran of a half-dozen or more international conferences. She was appointed recently to the State Department's secret policy planning staff, the organization which, to a large degree, has made American foreign policy since set up in 1947 by former Secretary George C. Marshall.

The nine-member staff is headed by George F. Kennan, the so-called "Mr. X" of the State Department and a principal architect of American strategy in the cold war. Discussion with outsiders of the staff's work is forbidden to its members, but an idea of its importance can be gained from its assignment: To develop long-term programs for attainment of American objectives, to report on broad politico-military problems, to judge the adequacy of current foreign policy and to make recommendations to advance American aims.

She's the One and Only

THE first and only woman assigned to this top-level work is a quiet, unaffected, simply dressed brunette who might be mistaken, in the corridors of the building, for any of the State Department's many female clerks. But as a specialist in international organizations, Miss Fosdick has been over much of the world. A great many speeches made by American delegates in meetings of the United Nations have reflected her preparatory work, and some of the logrolling among Americans and other delegations to the General Assembly has reflected her studies of U. N. issues up for vote.

She is a friendly person, and, particularly in the United Nations, has made friends wherever she has gone. Her position still involves a great deal of consultation with foreign diplomats and with such Americans as leaders of private organizations concerned with international issues. The lift she gets from this part of her work, she finds, balances the more tedious aspects of what is essentially a desk job.

Miss Fosdick was born at Montclair, N. J., was graduated in 1934 from Smith College (of which she is now a trustee), and became an instructor in sociology there in 1947. Her thesis for a Ph. D., a degree she obtained from Columbia University in 1939, was published by Harper & Bros., under the title, "What Is Liberty?"

She left Smith in 1942 to get practical experience for her courses in sociology, government and political theory. "And now I'm so fascinated with direct experience I don't know if I'll ever go back to teaching," she says.

Her early jobs in the State Department were minor ones. She was a technical secretary with the United States delegation at Dumbarton Oaks. At San Francisco she was in on the birth of the United Nations, drafting documents as a special assistant to the secretary general of the American delegation. At London, where U. N. was organized, she was an organizational expert on setting it up.

At Major U. N. Meetings

She has attended every important U. N. meeting, playing an increasingly important role behind the scenes at each. By 1947 she had begun to be called upon for advice in policy matters. She was made assistant then to the director of the State Department's Office of European Affairs, working on U. N. questions affecting Europe. Amercian policy lines reflecting her influence include matters involving Spain, disposition of the Italian colonies and the Berlin crisis. In the last General Assembly at Paris one of her jobs was to seek out the views on U. N. problems of the Scandinavian states.

Miss Fosdick is an admirer of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, with whom she worked in negotiating the U. N. declaration of human rights. She also took part in last year's Geneva Conference at which U. N. members adopted a praiseworthy but so far not very effective draft agreement on international freedom of information.

Miss Fosdick lives simply in an apartment on the edge of Washington. She takes little or no part in the interminable rounds of Washington's formal social life, but sees a lot of friends in and out of Government. Summer vacations she spends at Mouse Island, Me., where her family has been going for years. She is known there as the heroine of the daring rescue of a pleasure boat skipper during a howling gale.

The story, she says modestly, has been embroidered with the years. What happened, as she recalls it, is that she was crossing to the mainland to keep an appointment with her dentist when she saw the boat of a local fisherman on fire. She steered alongside and pulled the man to safety.

Post Takes a Camera Tour of New Homes

HOW MUCH house will your housing dollar buy on today's market? The Washington Post will show, in photographs and articles, typical new homes available at current prices, from a low of $7750 to over $50,000. Today's article covers the range up to $10,500. Next week's tour will show new homes costing from $10,500 to $14,000

By Conrad P. Harness

PROSPECTIVE HOME OWNERS wishing to buy a new home costing $10,500 or less in the metropolitan area have a wide choice of styles, sizes and location, although only a small segment of the local building industry is building homes to suit slim wallets.

With rising prices of labor and material incorporated in current price tags, the man who pictures a $9000 home in terms of prewar dollars may be disappointed in today's offerings. By the same token, the prewar $2 shirt now wears a $4.50 price tag, or thereabouts.

In nearly all cases, homes costing under $11,000 are located in suburban areas where the developer was able to purchase large tracts at a reasonable price. Few $10,000 homes are being erected today in the District, and land costs make low-cost home construction a gamble. Therefore, builders head for the wide open spaces.

Homes in this price bracket are nearly always of three types—semidetached, detached two-bedroom bungalow or detached two-bedroom Cape Cod bungalow with expansion attic.

It is an axiom in building and financial circles that the head of a family should pay not more than 2½ times his annual take-home pay for a home. Another rule of thumb is that his monthly cost for shelter should not be more than 25 per cent of his monthly income.

With this in mind, home hunters shopping for $7750 to $10,500 homes should be making a yearly salary of $3000 to $4200, in round figures. The Veterans' Administration or Federal Housing Administration, when guaranteeing a mortgage, insist upon the head of the family making an ample salary in keeping with the cost of his prospective home.

In all but the lowest-cost housing, buyers will fird that land development includes a paved street, curbs and gutters and a sidewalk from the house to street.

No matter the price tag, if the home has been built to minimum specifications of the VA and FHA, buyers can be assured that building codes have been met, workmanship, materials and price are satisfactory. In the few cases where builders have fallen short on workmanship or materials on homes sold under the GI bill, the office of housing expediter has taken legal action against the builder.

In addition to standards of Government agencies, these modern low-cost homes must meet the construction standards of a financing agency.

Homes are usually frame, but sometimes brick, four to five rooms, with or without full basements. Their commonest characteristic is relatively small floor area, averaging around 850 square feet. Few are prefabricated.

Most, but not all, include a refrigerator and stove as standard kitchen equipment.

Although most of the below $10,500 homes are in large subdivisions, there are several small operative builders who build from 5 to 10 homes in groups scattered over the city. Where entire subdivisions have been developed, a shopping center is usually built to take care of shopping needs of buyers.

Financing of such homes is easier for the steadily employed veteran than for the nonveteran, as the former often can get occupancy by paying a small cash down payment ranging from nothing up to $1000. The nonveteran will be asked to pay a minimum of $1000 to $2500 down. However, his monthly carrying charges will be less than the veteran's.

The Federal Housing Administration, which issues mortgage guarantees to lending institutions loaning mortgage funds to home buyers, has become increasingly wary of backing buyers whose income is not sufficient to purchase the type home needed, or where income is not steady.

BASIC DATA: Located in Twinbrook, off Viers Mill rd., near Rockville, Md. Built by Twinbrook, Inc. Style pictured is basementless bungalow; other types are available. Room sizes: combination living-dining room, 23'6"x11'3"; kitchen, 8x11'3"; utility room, 7'10"x11'6"; bedrooms, 11x10'6" and 10x10'6"; finished stairway to second floor with usable area of 28x20. Lots average 65x200, with banks and terraces sodded, rest seeded. Shrubbary, flagstone walk included. Heat is gas air-conditioned; kitchen is equipped. Approved veterans need $500 cash for down payment, with $65 monthly carrying charges on 25-year mortgage. Nonveteran needs $1550 down, with $58.63 per month. Settlement charges run around $380

Sportsmen Buy 2 Bay Islands

Jefferson and Poplar Islands in Chesapeake Bay, the former site of the Jefferson Island Club, have been sold to a group of sportsmen headed by Charles M. Bright of Stevensville, Md., according to Previews Inc., sales agents. The price was not disclosed.

The Jefferson Island Club has moved to a new location nearer to Washington on St. Catherine's Island at the juncture of the Potomac and Wicomico Rivers. Before the main clubhouse burned in 1946, the club was so popular as a duck shooting and recreational center for Washington officials that it was known as the "Playground of Presidents."

Jefferson Island with 20 acres, and Poplar Island, with 200 acres, located 3 miles offshore from Sherwood, Md., are heavily wooded. The buildings which escaped damage in the fire and were included in the sale are a caretaker's cottage, a locker room building, a power plant, and several outbuildings.

South Has Home Furnishings Boom

HIGH POINT, N. C., Jan. 29 (U.P.). Furniture manufacturers at the current Southern Furniture Exposition don't have many surprises for homemakers but they received a few themselves.

The unexpected briskness of trade at the show is just one of the surprises. Another, not so unexpected, is the preference for traditional styles over the ultramodern.

Most makers returned from the midwinter furniture show at Chicago early this month almost in tears over the poor reaction to their 1949 models. The orders just didn't come through, most manufacturers report, and they feared the home-furnishing boom dead.

But buyers from 20 States arrived with their order-book pencils sharpened and some very definite ideas of what Mr. and Mrs. America want in the way of new furniture. Sales have been brisk throughout the first week although it was agreed this is a buyer's market.

Mr. and Mrs. Newlywed—the lucky ones with enough capital to set up their own new homes—won't see much in the way of innovation when the new models hit the home-town store windows next month, however.

Realty Expert Predicts 1955 Depression

Cleveland, Jan. 29 (AP).—"The war has permanently inflated real estate prices, and they never will return to postwar levels," Roy Wenzlick, noted St. Louis economist and realty analyst declared this week.

Addressing more than 1200 realtors, builders and at a meeting sponsored by a local bank, Wenzlick predicted.

"Building costs will drop possibly as much as 10 per cent this year. This decline in costs will continue until 1955, at which time we will be in the midst of a major economic depression.

"New home prices then will be about 30 per cent less than they are today, but 75 per cent higher than they were in 1939, and prices of existing houses will be little more than half what they are now."

Wenzlick observed that right now is an ideal time to sell all types of investment real estate, except office buildings. He advised those who intend to hold such properties to pay off their mortgages, pointing out that slim equities are extremely hazardous in a receding market.

If rent controls are continued indefinitely, available rental property will continue to shrink until it has disappeared from the market altogether, he predicted.

"The number of such properties has already greatly diminished since 1940, as thousands of dissatisfied owners of uneconomic rental units have willingly sold to tenants forced to buy," the economist added.

William S. Banks, president of the Home Builders Association, has applauded the recent judicial ruling in the case of the National Capital Housing Authority vs. Kalstein, which held NCHA was a landlord in the eyes of the District Rent Control Act and must abide by its regulations on rent increases.

"The Home Builders Association has always held that NCHA is in the competitive housing field," said a statement from Banks. "As such it should come under the same rules and regulations as any other landlord."

The Leo M. Bernstein Co. this week let lapse a $3,500,000 option for purchase of the Chasleton Hotel and Davenport Terrace Apartments. Explaining the action, Bernstein reported he dropped the option "because the only way we could have exercised it was to sell the properties under the cooperative plan and we decided not to do so."

Preparing the way for quick local action in carrying out expected large-scale public housing and slum clearance legislation, leading public housing officials met in Washngton this week for a three-day seminar devoted to technical analysis of the Administration's housing proposals.

Lawrence M. Cox of Norfolk, president of the National Association of Housing Officials, said passage of the Housing Act of 1940 will set into motion a housing and slum clearance program involving hundreds of millions of dollars. It is extremely important that this be a practical bill which will produce results, he added.

1948 Reported Big Year for Sale of $100,000 Mansions

Almost 2½ times as many private residences were sold for $100,000 or more through his firm in 1948 as in 1947, according to Ranald M. Stearns, vice president of Previews Inc., a national real estate firm. The average selling price of these properties was $156,000.

The area which produced the greatest number of Preview's sales was Greenwich, Conn. Eastern Pennsylvania was next, and Virginia and the West followed in that order.

"In our opinion," said Mr. Stearns, "this large increase in the sale of expensive homes indicates that both buyers and sellers are facing the facts of the present market realistically. Buyers have learned that they can still own a fine home for a fraction of what it would cost to build. And sellers realize that original cost cannot dictate today's selling price. The number of large residential sales which have already been closed in January, 1949, would seem to indicate that the market for these places will continue to be active."

Ostrow Plans Ramblers

Five, one-story, basementless ramblers will be erected on Darrow st., Silver Spring, by Dan Ostrow according to terms of a building permit application. Homes will measure 33x29 feet and will have gas heat and asphalt shingle roofs.

Landlord Offers $100 'Baby Bonus'

New York, Jan. 29 (NYHT). Concessions are returning, but with novel twists, as one way of filling new apartments in higher rental brackets. A Long Island builder has announced that he would present a $100 bank account to every child born this year to the residents of t he new 240-family Park Lake Apartments in Hempstead, which have five and six room suites available for $98 and $106 a month.

Sol G. Atlas of Grace ave., Great Neck, Long Island, the builder, described his offer as a step aimed at improving general landlord-tenant relations. "Too much emphasis is placed on disputes and bad feeling," he said.

Removing Wall Uncovers New Room

Waupaca, Wisc., Jan. 29 (AP).—You never know what you'll find in your house if you tear down a few walls.

The Robert L. Hollys tried it and found a whole new room—plastered, papered and ready for occupancy—they never knew they had. And they've lived around it for 43 years.

The room, 6 by 11 feet, showed up when Holly finally decided to take out a wall and see if he could find out what caused a "cold spot" in heating the house.

Yes, the house heats all right now.

Try 4 or 5 Types

Here Are Best Methods In Starting Seeds Indoors

By Alfred Putz

STARTING seeds indoors ahead of spring's arrival is one of the most interesting gardening activities. Any gardener who can give the sowings a sunny window and fair care will be well repaid for the little effort required. No expensive equipment or special skill is needed.

The novice will do well to restrict his operations to not more than four or five kinds until he has learned to gauge the capacity of the available window space. Because the seedlings must be transplanted to shallow boxes where they are to stand not less than an inch apart they take much more space than that occupied by the original seed containers.

Where a sunporch is available, many more plants can be taken care of than in windows. A coldframe with a tight-fitting sash also is a great help to house the plants when the temperature has moderated so that the plants are safe from frost.

Square Boxes Save Space

Square containers are preferred to round ones because they waste no space. Wooden boxes, 2 to 3 inches deep and not too large, are excellent, but moderately deep cake pans with several holes punched into the bottom will serve just as well. Where flower pots are used all but the top 2 inches should be filled with very coarse sand or broken rocks for drainage.

For many generations a mixture of equal parts of good topsoil, sharp sand and leafmold was considered the standard for starting seeds and it still serves well, especially if sterilized by heat or chemicals to ward off serious losses from damping off. In many cases a good seed disinfectant will be found almost as satisfactory.

Within recent years other materials have been tried and three of them — pure sand, chopped sphagnum moss and vermiculite have been found to offer distinct advantages. Damping off is a very rare occurrence with them because they are virtually sterile. To compensate for the lack of plant food, liquid commercial fertilizer is used for growth.

Containers filled with sharp sand should have the drainage holes covered with little pinches of peat moss or sphagnum moss to prevent loss of the sand. They may be kept standing in shallow water to provide semiautomatic subirrigation. Seedlings grown by this method never need shading against strong sunshine.

Knead Dry Moss in a Pail

Chopped sphagnum moss has given equally startling results. If dry it may be rubbed through a quarter-inch mesh. Such dry moss must be thoroughly moistened by kneading in a pail of water. Press out moderately before placing in the containers. Fine seeds are sown right on the surface, but for larger ones add a little additional moist moss.

Subirrigation for sphagnum moss and vermiculite by means of fiber-glass wicks eliminates the need of frequent attention. Unravel one end of the wick far enough to spread the strands over the bottom of the container, then pass the wick through the drainage hole and let the end hang at least an inch deep into water. This system takes most of the gamble out of watering. Watching the water supply in the reservoir is the only attention needed.

All sowings should be covered with a pane of glass and a piece of dark paper until they have sprouted. Living room temperatures ranging from 60 degrees at night to 75 degrees during the day favor rapid germination of most kinds. When the plants are up they are better kept 10 degrees cooler. These temperatures are quite usual close to the window panes unless a radiator is near by. To encourage straight growth place a large piece of white cardboard on the room side of each seedflat to serve as a reflector.

Drive Launched Here For Low-Cost Homes

DISTRICT leaders in the fields of construction, finance and Government this week opened a drive to produce low-cost homes for that segment of the local population which builders so far have not reached.

Following the belief that housing is a local problem and must be kept that way, members of an advisory committee of the "1949 Economy House Program" met at the offices of the Federal Housing Administration to lay plans on building lower priced homes.

James Hewitt, director of the local FHA office, told the assembled group that all segments of the building industry must cooperate to produce homes available to the lower priced market if the building industry was to prosper. "I think it can be done," he stated.

Defines "Minimum" House

In a discussion of what type of "minimum" house was to be built, Hewitt defined such a home in this manner: "A minimum house is one that is not too small that the wife will be dissatisfied and want to go home to mother. On the other hand, it's not too large that the mother-in-law will come to live with the kids."

William S. Banks, president of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, was elected chairman of the advisory board. He named the following steering committee to select permanent committees to spark the drive for housing: James Hewitt of the FHA, Edward L. McAleer, president, D. C. Building & Loan League; Edward R. Carr, builder and realtor; Joseph H. Deckman, building supply dealer, and Morgan B. Callahan, loan guaranty officer, Veterans' Administration.

Banks, developer of Huntington subdivision in south Alexandria, told the group that prospective buyers looking at current new homes on the market weren't "lookers." "They know the ropes," he declared. "They know how much is expected on the down payment on various types of homes, the weekly salary the buyer should be making, and other necessary facts. If you can sell them on the job, they are real customers."

He said there was a good market for new homes if they could be financed so that veteran-buyers could move in with only a small down payment. Large cash down payments discouraged such purchases, he indicated.

Demand For Rental Units

Col. Waldron Leonard of the District of Columbia Veterans Center told the audience that a vast unfilled demand existed for rental units which could rent for from $45 to $60 per month. Rentals on most new apartments are ranging from $70 to $100.

Nationally, other leaders in the building and financial field took up the cry for more lower-cost homes. Aksel Nielsen, president, Mortgage Bankers Association of America, addressing a bankers' group at Des Moines, said all groups in the housing industry cannot delay longer in effectively co-operating to create a lower-cost house with maximum livability and value, and with the lowest down payment and minimum monthly payments.

In Chicago the United States Savings & Loan League said league members had made substantial headway in 1948 in their program to concentrate available mortgage funds on new homes priced under $10,000.

The league added that savings associations across the country, by funneling a higher percentage of their mortgage credit into new low-priced homes, had been a strong force in preventing home prices from skyrocketing out of reach.

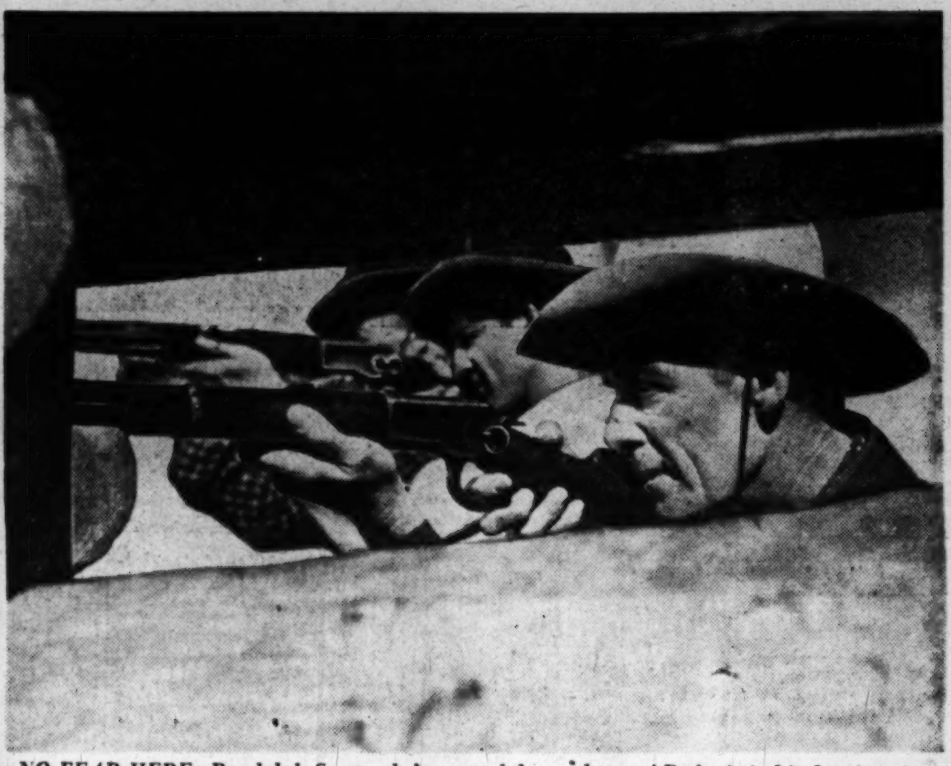
It's All for the West, Men!

FEAR ON TWO FRONTS: Jane Russell has something to hit back with in this scene with Bob Hope in their co-starring comedy, "The Paleface," opening Tuesday at the Palace. Below, Loretta Young is confronted by Wendell Corey, with a reasonable facsimile of a chap she's killed in "The Accused." This chilly yarn comes into the Warner Thursday



NO FEAR HERE: Randolph Scott, who's mowed down plenty of Redmen in his day, is at it again in "Canadian Pacific," which arrives Thursday at the Capitol

Theater Wing Players Remember the Vets

By Richard L. Coe

SINCE THIS HAS BEEN "Let's-Not-Be-Beastly-to-Axis-Sally" week, this is a good time to remember the men in the veterans' hospitals. They're still there, you know, and they need entertainment just as badly as they ever did.

In Washington and elsewhere the American Theater Wing has not forgotten this and though it's an uphill struggle, whipping up interest that was simpler to rouse during the war days, the Wing's Washington Hospital Committee goes its dogged way.

In the past 2½ years, under Director May Redmond Smith, the Wing's players and artists have been visiting wards, day rooms and auditoriums at Walter Reed, Forest Glen, Bethesda Naval, Mount Alto, Quantico, Fort Myer, Bolling Field, St. Elizabeth's and, on occasion, Soldiers' Home. Some 7000 individual entertainers have gone into the hospitals, but more are always needed.

Ward Visits

THE MOST interesting development in hospital entertainment has been the ward visit. Shortened versions of established plays are being given by both professional and amateur groups across the country and their reception has been more than heartening to the Wing and its performers.

The other night I went out to see some Washington actors play "Angel Street" in Walter Reed's Ward No. 1. Men with twisted or amputated limbs were propped up in their beds to watch the melodrama being played at one end of the room. Although officially the Wing is wary of "Angel Street" as ward entertainment, the one-set play went smoothly and effectively. The evening, clearly, was An Event, a conclusion you reach not so much from anything that was said but from the evidence that this night was different from the monotonous routine. Something was happening.

During the show I sat with a chap from Pittsburgh, Walter T. Dunlap. Walter had been a bank clerk before the war, a clear-eyed, direct chap. At the moment there are thousands like him in hospitals across the land; you saw hundreds of young faces like his in news pictures during the training period. Walter—an officer—was wounded at St. Lo and for three years doctors tried to save his leg. Last fall it was amputated and now he's looking forward to the day when he can resume life, probably in the more friendly climate of the Southwest. He's matter-of-fact about all this and his pretty, young wife is working in Washington to be near him.

Players Resourceful

THE PLAYERS were resourceful in adapting their drama to basic conditions. They'd located, in New York, the electrical contraptions whereby the gas light dims, a vital aspect of the play, which, you may recall, hinged on the flickering of the gaslight while the villainous husband is presumably out of the house.

Only the most fundamental props are used, but the costumes are the real trick. You feel you've walked into another era watching Grace Pearson in the flowing skirts of the shattered Mrs. Manningham, Karl Shuon (managing editor of the Marines' Leatherneck magazine) in the frock coat of the villanious husband. Pretty Pauline Cotterell filled the bill handsomely as the amorous parlor maid, with Nadya Grushetzky as the sympathetic cook.

Choicest of the parts, of course, is that affable Cockney, Inspector Rough. Earl Henry, in the role

Next Season

Four 'Big' Conductors Sign to Appear Here

By Paul Hume

FOUR GREATLY gifted, world famous conductors have been engaged for guest appearances with the National Symphony next season: Sir Thomas Beecham, English musician-conductor; George Szell, pianist and conductor, now heading the Cleveland Symphony; Ernest Ansermet, brilliant Swiss musician, founder of the Suisse Orchestra Romande, and recent guest conductor for the second season, of the NBC Symphony; Dimitri Mitropoulos, famed Greek conductor-pianist, in recent years conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony, and just named to succeed Bruno Walter as codirector with Leopold Stokowski, of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Society.

Great conductors move with ease in music of all periods. Musicians of taste and style, they produce sound musical results with any able orchestra. At the same time, over a period of years, it is impossible for a truly fine leader not to become associated in the public mind with certain scores, or the music of certain composers.

Sir Thomas Beecham's understanding leadership in music by Haydn, Handel, and Mozart has for many people made him a model in this field.

But Sir Thomas is not confined to the eighteenth century. His interpretations of Sibelius, Richard Strauss, and the unique modern English school are unsurpassed. He is almost solely responsible for public acquaintance with and love of the music of Frederick Delius.

Sir Thomas was for many years the conductor of the London Philharmonic Orchestra. In that position, he recorded more music than any single conductor has recorded with any other orchestra. Now leader of the recently formed Royal Philharmonic, Beecham is again engaged in turning out some of the most magnificent records in history. His visits to America have seen him directing our greatest orchestras as well as such groups as the Brooklyn and Seattle Symphonies.

Szell Widely Known

GEORGE SZELL is widely known in America, and Washington has special reason to admire him. His greatest fame is as a conductor. But in Washington he has been heard with the Budapest String Quartet in the Library of Congress in programs where he gave evidence of owning some of the finest musicianship going today. A man who has led the New York Philharmonic, Philadelphia, Chicago, and many other orchestras, Szell has also won high regard for his great direction of opera at the Metropolitan.

Performances of Wagner and Strauss he gave in that house rank among the great interpretations of those scores. Szell is not popular with orchestral players, but he gets fine results in the standard romantic repertoire of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries.

He's A Real Pitchman

Blind Disk Jockey 'Reads' His Script

By Sonia Stein

THE remarkable thing about Pete Cassell's disc jockey show, is that there is nothing remarkable about it.

CASSELL

The afternoon show (2:45 to 3:30 on WARL) sounds like the average disc show of hillbilly music, with a little above average "selling" between discs by an announcer with a slight hill twang. The commercials are all read; they are ad libbed only when time contingencies make cutting necessary.

So, in every way, the show is far from remarkable. In every way but one. The announcer is blind. He reads all commercials, and whatever notes he has on his day's recordings, with the index finger of his left hand.

Cassell prepares his copy with a stylus and Braille line guide from typewritten copy read to him by his wife. The finished script is a sheaf of heavy brown paper, painstakingly punched with the hundreds of tiny holes that form the Braille alphabet.

He reads his material with such skill that even the engineers in the control room momentarily forget he's blind and toss him hand cues.

Actually, he works with almost no cues whatever. He judges time to a fine point, coming in with his platter chatter a split second after the engineer opens his microphone.

A minute before it's time for his show to go off, a producer comes into the studio and taps him on the shoulder.

Cassell also uses a special watch with raised points at each number which he can read with his fingers. The hands are especially sturdy to withstand the manual reading.

Echo System

FOR GETTING around the station and around town, Cassell relies on memory and the system of echoes which is now being taught to blinded servicemen.

Thirty-one-year-old Cassell, who has been almost blind since birth and completely blind since he was 16, learned this system as a child.

Cassell doesn't have a seeing-eye dog. "I wouldn't subject a dog to show business," he says with a grin.

But show business is OK for him. His mother wanted him to be a preacher; his father wanted to make a lawyer of him but Pete had been devoted to radio ever since he'd stayed up late as a child listening to crystal sets built by his uncle.

After dutifully studying law for two years, he told his father he was wasting money sending him to law school, and began the long, hard road uphill in radio.

Plays Guitar

NOBODY ever seems surprised that Cassell can play the guitar and sing (which he does on his morning show on WARL from 10:05 to 10:30) but most station managers are extremely skeptical about hiring him as an announcer.

"I used to ask them for some copy to work from, and prepare a whole show for them," Cassell explains. "I knew it'd be foolish to just keep talking and trying to convince them that way."

But from the beginning Cassell has realized he'd have to be a "pitchman" as well as a musician to make radio his livelihood. "There are thousands of good guitarists, but very few good radio pitch artists," he figures. The station manager and the coowners of WARL consider him one of their top pitchmen.

Poetry Reader

CASSELL has been in radio for eight years. He's worked at stations in Wheeling, W. Va.; Atlanta, Ga.; Chattanooga, Tenn.; Knoxville, Tenn. and Springfield, Mo.

In his travels he has picked up a huge collection of poems—most of them redolent of homey philosophy—which he reads on the air. Most of the collection has already been put into Braille, and he hopes to complete it someday soon so that he can fulfill a longtime wish, to do a 15-minute program of poems and philosophy.

The poems are one of the most popular items on the show, and were even more popular on several TV shows he did with Connie B. Gay's organization, when the audience could actually watch him work.

The people who work with him at the station regard him as a very unusual guy—not only because he reads in the dark but because he has set such high standards for his show. Cassell refuses to read copy sent by the advertising agencies saying he has used the product to be advertised and found it wonderful, unless he has actually used the stuff and does find it wonderful.

No, your TV set wasn't playing tricks on your tired old eyes at the Gala and the Inaugural Ball. The lady introduced as Ruth Markel one night and Hazel Merkle the next night is actually Hazel Markel, whom you see on WTTG every Tuesday at 8 p. m. Mrs. Markel is also acting as program director at WTOP until a regular one is named in addition to her duties as education, public

Book People Hopefully Looking For the Film Market to Revive

By W. G. Rogers

NEW YORK, Jan. 29 (AP).—It looks as though the film companies would start buying books again. For about a year movie magnates have kept authors cooling their heels at the tradesman's entrance; they are to be invited in once more to join the feast.

At least New York literary and movie agents hope that's the case, for it'll mean money for them, their authors and, sometimes, the publishers. They not only hope, they predict: One agent says film-story editors are already "on my neck" looking for material; a second foresees an upswing by April; a third reports "encouraging signs." But a fourth is not so optimistic.

This then may be the lowest point in the phenomenal drop in book sales to filmland. There were two principal causes for the slump: The movie makers, having trouble getting profits out of England, were losing part of the extra income brought in by exports; and they were afraid of television.

They still seem afraid of television, which may make it possible to see regular shows at home without paying theater admission; and against this possibility, the Hollywood purchase price for books always includes television rights. But the companies may now be ready to disregard the loss of foreign profits as far as it has hit book-buying.

Some Bright Spots

LATELY the situation has been about as bad as possible. There are bright spots, of course. Houghton Mifflin, with five 1948 sales to movies, can gloat over its best year ever. A forthcoming Simon & Schuster novel, "Father of the Bride," has been reported sold at $100,000. One or more sales have been made by Dial, Messner, Random House, Doubleday, Lippincott and Atlantic-Little, Brown, as Paul Nathan has listed them in the book-trade magazine, Publishers' Weekly.

In the period 1943-1947, best-seller sales to films averaged 18, but for 1948 up to late fall the comparable figure was two. From 1944 through 1947, there were six to nine sales a year of the 12 annual Literary Guild selections, and not one sale in 1948.

Agent Annie Laurie Williams says that formerly a guild, book-of-the-month or "name" author novel was certain to arouse Hollywood interest and likely to lead to a sale; now, if a book had all three of those publicity advantages, she doubts whether it would interest Hollywood.

Of two London firms that used to operate here, one has closed its office. United States Pictures, Liberty Pictures and Enterprise have folded up. Cagney, Universal-International, Columbia, Vanguard (Selznick) have closed story offices, and Samuel Goldwyn and Warner Bros. have reduced such activities. There remain Metro, Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, RKO. As Hollywood writes its own pieces, it is Hollywood agents, as Harold Ober points out, who have been hardest hit by the curtailment.

One Out of 18

ON A RECENT best-seller list of 18 novels, only 1, "Cry, the Beloved Country," was bought for the films. Since that was one of the finest pieces of fiction in several years, does that mean that Hollywood is going to stop buying so much of what one agent called "trash?" Brandt & Brandt doubts it, and so does Nathan. Harold Matson believes the movies will try to buy things they need, rather than novels with a big popular sale; they will be bought to provide roles for idle stars, or because they are easily adaptable to the screen.

Sales are likely to be for modest prices, too. Historical novels, with elaborate and expensive costumes, are out. If that means fewer novels of that type will be written, maybe this whole business is a good thing.

Since publishers usually take only a small cut on the Hollywood transaction, the slump has not affected them greatly, though once in a while a timely check has helped a weaker house over a rough spot. The big money prizes have gone to authors already getting rich on their books; that means that a book club's $50,000 was topped by that much, or more, for film rights, and these bonuses usually miss the little man . . . who often writes the really good book.

Top Comedy Stars Give TV The Cold Stare Thus Far

By John Crosby

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 29.—The entertainers here are growing increasingly restive. Next to taxes—easily the most popular topic—television and the Columbia Broadcasting System's raids on the other networks hold the center of the stage. (Actually, I suppose weather leads all other topics, but, as far as I can see, weather is discussed almost constantly in California.)

Jack Benny took up both topics the other morning over breakfast. "Gosh, all that fuss. A man moves from one network to another and the whole industry is in an uproar. I didn't think I was that important." Benny still thinks the capital gains deal may be approved and, even if it isn't, he still stands to profit heavily.

"At first I was a little afraid of television because we couldn't do the sort of things we do so well in radio." Benny's recent show, in which he and Ronald Colman changed places in a dream sequence, he considers one of the six best he ever did, a proposition I won't argue. It probably is. However, he pointed out that much of this show is pure radio which couldn't be converted to television. There is a sequence where Benny walks over to Colman's house to borrow a cup of flour. Footfalls. Suddenly a clink of a coin in the cup. "Thank you," says Benny. That sort of gag, in which the Benny show specializes, is pure radio.

"But then I remember that television is the same old thing I used to do in vaudeville." Benny thinks he could handle a variety act on television that would compete in popularity with his radio show. "Or it might be a one-act play with sets. I'd live in a small but nice home and the Colmans would live next door in a big, fancy one."

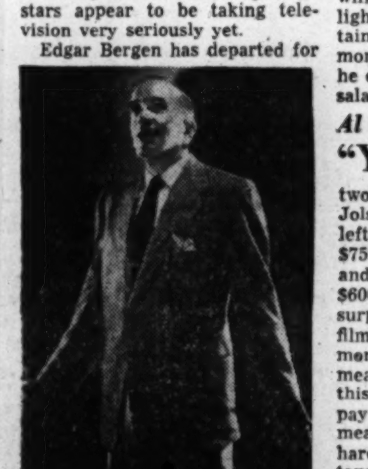
Bergen Departs

HOWEVER, neither Benny nor many of the other top radio stars appear to be taking television very seriously yet.

Edgar Bergen has departed for New York to look over local television there and make up his mind what he wants to do next year. Bergen, one of the more thoughtful members of radio's comedy circle, thinks that radio has made two mistakes that television shouldn't repeat.

First, he feels that radio, centered as it is in New York and Hollywood, has lost touch with the rest of the country and should get out to the people more. Second, he sees no real reason why an entertainer should be required to produce a new show once a week. Why not once a month, Bergen asks.

This point of view could spread easily, with taxes the way they are. Bergen figures his present four-month vacation from radio will cost him about $8. In the light of present taxes an entertainer could hang on to as much money working once a month as he could once a week at the same salary.



AL JOLSON

". . . if I were only 35 . . ."

Al Has Eight Left

"Y' KNOW," Al Jolson confided out at Santa Anita, "I made two million dollars (from "The Jolson Story"). I got eight cents left." Jolson currently earns $7500 a week from his radio show and manages to hang on to about $600 after taxes and expenses. A surprising number of radio and film names owe the Government money for last year's taxes, which means they have to work harder this year to earn more money to pay last year's taxes. And that means they'll have to work even harder next year to pay this year's taxes.

Jolson feels an old-time minstrel show with an all-star cast in blackface would be tremendous in television. "There's a million jokes—all of 'em bad. But people will laugh at 'em when you put 'em in blackface. If I were only 35 years old . . ."

He's still full of astonishing vigor for a man who admits to 60 years. (There are grounds for suspicion that 64 is closer.) At Santa Anita, where his box is next to that of Harry James and Betty Grable, he bounds through the Turf Club as if he owned it.

A Great Talker

HE IS a highly respected horseplayer in this community and, of course, incredibly gifted at talking a horse home. In fact, there is reason to believe the only voice the horse actually hears through the tumult of 70,000 people in the stretch drive is the booming, consonantless roar of Al Jolson.

Jolson, incidentally, has just won a spirited argument with the National Broadcasting Co. over putting his broadcast on tape. NBC, which has held out for years against transcription, has surrendered completely in this regard. Jolson favors transcription because, as he confesses, he isn't much of a musician and he occasionally hits a real clinker. Tape recording would permit him to edit his own songs.

This May Be An Idea for Us!

LONDON, Jan. 29 (AP).—Parliament has agreed to dig up a million pounds (four million dollars) for a "national theater" where Shakespeare, Shaw and other playwrights will reign supreme for as little as sixpence (a dime) a seat.

The only mild dissent came from George Bernard Shaw, who edged into the act through a letter read by Laborite Emrys Hughes.

GBS thought the house ought to be built in West London, instead of on the south bank of the Thames.

"But by all means let us collar the million for a great municipal theater," wrote Shaw.

Oliver Lyttleton, a Conservative leader who usually pounces tooth and claw on government-sponsored measures, praised this one. The bill, he said, "Shows great boldness and imagination" among the Socialists.

created by Leo G. Carroll, made much of that spirited scene wherein the inspector forgets his hat. Afterward several of the audience commented to me on his ability to memorize both part and accent. One chap told me that if he could have walked, the only parts he could have played were the two policemen who come on at the end to haul the villain away. Played by Bernie Young and Duncan Miller, these roles are all action, no words.

"Something Different"

AFTER the show I asked Walter Dunlap how he'd liked it. He liked it fine, he replied. "It's something different in the routine and that's what's always more than welcome." Then he picked up his crutches from under my chair and went out with his wife for a visit in the dayroom.

Another "ward" play that's been through the Washington area and has since covered many of the States is the onetime big musical, "Brigadoon."

This has been a real trail-blazer for the Theater Wing. One who saw the original at the sumptuous Ziegfeld in New York might have thought it impossible to launch the musical on so simple a scale. Originally the idea was to give it in auditoriums and day rooms. But they've lately gotten round to acting it out in wards, emphasizing the simple, romantic story and the lovely score.

Want Big Names

WHAT makes this effort at ward plays so difficult is the vast number of wards, the limited number of productions. You just can't begin to cover all the wards on anything like a systematic basis; the Wing can only do its best.

It's helped a lot by such groups as that which did "Angel Street" and by others which are willing to take productions designed for school and community theaters to the hospitals. One such group, for instance, is the George Washington University Players, who took their comedy, "John Loves Mary" on a hospital tour before playing its regular dates at Lisner Auditorium.

Such energy as this is vastly appreciated by the Wing and if you've any ideas, Mrs. Smith, at Dupont 0381, or the Wing's headquarters, 2020 Massachusetts ave., would be glad to hear from you.

Getting the big names and top professionals out to the hospitals is another aim of the Theater Wing. During the war its Stage Door Canteens always were a haunt for generous performers and only last week a group trekked out from the Capitol Theater. Though it's no longer the glamorous work it once was, some performers haven't forgotten. May they never.

McCarthy Girls Come By Skating Naturally

NOT long ago the regulars out at Chevy Chase Ice Palace put their backs to the wall and watched a couple of visitors take over the rink.

Reasons for the activity lull were the McCarthy Sisters, red head Nona, 21, brunette Gerry, 18. They were taking a busman's holiday, for to the McCarthy girls, even on vacation as they then were, the ice is home. Now they're back in town as part of the "Ice-Capades of 1949," which is getting out the SRO signs at Uline Arena.

THE McCARTHYS
Nona Gerry

The girls come by their skating naturally. Their dad is "Red" McCarthy, noted for his hair-raising leaps on skates. Though they're simply "Ice-Capettes," which is chorus line to the ice revue, the McCarthy girls should have skating in their blood.

Canadian-born, they didn't take to the ice till they got to California, of all places, where "Red" insisted they attempt his art. That was only four years ago, but now the girls pull a mean refrigerated jitterbug, as those who caught their act at the Chevy Chase spot can vouch.

Occupational hazards? Sure, the McCarthy's have 'em, but they're not the falls which would defeat mere flatfeet. Their grief is nothing but the common cold. "Seems like I've always got one," mourns Nona. But that doesn't keep her off the ice. So it was that when they were vacationing with the Bonner family, 1365 Kennedy st., an ice party was in order.

This year's "Ice-Capades," as rich in dazzling production numbers and comedy turns as ever, stars Donna Atwood, once an "Ice-Capette" herself, and tall, blond Bobby Specht, a young wizard of the skates.

The beloved Old Smoothies, Markhus and Thomas, are back. Forgie and Larson do their impossible games on skates and Eric Waite, Jackson and Lynam headline the comedy acts. Alan Konrad and Mary Lela Wood, fast-rising stars, are rewarded with more turns than in the past.

"Ice-Capades" continues at Uline's with two performances today and nightly festivals through next Thursday.

AVC to Offer 'Menagerie'

TENNESSEE WILLIAMS' prize-winning play, "The Glass Menagerie" will be presented by the Washington Workshop at Cafritz Auditorium, 16th and Q sts., next Saturday and Sunday nights under sponsorship of the Greater Washington Area Council, American Veterans Committee.

Mary-Averett Seelye is directing the cast with Mary Goldwater in the role made memorable by the late Laurette Taylor. Nan Frutkin, Arthur Leib and Peter Jenks complete the cast.

Tickets may be obtained at the committee clubhouse, 1751 New Hampshire ave., and at the Washington Workshop, 2020 Massachusetts ave., or by phone at Adams 5913 or Adams 2309.

Dimes Show at Playhouse

AN AFFECTIONATE tradition, admired through the years, continues tonight with a special gala performance at the Playhouse for the benefit of the March of Dimes.

A new French film, "Monsieur Vincent," and three top flight turns will be given at 8:30 for the benefit of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis under the honorary sponsorship of Mrs. Harry S. Truman, Vice President Barkley and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Nino Martini, whose tenor has brought him fame in opera, screen, concert and radio fields, will give his final concert before sailing for Europe.

Les Compagnons de la Chanson, that group of nine satirical Frenchmen who've been appearing at the Shoreham, are staying over an extra day before returning to France to offer their sophisticated singing humor.

Meyer Davis and his orchestra will lead the proceedings, as they have at so many Washington functions through the years.

The film, which stars Pierre Fresnay, concerns St. Vincent de Paul, a wealthy man who gave away his riches to devote his life to the poor. Tomorrow morning "Mr. Perrin and Mr. Traill" will resume its run at the Playhouse.

It concerns the headaches and heartaches of an Air Force general during the European war, his struggles to satisfy both the men under his command and his superiors in Washington.

Clark Gable has the role of the general, with Walter Pidgeon, Van Johnson, Brian Donlevy, Edward Arnold, Charles Bickford and John Hodiak heading the all-male cast.

The picture will open its regular run at the Capitol the next day.

Just Get Yourself Maladjusted If You Want to Act

Chicago, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—A man should be mentally maladjusted if he wants to become a successful actor, Northwestern University psychologists says.

Richard Carlson, star of the Chicago company of "Mr. Roberts," admitted that may be true, "but even so, it is still worth it to be an actor."

The psychologists said they based their findings on an intensive study of the best student actors at Northwestern. Invariably they had leanings toward hysteria, depression and split personality.

"I am sure the scholarly gentlemen know whereof they speak," Carlson said sleepily when awakened shortly after noon, "but personally, I became an actor because I like to sleep late in the morning."

Orchestra Heads Praised For Signing Conductors

Ernest Ansermet, like San Francisco's Pierre Monteux, is known above all for his tremendous gifts in directing some of the greatest music written in the present century. Rising to wide European acclaim as conductor for the Diaghileff ballet when it was setting Europe on fire with new works of Stravinsky, Ravel, Prokofieff, and others of their day, Ansermet proceeded to form the Suisse Orchestra Romande.

Recent years have found Ansermet regularly on conductors' stands in Chicago, Pittsburgh, New York, and on the West Coast. For two years his concerts with the NBC Symphony have been exciting musical events. Ansermet brings excellent new works to native audiences, and champions American music more than some resident conductors.

His authority in conducting music of all periods will make his stay with the National Symphony an occasion for real enthusiasm. We hope he will be given a free hand in choosing his programs.

To discuss Dimitri Mitropoulous last is not to be construed as commentary upon one of the most discussed and debated conductors of our time. Since his coming to this country over a decade ago, Mitropoulos has won some of the highest praise given any conductor. When Bruno Walter recently announced that he felt he should no longer serve as codirector of the New York Philharmonic, it was to Dimitri Mitropoulos that the powers behind that mighty orchestra finally turned. Next season Mitropoulos will leave Minneapolis for New York. The Minnesota city will mourn him, for he has brought its orchestra to its finest peak, assisted by a firm financial footing achieved through happy recording contracts.

Mitropoulos has been hailed as a second Toscanini by some, and criticized by others for the unevenness of his work. His opera performances in Philadelphia and New York during past summers have been hailed as the greatest readings of Tosca and Madame Butterfly since Toscanini's days at the Met.

A man with several strings to his bow, Mitropoulos is a conductor, (like Bruno Walter and Leonard Bernstein) who does an able job of playing the piano (which he does brilliantly) while conducting. If Mitropoulos would like to play and direct here in Washington, we hope he will be encouraged to do so. He does a sensational piece of work in the third concerto of Prokofieff in this fashion.

ANSERMET MITROPOULOS

The Washington Philatelist

Stamp Asked Honoring Angora Goat Centennial

By William M. Stuart

MEMBERS of the Eighty-first Congress have already started introducing bills calling for the issue of commemorative stamps. While there is nothing basically wrong with bills passed by Congress for new stamps, the issue of new stamps customarily is purely a departmental procedure. This method should be followed and it is regrettable that so many members of Congress feel the wholesale issue of postage stamps should continue. Already bills have been introduced calling for stamps honoring the "centennial of the Angora goat in the United States" and the 100th anniversary of the birth of Hambletonian."

There are other subjects far more appropriate for postage stamps than goats or race horses. In selecting subjects for new stamps, it would seem most desirable that Congress give serious consideration to historical subjects. This has been done in many cases. New stamps are usually welcome but millions of collectors are becoming rather tired of new issues not wanted either by collectors or the public in general.

The Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., met Tuesday evening, Ellery Denison presiding. An unusual exhibition was the feature, with an interesting address on the postal service, with rates and stamps of the 1840-1847 period by John D. Pope 3d of St. Louis, Mo. He displayed four copies of the rare and famous St. Louis, Mo., "bear" stamp of 1845-1846, on cover. Each copy was superb and many members never before saw such a fine display. He also displayed several frames of the 1847 5-cent and 10-cent varieties both on cover and in singles, pairs and strips. The whole display was greatly appreciated and the speaker's remarks regarding the early stamps and cancelations much enjoyed. Pope is prominent in national philatelic circles, at present being the attorney for the Society of Philatelic Americans. At the meeting on Tuesday in Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw., an auction will be held.

At the meeting of the Pentagon Philatelic Society on Thursday evening, at the Pentagon, an auction will be held. A special program will be in order at the meeting on February 17 and on March 3 an auction will be held.

A new 3-cent commemorative stamp, honoring the Minnesota Territory Centennial, will be released on March 3 at St. Paul, Minn. The design depicts a pioneer moving westward with a Red River ox cart. The color has not yet been decided upon. The stamp will be printed in sheets of 50 by the rotary process and the initial order calls for 100 million stamps.

The Baltimore Philatelic Society will hold an exhibition for collectors of the Baltimore and Washington area in the Maryland Institute of Art, Mount Royal ave. and Lanvale st., Baltimore, Md., March 16 to March 20. On March 19 at 5 p. m., an oyster feast will be given at the Lithuanian Democratic Club, 816 West Lombard st., Baltimore.

What's Going On in Music

GREAT music for the week includes Howard Mitchell's programming of Beethoven's Fourth and Sibelius' Seventh Symphonies for Wednesday night. Both of these great works are being played for the first time by the National Symphony. The concert also includes the world premiere of Joseph Wagner's Concertino for harp and orchestra. Sylvia Meyer will be soloist.

MEYER VILLA-LOBOS

The same evening, unfortunately, also brings Martha Graham and her dancers, in one of the finest programs she has contrived, if we may hazard a guess about the new works.

Other outstanding events include this afternoon's concert under the noted Brazilian, Heitor Villa-Lobos, who programs two of his own works, one by his idol, Bach, and the long-silent second symphony (in C Minor and C Major), by Scriabin. Barker Hall today has a perfect program, and the Greenhouse cello concert this evening in the National Gallery is very good. Cellists never come singly in this town. Tomorrow night's Potter father and son program in the Phillips Gallery is a good match for tonight's concert.

Out-of-town notes: Jennie Adair, coloratura soprano, and Stewart Gordon, pianist, will be heard in recital Friday, February 4, at 8:15 in George Washington High School, Alexandria. Tickets at Stabler's Ticket Mart.

Rubinstein In Rhapsody A Good Set

RACHMANINOFF: Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini. Artur Rubinstein, pianist, with Philharmonia Orchestra under Susskind. Victor 1269. $4.75.

Serge Rachmaninoff's last work for piano and orchestra, and one of his most economical, has its third recording in this release. Previous versions are those by the composer himself, with the Philadelphia Orchestra under Stokowski, and a later account from Moiseiwitch and the London Philharmonic under Basil Cameron.

There was a unique quality in Rachmaninoff's playing of his own music. He had the dual authority arising out of authorship of the music and his position as one of the world's towering masters of the keyboard. Thus his recordings of his piano concertos, solo compositions, and this rhapsody have a kind of rightness in shading, tempo, and general delivery which make them particularly difficult to match.

Also, his account of this music was made with Philadelphia Orchestra at its height under Stokowski, in days when Victor made records with far less surface noise than they have today. Thus my preference in records of this music is for the original version. Failing that, this new set is by all odds the best choice. Rubinstein has something of the flashing virtuosity which Rachmaninoff commanded, and he understands this era of composition to perfection. His handling of the piano line is all you would want.

Walter Susskind is neither the conductor Stokowski was and remains today, nor does he have the Philadelphia men under him. Still, lacking a certain biting excitement in some of the orchestral passages, this is a suave-sounding instrumental affair.

Sculpture at National Gallery

Egyptian Exhibit Opens Today

By Jane Watson Crane

THE National Gallery's prize package of Egyptian sculptures, revealed to the President at his reception there on Inaugural Day, is placed on public exhibition today for an indefinite period. Twenty-eight small pieces, carved and modeled in various materials and spanning about 3000 years of early Egyptian art, have been lent from the private collection of C. S. Gulbenkian. They were previously shown at the British Museum in London, from where they were recently shipped to the United States.

Early Fragment

THE earliest piece is a fragment in low relief from the chapel of a tomb in the royal cemetery established by Cheops (builder of the great pyramid) at Giza for his favorite children and their families. The figures are believed to represent his granddaughters, whose mother was Princess Merytyetes. The limestone retains traces of green paint. Also of the Old Kingdom are two small-scale but full-length figures of Egyptian officials, examples of the many effigies of the dead placed in the upper chambers of their tombs, where the earthly bodies were buried below them. The funerary statues were intended as a guarantee of survival, which indeed they have been.

In the collection is a justly famous little portrait head in ossidian, believed to be of King Amenemhat III of the Middle Kingdom, and sometimes called the MacGregor head, after a former owner. Carved in a very hard stone, it is all that remains of a statuette. Small as it is, and not altogether complete, it reveals more of the subject than could pages of description. With the head of a Nubian official of the same period, it offers striking human character study.

Courtier Bes

OF THE Saite period is a lifelike seated figure of a courtier known as Bes. We know it is Bes because the statue is inscribed in several places, and the inscription leaves no uncertainty as to his high connections. In green stone of this era is a realistic and vigorous little head of a priest. Among later objects is a round bowl in speckled breccia stone, and an ornate standard in the form of "The Solar Barque" with a replica of a shrine on its bronze deck, that reminds one of Cellini's Italian creations.

Considering that, with the exception of the Egyptian head in the Phillips collection and an example at the Freer, there is virtually no Egyptian art in Washington, the diminutive show at the National Gallery is an event of first magnitude.

Limestone statuette of the courtier Bes, Saite period, usually dated 663-525 B. C.; part of the exhibition of Egyptian sculpture opening today at the National Gallery relations and community service director and her several radio shows on WTOP.

ADDED NOTES on Horace Heidt. The hue and cry raised by Accordionist Dick Contino, who claims that Heidt's contract with him "enslaved" him, has ruffled Heidt's feathers considerably. Heidt now has relinquished all his contracts, except for Contino's and the two he had with blind musicians, since he felt "the blind boys need steady, assured incomes."

The new accordionist with the show, Dominick Franteri, is not under contract to Heidt.

When Heidt introduced him last week (he's not a contestant, just a guest artist), he assured the audience any applause they might give the 17-year-old boy would go to his heart and not to his head. This was a cross reference to Contino, beyond doubt.

Jerry Bowne, who started working for Heidt 20 years ago as a trumpeter and is now producer of his NBC Sunday night show, dropped by this week on his way to Charlotte, N. C., to say that he was in the control room the night Fague Springman sang in Richmond, Va., and saw absolutely no evidence of tampering with the controls. (Baritone Springman felt that the mike pickup that night wasn't all it might have been.)

A LOCALLY PRODUCED TV variety show is due to begin Thursday at 10:15. The WNBW show, a weekly half-hour affair, will have a night-club locale and feature night-club acts appearing locally, or brought in from Baltimore and New York.

Ray Michael, one of Washington's most popular TV figures, will be emcee. Dancer Hal LeRoy, Singer Jeanne Warner and Harry Shaw and Bobby (master and monkey) are scheduled for the first show.

Four singing waiters will take care of the commercials—songs with noncommercial verses and commercial chorus.

Eddie Pierce's five-piece band will provide the music, making this the only local TV show with an orchestra.

Barbara Cole, Washington dancer, has been signed for the "Admiral Hour," TV variety show which premiered Friday night at 8. The cast, which includes Comedians Sid Caesar, Imogene Coca, Mary McCarty and a group of dancers, will take turns in top spots. The show will be seen on both NBC and DuMont video stations. Locally that's WNBW and WTTG.

Miss Cole, who has appeared on a number of TV shows, is also currently conducting interviews on "Television Screen Magazine" (NBC) Saturday nights at 7:30.

The first full program of the National Symphony Orchestra to be televised is scheduled for Thursday at 8:30 p. m. One of the series of neighborhood concerts, the musical program will be picked up from Western High School. The telecast will be on WMAL-TV; the regular broadcast will be heard on WMAL.

A light-hearted study of humor will be presented this afternoon at 4:35 on WRC when "Living, 1949" goes over the history of laughter, with Fred Allen as guest. The script is by Lou Hazam.

WGAY's "Community Reporter" program with Ernie Tannen at the mike, won a prize for being the show with the most family appeal among radio shows sponsored by department stores of a certain size (Hecht's size). It was a grand prize, the kind the National Retail Dry Goods Association gives to shows which outclass even the first prize ones.

Miss Wilson Named at WINX

John S. Hayes, vice president of WINX Broadcasting Co., has announced the appointment of Lynnette Wilson as program director of WINX and WINX-FM. Miss Wilson replaces George Creamer, who has resigned.

Miss Wilson has been a member of the production staff of WINX since September 1947. A graduate of the University of Arkansas, she came to Washington in 1945. She is a member of the Women's Advertising Club of Washington.

Barbara Cole, Washington dancer, is one of a troupe of comedians, dancers and singers who form the cast of the "Admiral Broadway Revue." The new video show is telecast Fridays at 8 over WTTG and WNBW in Washington

Airways Go Onward and Up

By Orval Hopkins

THE AIRWAYS AND YOU: Western Air Lines announces it set a new company record in 1948 for air freight poundage hauled. The poundage was 3,562,406 and was 44 per cent greater than the 1947 mark.

Pan American-Grace Airways blushingly reveals that it has won the aviation award of the Inter-American Safety Council for the fifth time in a row.

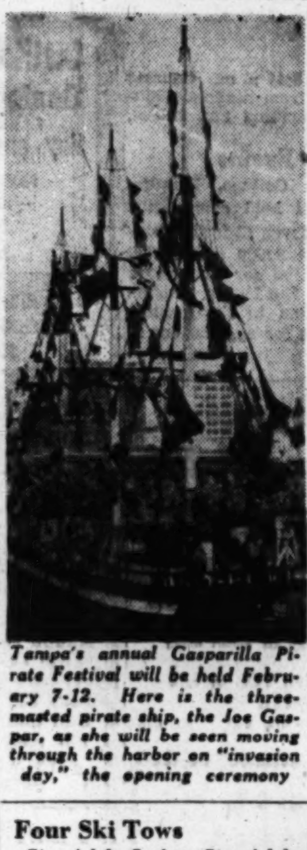
American Airlines is installing public address systems in all 50 of its DC-6's in order to "supply in-flight reports and call attention to points of interest along the way." Of course there's one thing about public address systems: You can't tell 'em to shut up.

GREYHOUND has moved its travel bureau into new quarters at the front of the building facing New York ave. at 11th st. It will be open from 9 to 5 every day except Sunday . . . Although it has an unusually heavy schedule of winter events, New York State has added the world championship bobsled races, to be held at Lake Placid February 5, 6, 12 and 13. I assume that's weather permitting . . . The Ocean Forest Hotel at Myrtle Beach, S. C., is reopening on Tuesday. Ralph J. Hewlett is still the manager and he would remind you that the Ocean Forest is "located on Highway 17, halfway between New York and Miami," that "the surf roars under it's (sic) very windows," and that "acres of pine forests reach to it's(!) back door."

RICHARD S. BUTLER has packed off to Naples, Fla., to manage the Naples Beach Club. The Naples Beach Club was founded by Larry MacPhail and his motley crew and there's an unfounded rumor that Leo Durocher wasn't allowed near the joint. Anyway Butler, who with his wife runs the Canvasback Inn, in Perryville, Md., now finds himself in charge of 49 apartments, a golf layout, a beach club, a dining room, some tennis courts and a skeet range. Naples is on the Gulf of Mexico side. Butler has managed the Annapolis, the Hamilton, the Hay-Adams House and Hotel 2400 here.

PAA says that starting Tuesday it is offering round trip and circle tours between more than a score of cities in the Eastern and Southeastern United States and the Caribbean Islands at fare reductions ranging up to $100. The new fares apply between United States cities served by Eastern and National Airlines—from Miami to New York—and the capitals of Puerto Rico, the Dominican Republic, Haiti, Jamaica and Cuba. Passengers from any of the United States cities included in the excursion pattern can fly to Miami or New York by National or Eastern and to and from the islands by PAA Clipper. Both Washington and Baltimore are served by National and Eastern.

OUR GOOD friends of the Associated Press report that the children of Tampa, Fla., will have a place of their own in the town's Gasparilla Festival this year for the first time. Fifty floats picturing well-known children's tales will parade through downtown Tampa on February 12, last day of the week-long charivaree. Behind each float will be a group of 30 to 40 children in costumes appropriate to the theme of the float. Ten bands and 10 groups of baton swingers will round out the procession.



Tampa's annual Gasparilla Pirate Festival will be held February 7-12. Here is the three-masted pirate ship, the Joe Gaspar, as she will be seen moving through the harbor on "invasion day," the opening ceremony

Quebec Mixes Old and New

MANY persons think of Quebec as "La Belle Province," a piece of the Old World transported into the present day, or as a vacation wonderland, a skiers' paradise; the home of French-Canadian hospitality. Quebec is all of these, but it is something more. It is one of the leading industrial districts of Canada.

Quebec Province has been favored with an abundant supply of raw materials of all kinds—iron ore, titanium, gold, silver, lead, zinc, copper, asbestos, mica and lumber.

Foresighted men have built up great industrial establishments in Quebec. Steel works, shipbuilding, hydro-electric plants, chemical works, the greatest aluminum industry in America, pulp and paper mills, textiles and electrical products are here. Locomotives and rolling stock for Canada's railways and for world export are built in the province. Flour mills and grain elevators are located at Montreal and Quebec, which are the greatest ports of North America after New York.

Quebec Province is favored by geography. It is at the very center of the rail, air and water transportation systems of the continent. The manufacturer in Quebec can ship his products to any country in the world direct from the wharves of Montreal, Quebec, or any other of the thriving ports on the St. Lawrence, or by rail, air or water to any point in the United States and Canada.

Industry in Quebec gets along very well with its labor. The men and women who work in Quebec's factories are satisfied with the laws governing labor relations and have proven their ability to learn all complicated techniques and skills required by modern manufacturing processes.

An excellent system of trade schools maintained by the government turns out a steady supply of well trained young people ready for all trades.

These advantages have attracted a great number of new industries to Quebec during recent years, from both the United States and Europe. The Department of Trade and Commerce of Quebec reports that nearly 3000 new plants have been established in the province since 1945. This influx is expected to increase during 1949.

Racing Craft Head for Lauderdale

FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA., Jan. 29.—Some of America's finest racing boats will participate before 20,000 spectators in the second annual Fort Lauderdale Power Boat Regatta, February 26-27, in New River Sound here.

The regatta is staged through the Fort Lauderdale Yacht Club, member of the American Power Boat Association, and is sponsored jointly by the City of Fort Lauderdale and the chamber of commerce.

The first day will feature inboard racing with 225-cubic-inch, 135-cubic-inch classes, "E" class racing runabouts, and the Governor's Trophy race for gold cup boats. The Governor's Trophy, a huge sterling silver punch bowl, was won last year by the late Jack Cooper of Kansas City, who was killed in a race in Pickton, Ontario.

The second day will be for various classes of out-boards on the tricky New River Sound course.

Charles Schwarm, a former member and organizer of the Queen City Yacht Club of Cincinnati, is general chairman of the regatta.

Vienna Happy as Coffee Goes Off Ration Lists

THE AUSTRIAN peace treaty may be unsigned, the future uncertain, and supplies short, but people of Vienna can at least talk things over again in one of the city's famous coffee houses, now reported booming after the removal of coffee from ration lists.

The friendly Viennese custom of gathering for a cup of coffee and discussion of social, political or business affairs dates from 1683. Already London had taken enthusiastically to the stimulating new beverage from the East, which its sponsor claimed would quicken the spirits and was "good against sore eyes."

In Vienna, the first coffee house made its appearance in the wake of a national emergency. Involved in its story are a siege, a victory, and a hero. The siege was laid by the Turks in 1683. The victory that turned them back from the city was achieved with the aid of Sobieski, John III of Poland.

Discovered by Accident

THE HERO of the coffee story also was a Pole in Austrian service, one Kolschitzky. Discovering a bag of strange brown beans left behind by the retreating Turks, Kolschitzky learned how to make an appetizing brew with them, and set up a cafe in which he sold his "black soup" to increasingly appreciative customers.

In time, Vienna's "kaffee klatsch"—originally meaning a ladies' afternoon coffee party—became a phrase known around the world. The coffee houses multiplied, and took on influence in national as well as social life. Each group of politicians, musicians, businessmen, writers, and artists had its favorite rendezvous, big or little, plain or fancy.

These cafes were more than places to sip coffee, steaming black or topped with blobs of whipped cream, while gossip, compliments, and even political plots were born. They were centers of current news gathering and dissemination. There, one could read the world's leading newspapers and magazines provided for the patrons; or meet with friends for a game of chess, bridge, billiards, or dominoes.

Never Lack Conversation

VIENNA'S COFFEE houses survived wars, hard times, and strikes, including the stoppage that closed the cafes and shut off this important news source during the city's turbulent inflation period of the early 1920's.

In a city like Vienna, with its long and varied history, adherents of the "kaffee klatsch" have never lacked subjects of conversation, pleasant or tragic. The Congress of Vienna in 1814 met there for one of the most brilliant assemblages ever seen in Europe. World War I left a starving city, a top-heavy capital and economic center of a nation which had been reduced to little more than one fourth its former size.

Slowly rebuilding, Vienna was further reduced to the status of a provincial capital of Germany after the Nazi absorption of Austria in 1938. Today, again on the losing side, the battered but gradually reviving city is divided between the occupation zones of the United States, the Soviet Union, Great Britain, and France.

Travel Rules Handicap Student

Geneva (AP).—A considerable number of European theological students awarded scholarships in the United States and Canada last year by the World Council of Churches had to withdraw because they could not get the necessary travel documents, the World Council says.

Dr. C. E. Josephson, secretary of the council's scholarship committee and a former president of Heidelberg College, Ohio, said the difficulties experienced by European students in obtaining travel papers were "almost impossible to imagine." Of the 72 students from Europe granted United States and Canadian scholarships this year, Dr. Josephson said, at least 14 failed to obtain the necessary papers, while another 15 withdrew voluntarily for various reasons, "principally because of the recent political and economic developments in Europe."

The difficulties were best illustrated by the experience of one German student, Dr. Josephson said, who reported that before he was ready to sail for America he had to complete 387 pages of forms or applications and answer 1994 questions.

Duggan Tells About Work Of Institute

By Fred M. Hechinger

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Some said that Laurence Duggan was dead and could not defend himself against the indecent smearing of his name. They were wrong. I have just received the 136-page annual report of the Institute of International Education, of which Duggan was president. It was prepared by Duggan before his tragic and untimely death, and it tells in detail about the past operations of the institute and its plans for the future.

Even now Duggan's voice speaks more convincingly than do the slurs of his would-be detractors.

"The work of the Institute of International Education," wrote Laurence Duggan, "at this time of crisis is to strengthen the basic unity of the world by assisting people of this Nation to live, study and work with people of other nations and vice versa . . . The institute is the nongovernmental American institution which is particularly responsible for creating better understanding among men and women of the world through the medium of educational interchange."

During the past year the institute answered more than 30,000 inquiries from students all over the world. It assisted more than 5000 people from at least 50 countries and continents—including America—by giving them scholarships and travel aid amounting to more than two million dollars. It cooperated with more than 300 academic institutions, governmental agencies and groups of private citizens.

In a way—supported by the Fulbright Act, the Carnegie Corporation and the Rockefeller Foundation—it has carried out a giant educational Marshall Plan.

Scholars Helped

UNESCO has delegated to the institute certain responsibilities in the administration of fellowships. Scholars from China, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Holland, Norway, the Philippines and Poland have been aided in studies which will contribute to the rehabilitation of wartorn areas.

Outstanding foreign lecturers have been brought to this country, teachers and students have been "exchanged," and about 4000 students and teachers—American and foreign—were served by eight round trips made by American ships, organized by the institute for that purpose. The "Student Ships" by now have become a new but firm tradition in both nautical and educational history. During my own travels last year I met hardly an American student who failed to talk with enthusiasm about the crossing on the Marine Tiger and the Marine Jumper.

The questions answered by the institute ranged from "Will a medical degree from Argentina be accepted in the United States?" and "How can a fraternity locate and get a foreign student as its guest for a year?" to "Where can a student from Siam get the best training in animal husbandry?"

Said Laurence Duggan: "The life blood of the Institute of International Education is people . . . Education is not limited to the classroom . . . Peace can only come if men and women at all educational levels and in all occupations have a chance to get to know and understand peoples of other nations."

The formula for this is plain (even if the execution is often difficult): take a trade union leader from Minnesota and send him to Ruskin College in Oxford for a year; place a teacher from Bavaria in a teacher-training institution in Colorado; have a mechanical engineer from Peru visit factories and laboratories in Schenectady, Bridgeport, Los Angeles; ship a graduate arts student from Harvard to the Sorbonne in Paris. The institute has done all that last year.

Duggan included this in his report, "A Look to the Future."

Careful Selection Urged

THE report calls on the new Congress to appropriate the funds which are necessary to implement presently existing legislation for educational exchanges. But in addition, it calls for the most careful selection of the men and women who will be privileged to participate in exchange schemes. "Since we cannot look forward to the movement of hundreds of thousands of people between nations except in war," the report recommends, "we must be certain that the people who are given the opportunities to go as peacetime ambassadors are serious and able representatives." The institute will help in evaluating qualifications and certificates.

Special emphasis is placed on the need for educational places for men and women from Austria, Germany, Japan and Korea, and the institute hopes to find the colleges and universities ready to cooperate. But even more urgent: a way must be found to help some the qualified refugee students "now housed in deplorable conditions in former concentration camps in Europe to begin the readjustment which will make them useful members of society."

Obviously, the problem of exchanges "behind the Iron Curtain" cannot be ignored. The report concludes that although the institute had never concerned itself directly with political beliefs of students, "the ideological conflicts of our postwar years have necessarily affected our program. New barriers are constantly being thrown up."

Fortunately, the institute recognizes the importance of cultural interchange as a deterrent to such barriers and a potential hope for peaceful cooperation. It has therefore been decided to maintain reciprocal scholarship exchanges with all countries, including those of eastern Europe.

Transport Subsidy Asked

FINALLY, the report calls for some form of government subsidy for the transportation of qualified students. It points out that present arrangements are unsatisfactory, because the cost is still outside the reach of many who would be most valuable members of many exchange groups. In the past private support has helped to some extent to solve some of the financial problems, but the available funds have continued to fall short of the requirements.

The report is a living testimony to Duggan's devotion to the cause of education and international understanding. "No man can wisely predict the future," he seems to have sighed. "If, however, one is not sufficiently courageous to plan for what may be ahead, little progress can be made."

Perhaps Laurence Duggan lost sight of the importance of his own person over his concern with the world. Perhaps the sickness of the world made him forget for a fatal moment the remaining potential for hope. Both sentiments are expressed in his own message to the board of trustees of the institute: "To a sick world the recent words of Raymond Fosdick are tonic: 'In spite of all evidence to the contrary, the things that divide the world are trivial as compared with the things that unite it.'"

Maryland Tourney Closes Tonight

By Marian H. Barre

AGAIN the District is bereft of its bridge talent. It's a temporary state of affairs due to the annual Maryland State Championships in Baltimore, where our local luminaries have been in action since Friday afternoon. The tourney ends tonight, so things will be back to normal when the Federal Bridge League's master point pair monthly is played tomorrow evening at 2600 16th st.

Several other nationally awarded matches are on the weekly schedule, including one Tuesday evening at Buckingham Village. Heretofore, this contest has been held each third Tuesday, but now has been moved up to the first Tuesday of each month. The conclusion of Fred D. Karpin's lecture series in the village brings about this change of program.

Rating first priority is the Washington Bridge League pair contest on Wednesday at 8 p. m. in Hotel Roosevelt . . . Arlington Village Club has ACBL awards in competition Friday, February 4—also in the evening; and the Agriculture Bridge Club's monthly matinee will be played Saturday, beginning at 1 p. m. in Euclid Studios.

THE blue ribbon bridge classic known as the Life Masters' Individual draws the elite to New York on February 4, 5 and 6; it's the sole invitational tournament of the entire year, bids being issued to the aces in strict order of precedence. Playing in two sections, top-ranking "lifers" compete against each other while the more recent members play in the other. Several Washingtonians have been invited, among them a former resident, Mrs. Frederick Eberson, who now lives in Memphis. She will sandwich in a visit here between the Maryland Championships and the Individual.

Thirteen new members joined the ranks of the Women's Auxiliary of the Washington Bridge League at its bimonthly meeting on January 22 at Hotel Roosevelt, when Mrs. H. G. Campbell presided. Luncheon was served after the meeting, Mrs. J. G. Seabourne and Mrs. J. L. Herlihy being joint hostesses. So large was the attendance that the master point duplicate was played in two Mitchell section, Mrs. D. E. Stephan directing.

Winners in the "A" group were Mrs. N. G. Poulieff and Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys, who tied Mrs. Ida Terrant and Mrs. J. A. Dearing for north-south honors, while Mrs. Margaret L. Fisher and Mrs. Marianne Boschan were top in the other position. In Section B, awards went to Mrs. Harold Young-Mrs. Gregg Custis, Mrs. Lester Gibson-Mrs. J. G. Fletcher.

One of the new members was a runner-up. She was Miss Ruth Broadfoot, who was paired with Mrs. Mary Wurzer, the auxiliary benefactor who made the hooked rug which was raffled at the annual benefit for Children's Hospital. Other pairs among second-placers included Mrs. Alice Wilson-Mrs. William Plum, Dr. Emily Grewe-Mrs. Stephan.

CHARLES LYONS won for the fifth time in consecutive games when he was paired with Mrs. Dora Schwartz on January 21 at Euclid Studios. In each of these matches Lyons played with a different partner. The late Wilbur Whitehead was wont to remark that the ability to get along with a variety of partners was the final test of a player's ability!

Leaders in the other position that same evening were Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Rosson; runners-up included Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Boyd, Dr. Edward Short and John Luttrell. There was a one-point difference on the east-west side but Mrs. Schwartz and Lyons had a 32-point lead.

"Wild Deuces" and the "Gremlin" foursome tied for top in the Federal League team match of January 24, which was the second game of the 1949 series, played under the new handicap method of scoring. First victory in the series went to the "Myrtles," so named for Miss Myrtle McMahon and Mrs. Margaret Myrtle, current feminine champions of Northern Virginia.

Next annual tournament coming up is the Virginia Peninsula event on February 11, 12, and 13, at the Chamberlin Hotel in Fort Monroe.

At the Washington Bridge League's last master point game in January, national awards went to—Mrs. Margaret L. Fisher—Fred L. Karpin, Alfred Stidham—Lewis Tubbs, Mrs. J. D. Boyd—Mrs. W. H. Gorton, Col. J. G. Seabourne—Manfred Sobernheim. The last-named pair was a first time partnership.

In the last January team game, winners were the president's foursome of Dr. W. H. Gorton, Dr. N. J. McHugh, Fred George and Alfred Stidham.

New Stanford Laboratory

Stanford University, Calif., Jan. 29.—Plans for a new $175,000 organic chemistry laboratory building at Stanford University were announced last week by Dr. Alvin C. Eurich, acting president of the university. Construction of the laboratory, which will be in the rear of the present chemistry building, will include laboratory space for first-year students, eight four-man laboratories for advanced students and for reasearch work, and four faculty offices with adjoining laboratory space. It will also have a conference room, reading room and such facilities as space for special research apparatus, an analytical and instrument room and a stock room with adjoining loading dock. Dr. Eurich's announcement of the plans for the organic chemistry laboratory was virtually his last act as acting president of Stanford.

Colleges Publish Music

Northampton, Mass., Jan. 29.—Smith College, here, and Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley, Mass., are jointly pioneering an unusual project devoted to the publication of modern American music. Items already printed by the "Valley Music Press" include songs, chamber music, string orchestra works, piano and viola music. Recently the State Department placed an order for 150 copies each of four of the "Press'" publications for distribution in its overseas program.

50-Year Job Confronts Social Educators

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

NOT until the year 2000 will there be enough trained social workers to take care of today's demands.

This critical shortage is one of the ills of social welfare training that the National Council on Social Work Education is trying to cure.

HOLLIS

The council has launched a four-level study of current and expected needs that will point to a solution of general problems.

The study, financed by a grant of $31,000 from the Carnegie Corp., is under the direction of Dr. Ernest V. Hollis, chief of college administration for the United States Office of Education, and Miss Alice L. Taylor of the Federal Security Agency's bureau of public assistance.

Statistics, cited by Dr. Hollis in a preliminary report on the study, show there are from 100,000 to 150,000 jobs in the United States in which social welfare training should be required.

The country's 65 organized social welfare schools, with some assistance from 25 partially organized programs in other universities, produce fewer than 2000 trained social workers a year.

Dr. Hollis estimates that at this rate it will take a half century to meet present needs.

For a long range view of social welfare needs, Dr. Hollis plans to call in "creative social planners" who will be asked to "indicate the nature and direction of growth they expect by 1970."

Scope of the field is the first of the four levels on which the study will be conducted.

The second is the distribution or professional responsibility between schools, agencies and social welfare organizations in preparing social workers. Licensing and placement of workers and accreditation of schools will be considered.

Recruitment and education of social workers is the third phase of the four-part study.

The fourth phase of the study will deal with organization and financing of social work education.

Advising Dr. Hollis and Miss Taylor in preparation of the study is a lay committee which has as its chairman Dr. J. L. Morrill, president of the University of Minnesota. Other members of the committee are:

Arthur J. Altmeyer, commissioner of the Social Security Administration; Paul H. Appleby, dean of the Syracuse University school of citizenship; A. J. Brumbaugh, vice president of the American Council on Education; Lyman Bryson, director of education for the Columbia Broadcasting System; Wilson Compton, president of Washington State College; Mark F. Ethridge, publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal; Lester B. Granger, executive secretary of the National Urban League; R. G. Gustavson, chancellor of the University of Nebraska; Rufus C. Harris, president of Tulane University; the Rev. Raymond A. McGowan, director of the Social Action Department of the National Catholic Welfare Conference; James H. Means, professor of clinical medicine at Harvard University; Dr. William C. Menninger, psychiatrist; Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer, William T. Sanger, president of the Medical College of Virginia; Mrs. Victor Shaw, National Social Welfare Assembly; Charles P. Taft, former president of the Federated Council of Churches of Christ in America; Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah); Frank Weil, president of the National Jewish Welfare Board; Donald R. Young, director of the Russell Sage Foundation.

Junior Fishermen

FOR CENTURIES Portuguese fishermen, among the world's most daring seamen, have wrung a hard living from the ocean rolling off their native coasts. Frugal Portuguese mothers, as skillful at the needle as the men at the nets, have learned to make discarded adult clothing in turn fit the older children, the next smaller, and the smallest. These two, at last inheriting the accumulated patches of a whole family, are the ultimate extreme — the youngest in the oldest.

The Turning Point

Dr. Ralph W. Sockman

A young man's problem helped him choose a career

USHERED into the tiny office, a young, distressed student, haggard and pale, sat on the edge of the chair, nervously fingering his hat. Pleadingly, he stared at the grave face of the Y.M.C.A. intercollegiate secretary, a man scarcely older than himself.

"I came to see you as a last resort," blurted the young man. "If I were at home, I could talk to my own pastor. But because the matter is so personal, I've hesitated to seek advice in New York. Believe me, I'm desperate!"

The young man, it developed, owed money, and felt keenly about it. Sympathetic counsel — and practical advice — solved his problem. But the experience, and others like it, caused the young "Y" secretary to turn finally to the ministry.

"I decided then that the opportunity for service was unsurpassed in the ministry," recalls Methodism's Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, minister of NBC's "The National Radio Pulpit" since 1936, and for 30 years pastor of New York's Christ Church.

Torn between the law and the church, young Sockman had put off his decision after leaving Ohio Wesleyan University. As a graduate student at Columbia University in New York, he served on the Y.M.C.A. staff, and there made his choice of a profession. Since then, the one-time counselor of distraught students has become the spiritual guide of thousands of members of his own congregation, and of millions more in his vast radio audience.

"There — it's mine!"

Statuesque Jean Jones, 22, is typical of dozens of talented youngsters who are building careers for themselves as they share in the development of television. A singer on NBC's lively "Young Broadway" telecast, Jean divides her time between TV and stage shows. She left Hickory, N. C., three years ago.

YOUTH STEPS OUT IN TELEVISION

It's a field for pioneering

By KAY SULLIVAN

TELEVISION—that burgeoning, explosive, astonishing newcomer of the entertainment world—is still pretty much of an infant. And like many a child, it seems to get along better with the very young. Since its very earliest days, much of its success has been sparked by the lively enthusiasm and intense faith of young people. They have not always been paid very well for their efforts, but they haven't minded because they have been in love with the strange new invention and its tremendous possibilities.

Indeed, Horace Greeley's threadbare advice to "Go West, young man," might well be changed to read, "Go into television, young fellow." Not since the pioneer days of radio have such golden opportunities been within reach of ambitious youngsters with talent and enthusiasm.

In the last two years, the television industry has taken enormous strides. Today there are 800,000 home television sets; and more than four million people gather around them every day to watch the pulsating screen. More than 50 stations are in operation throughout the land, and by 1950 virtually every large and near-large city will have one. Only last month the coaxial cable, which alone can transmit television overland, was stretched to the Middle West.

Video Needs More Talented Youngsters

ALL THIS means that television needs more and more people to plan its shows, supervise their production, and be their stars and supporting participants. And it's not out of line to say that many of those people should be young. Video is an industry peculiarly adapted to youthful ideas. It seeks imagination, creativeness, refreshingly new techniques which are traditionally the gifts of young minds and spirits.

A survey of the leading networks demonstrates that the hand which now rocks the TV cradle is far from gnarled. The average age of all television personnel engaged in production, exclusive of engineers, is about 28 years. The average age of engineers is 31.4. As for performers, the average is less conclusive because there's been a rush to TV by older, long-established radio, stage and screen personalities.

Yet by any standards the number of video entertainers from 17 years up is impressive. They sing, dance, act, play musical instruments, operate puppets and report the news, with the eager, sometimes brash intensity of youth. It's a formula that to date has helped make television succeed beyond all belief.

While twenty-one-year-old singer Helen Ryan performs, NBC director Laurence Schwab, 26, and engineer Heino Ripp, 24, watch on double monitor screen.

Many of video's leaders have risen rapidly

THE PEOPLE in television are so young that they tell their ages willingly, correctly, and even proudly. Many of them look as though they should be rushing down school corridors in time to make a geometry class. As a matter of fact, quite a few of them were doing that not so very long ago.

Pert Rhoda Mann, 21, juggles puppets for NBC's "Howdy Doody" just as she did a couple of years ago to amuse high school classmates. Sparkling Marylyn Day, just 20, hurries from her singing-modeling role on ABC's "Fashion Story" in time to make the opening curtain of a Broadway show. At 29, Johnny Bradford is editor of the NBC Television Magazine on WNBW in Washington and interviews famous personalities regularly. Vivacious Dorothy Doan, 35, of CBS-TV's "Vanity Fair" was a cub reporter not so long ago. Irene Murphy, 23, hostess of the Dumont "Woman's Club," is a television veteran, boasts over 300 hours before the video cameras. In Philadelphia, Calvin Jones joined WPTZ as a cameraman last year at 23. In nine months he was program director.

After School, She's on Video

BLONDE and beautiful Vivian Ferracci, 18, who has turned down movie contracts, combines school and TV. She's earning her way through college by participating in NBC's quiz show, "Americana."

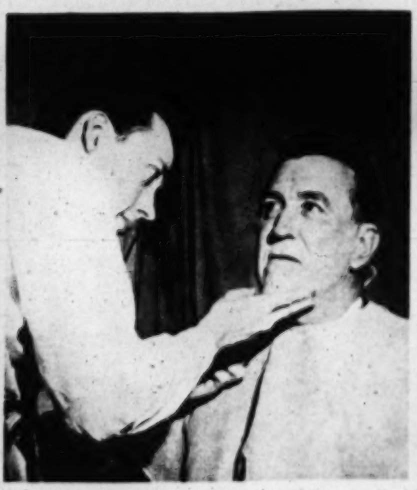
How to break into television? There have been a few cases of lucky breaks, but most TV folk who are successful today got there because they weren't afraid to place a firm foot on the bottom of the ladder.

Bob Keeshan of "Howdy Doody" started out as a studio guide; Eddie Kean of the same show broke in by song-plugging; Matt Harlib (CBS floor manager) wore a page boy's uniform. Betty McCabe of "Texaco Star Theater" was a secretary. Frances Buss, CBS's only full-fledged woman director and one of the few in the industry, began as a receptionist—and a substitute one at that.

Yet for every one of the smart, gilded young people in the nation's TV studios, there are dozens more who failed to get ahead. As in most new fields the prime requisites for success are three: perseverence, talent, experience — in that order. Background in school or summer theaters, modeling, stage and radio work are extremely helpful. For engineers, sound men, cameramen and other technicians, specialized training plus movie or radio experience is generally necessary. Today, the metropolitan studios are increasingly demanding rounded experience, but there are still numerous opportunities in the smaller TV outlets for young people with skill and ambition.

In a young industry, youth abounds. Talented and enthusiastic young people like these are planning . . .

Stage Manager: Cuing shows on and off air is steady job for NBC's Betty McCabe, 25. She times acts, checks costumes, keeps performers in right range for cameras.



Make-up man: Dick Smith, 26, readies Connecticut Gov. Chester Bowles for interview. He performs like service for participants in about 25 NBC shows weekly.

Actress: Talented Doris Brown, 22, holds star of her CBS show "Lucky Pup" on her shoulder. Doris won job at an ad lib audition, thinks television is "fascinating."

Art Director: Twenty-seven-year-old cartoonist Georg Olden came from wartime O.S.S. art unit to CBS where he makes cartoons, graphs, maps for video shows.

Specialty acts and youthful exuberance are good TV combination. Above, vivacious Kyle MacDonnell, 23, and partner Earl Wrightson, 29, sing out in "Girl About Town," (NBC).

Douglas Edwards, 31, got his first taste of radio in school station, became a top CBS television newscaster. He interviews celebrities like Eleanor Roosevelt nightly.

Husband-and-wife team Hal Cooper and Pat Meikle, both 25, write, produce, act youth programs for Dumont.

Special events director Bob Bendick, 32 (in trench coat), briefs CBS mobile crew for on-the-spot TV broadcast.

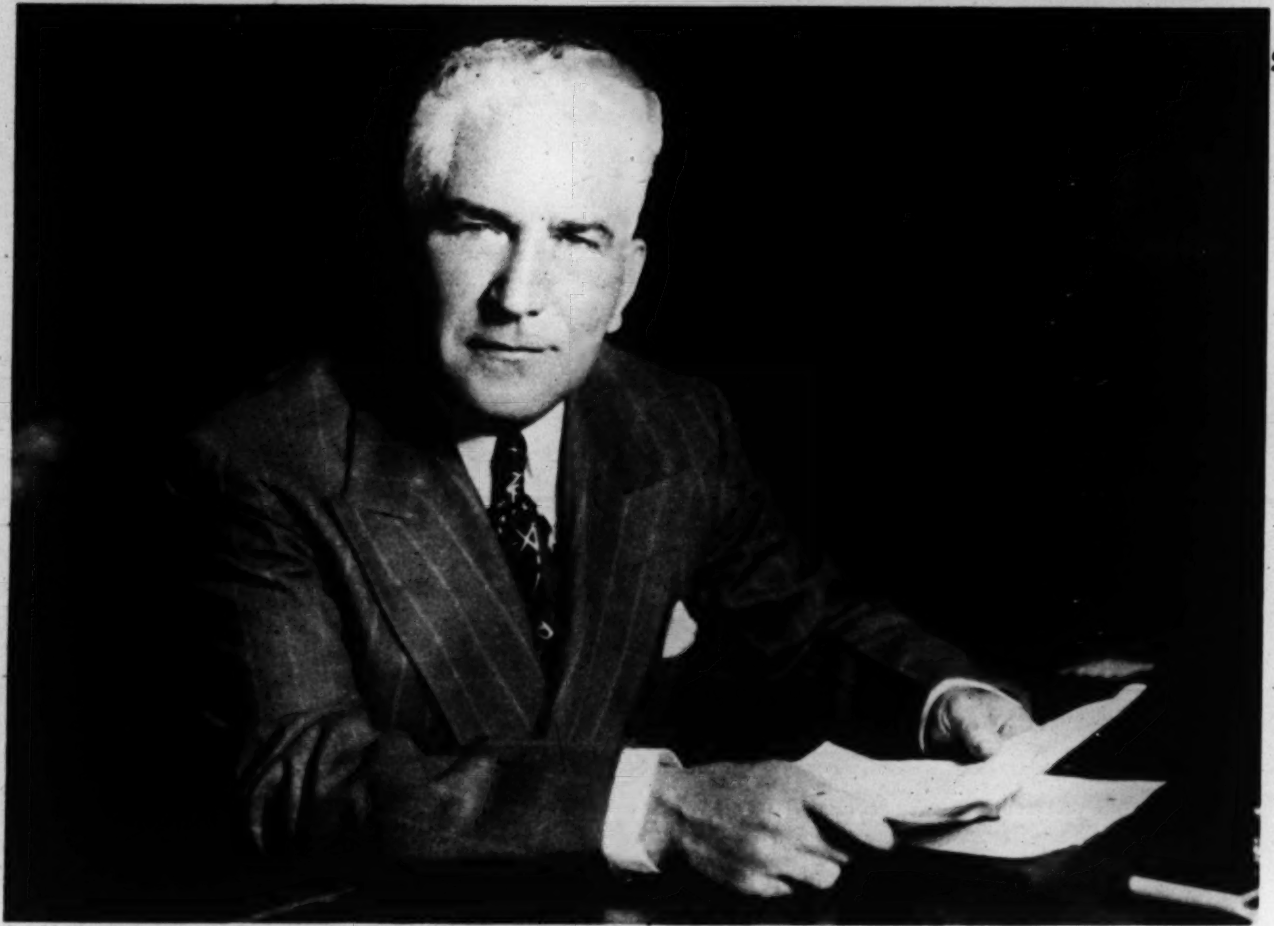
and producing television shows for the important networks . . .

Film Director: In charge of film syndication for CBS, H. Grant Theis, 28, directs rental of movie versions of shows to stations beyond present reach of TV cable.

Music Specialist: Margaret Snider, 27, prepares recorded backgrounds for NBC live and film broadcasts. Toughest job: checking clearances for music to be used.

Cameraman: ABC's Johnny Broderick is a veteran telecaster at 34. He's covered scores of major events, says his favorite was opening of the Metropolitan Opera.

Dancer: Twenty-four-year-old Betty Luster made her debut in London ten years ago, now does her own choreography for NBC shows. Above, a Tahitian dance. THE END.



Nation's top taxgatherer is George J. Schoeneman, Commissioner of Internal Revenue. He pays income taxes, too.

You and Your Income Tax

Believe it or not, many people overpay their tax. Here's how not to

BY J. K. LASSER

Author of "Your Income Tax"

COMMISSIONER SCHOENEMAN advises taxpayers as follows: "Taxpayers can save themselves, as well as their government, much unnecessary expense by careful reading of tax forms and instructions. . . . For 1948, the Form 1040 instructions appear in small pamphlet form for the first time, and include all the answers for the great majority of taxpayers. For others, whose affairs are more complex, a 115-page booklet entitled, 'Your Federal Income Tax,' has been prepared. It can be purchased for 25 cents from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C. Moreover, there is always a welcome sign out at every local office of the several Collectors of Internal Revenue for any taxpayer needing direct assistance in preparing his tax return."

WITH THE FIRST 1949 income tax deadline just 45 days away, it may cheer you up to know that many people—and you may be one of them—will be entitled to tax refunds for 1948.

This pleasant state of affairs comes about as the result of the present pay-as-you-go system, and because tax-slashing legislation was passed during 1948, effective over the whole year.

Employers, however, could not make changes in your withholding tax as computed before the tax cuts went into effect. And so it is likely that you have paid all that is due—and more. But in order to get your money back, you must file a detailed return before March 15.

As a taxpayer, you will be one of more than 50 million people filing returns this year. As of last November, the number of people employed in the U.S. was 61,724,000, compared with 60,216,000 in November, 1947, an increase of 1,508,000. This means that there will be many first-time taxpayers.

It is a remarkable fact that many people pay too much tax. This is mainly because of a general unwillingness to learn a few basic, essentially simple rules about making out tax returns.

With few exceptions, people make an honest effort to compute their taxes correctly, and if they err it is in Uncle Sam's favor. The government gives the taxpayer every opportunity to claim all exemptions he is entitled to. It is up to the individual to make the most of his claims.

Yet my experience is that most errors in computation are due to three things: using the wrong tax form, failure to list all deductions, not claiming all exemptions.

In addition to the 1948 cuts in tax rates, two other factors now influence reductions: a new principle of family taxing — splitting the income of husband and wife and computing the tax on the halves; and an increase in the number of exemptions allowed.

Every person has a choice of three ways of handling his tax problem.

The first is by filling out Form 1040-A and attaching the withholding receipts your employer will give you.

The second involves the use of a longer form—1040—which does not require you to claim your deductions. They are simply figured on a flat rate of 10 percent of your income, but no more than $1,000.

The third method involves use of a form which permits you to claim all your deductions. The three methods differ only in the amount of the deductions which may be claimed.

It may be desirable to compute your tax by all three methods, in order to find out which one yields the lowest amounts. Results may vary greatly, as the chart on this page demonstrates by showing the possible range of tax with fixed deductions.

An invaluable aid in computing income tax is the family budget record. A systematically-kept budget, if properly utilized, can provide an accurate, time-and-money saving system for use in tax reporting.

The average American housewife spends uncounted hours with the problem of stretching the family income. A fraction of that time spent in studying the rules of income tax computation will pay gratifying dividends. Saving bills, invoices, sales receipts and check stubs alone will prove a great help in building up deductions.

Some Ways to Save Money

HERE ARE some tips on using the family budget to save money on taxes.

1. Be sure you keep a record of the cost of entertaining business associates in your home, if your business makes it necessary. Entertainment costs are proper business expense deductions, and they may add up to a substantial sum at the end of the year.

If you entertain customers away from home, keep stubs of theater, baseball, football or fight tickets, as well as receipted bills for hotels, food and other entertainment. They may be valuable tax deductions.

2. When your home, car or other personal property is used for your husband's business and partly for your own needs, be sure to make a record of your costs and pro-rate them for tax purposes.

3. Exact deductions often are not necessary. For example, you may estimate deductions for sales tax, gasoline tax and similar items. But save the sales slips on which you base your estimates.

4. Keep a careful record of business travel expenses—hotel bills, railroad or plane tickets, meals, lodging and incidentals.

5. Remember that the cost of any article you give to charities or religious organizations is a legitimate deduction on your return. This may include donations of food baskets, contributions to bazaars or preparation of charity dinners. Remember, too, that cash contributions to charitable or religious organizations are proper deductions, no matter how small. Keep a record of all donations to local charities or churches.

6. Many people omit important medical costs. Drugs, medicines, medical and dental supplies, eye glasses and vitamins may be included in your medical deductions. They may be slight, but when calculated for the year they often amount to a considerable sum.

7. If you have property you are holding for investment, keep a record of what it costs you to maintain, manage or conserve it. Do so even if it produces no income. These costs can be deducted, and should be itemized thus:

Investment counsel fees.

Custodians' fees paid to banks or others.

Auditors' and accountants' expenses.

Traveling costs for trips away from home for the purpose of looking after investments or conferring with your attorney, accountant or trustee.

Maintenance costs of idle property, if you're trying to rent or sell.

Keeping a record on rental property is extremely important because there are so many deductible expenses. Records should include the cost of the property, covering legal fees, title insurance, date of acquisition and the date and cost of each material alteration or addition. These details will prove your gain or loss if you sell, and they also form the basis for the depreciation allowance taken each year on your tax return.

Also to be included are such income and operating expenses as:

Amount of rental income received.

Utilities (heat, water, gas, and telephone).

Repairs (painting, cleaning, papering, redecorating).

Property taxes.

Management expenses.

Salaries and wages paid to maintenance and service men, and social security taxes paid on the wages.

Legal expenses for drawing up short-term leases, dispossessing tenants or collecting rentals.

Premiums on fire, liability or plate-glass insurance.

Interest on mortgages or other indebtedness.

Entitled to Deductions

IF YOU ARE renting part of your house, or even if you occupy the house you own, you are entitled to many of the deductions listed above. Itemize such expenses as property taxes, interest on mortgage and casualty losses not reimbursed by insurance.

8. A detailed record of automobile expenses is important, whether or not you use your car in your work. State gasoline taxes are deductible. A detailed record of mileage, or gallons of gasoline purchased, will enable you to make an estimate. If you use your car in your work, you must itemize the following: cost of the car (to establish gain or loss when it is sold, and to provide a basis for your depreciation deduction); mileage driven; repairs; license fees and driver's license (these are deductible even if you do not use your car for business purposes).

Personal exemption for all individuals is now $600, an increase of $100 over previous years. You get this exemption for yourself, your spouse and all your dependents. It does not apply to a dependent if his gross income for the year is $500 or more.

A new clause covers taxpayers 65 years or older. It provides the regular exemption of $600, plus another exemption of $600. You get this exemption for 1948 if you were 65 or reached 65 before the end of the year.

If you and your spouse were both 65 as of December 31, 1948, you both get the old-age exemptions on a joint return. That gives you four exemptions, or $2,400. If one spouse is 65 and the other is not, three exemptions are allowed. If you file a separate return, you get the $1,200 exemption for your wife, if she is over 65, only if she has no gross income and is not a dependent of another. You can claim an individual as a dependent, according to regulations, only if you contribute more than half of his support and he has a gross income of less than $500.

Exemptions may be claimed for yourself, your spouse, your children and a long list of relatives, under the conditions stated above. Any consultant of the Bureau of Internal Revenue can give you a complete list.

The government urges taxpayers to fill out income tax returns carefully, sign them properly and to file them early with the nearest tax collector. In that way you avoid March 15 jitters.

STOP—
loosening your skin!

MAKE THIS TEST! You will be shocked to find out how loose your skin really is!

DO THIS! Sit before your mirror. Do exactly as the girl is doing in the picture above. If folds of skin roll up under your eyes, you have loose skin! This loose skin may easily wrinkle too soon causing you to look much older than you really are!

Millions are actually loosening delicate skin tissues around their eyes in the very act of creaming their skins.

But this old way of skin care is rapidly being discarded. Well informed women are adopting skin care that ends destructive rubbing.

My Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting. No more need for rubbing at all. Think what this means!

When you use my cream that requires no rubbing, you are not loosening your skin—you are not deepening fine lines! In short, you stop helping your skin to grow loose and older looking. You help to preserve tone, elasticity and smoothness your skin naturally has.

Clearer Skin, Too, The First Day

What's more, I can promise you a clearer skin the first day you stop rubbing dirt-laden cream back into tiny skin crevices and into pore mouths.

Here's why. The cleansing ingredient in Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting—it has the power to surround each tiny particle of stale make-up and grime and separate it from the skin. It literally lifts dirt away from your skin! No destructive rubbing is necessary—just smooth it on and tissue it off!

What to Expect

Your first trial will convince you that my 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting (no more rubbing) and that it makes your skin far cleaner than before, without rubbing.

So get any size jar—even the smallest size is ample to prove that you don't have to rub your skin any more to clean it.

And remember, this one cream does 4 things for your skin. Besides self-acting cleansing—it smooths!—it aids the natural pore-refining process!—and it makes a perfect powder base!

Spring's new look emphasizes femininity. Shown left to right are a soft, all-wool suit with choir-boy collar, cuffed hip (about $15); vivid wool topper with clever collar and pocket ($11); and graceful gabardine coat with yoke back, wide, buttoned cuffs (from $20), all in rainbow colors.

FASHION GOES FEMININE FOR Springtime

Its motifs are definitely high-style

SPRINGTIME is always fashion's darling. New hats, new suits, new coats, new dresses, all blossom as colorfully as the first flamboyant sprays of forsythia. This year the trend toward femininity is more complete than ever, and extends especially to juniors, whose fashions for 1949 have a particularly bright and winning appeal.

Teen-age clothes have grown up, and school girls who used to go about in bulky, shapeless outfits are fully converted to styles with a high-fashion look. As shown in these examples from Aldens of Chicago, waistlines are nipped in, young hips are rounded, and every outfit has definitely feminine touches, whether it's ribbons and bows, ruffles or scallops, or a flashing array of tiny buttons.

Musts for every spring wardrobe, young or old, include a dressy coat or suit; a splashy print, and that all-time favorite, a clean-cut navy blue ensemble accented with white.

Interest in these navy suits is concentrated in fine tailoring and full skirts. The faille suit at left has softly-draped collar ($11). Sleek taffeta two-piecer (right) has unusual hip panniers ($13).

Teen-age trio with Victorian charm: Taffeta ballerina dress (left) has off-shoulder neckline, basque waist ($11). Scallops brighten faille suit jacket (center, $8); cotton pinafore ($6) combines with eyelet.

Every wardrobe must have a print. Peg-drape dress at left is splashed with violets ($8), while cornflowers brighten two-piece suit at right. It has flattering neckline, soft peplum on jacket ($10).

This year you'll be seeing many cottons

IMPORTANT NEWS to every Springtime shopper is the fact that her clothes budget need not be as large this year as it has been in previous seasons. Although fashions show fascinating variety in style, materials and detail, prices are surprisingly reasonable.

Interesting, too, is the place that cotton holds in the fashion picture. No longer a country cousin, cotton holds its own for day or evening wear, lends itself beautifully to the current vogue for firmly feminine designs. One of the most charming: the pinafore dress (far right, above) with perky ruffled flounce edging the ample skirt over a coy cotton eyelet petticoat.

Something for a langorous spring afternoon: Navy crepe (left) with polka dot trim ($11); print with cape collar ($9), and solid color suit with bodice cutouts and peplum jacket ($13). Note the frilly, flowered hats.

Quaint Dutch caps of white pique lend demure charm to old-fashioned blouses and skirts. Left, lace-trimmed blouse and moire faille bow-back skirt. Right, eyelet ruffled blouse with bustle skirt. ($5 to $7). THE END.

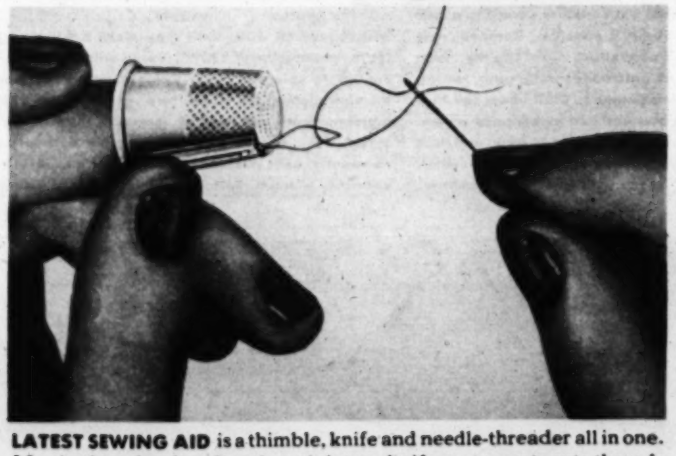
TO HELP BANISH MONDAY'S PROBLEMS: New aluminum clothes prop weighs only 17 ounces, is extended from $4\frac{1}{2}$ to 8 feet by simple twist. It has rubber tip to avoid slips, and won't rust, rot or warp.

HANDY DEVICE in office and home is combination postal scale and paperweight. It's designed to be suitable for any desk and to reduce postage wasted because of overestimated weights. Made of polished solid aluminum on base of black plastic, it's shown as set up for weighing. It can be left this way or scale part can be made to disappear, as platform on top of shaft unscrews and shaft presses down out of sight. When platform is turned upside down, it screws into body of the device. Result: a good-looking paperweight. Individual initials or full name can be stamped in silver on the front of the base.



LATEST SEWING AID is a thimble, knife and needle-threader all in one. Manipulate the thumb and a miniature knife comes out, cuts thread, and slides back. Threader automatically pulls thread through needle.

Rich chocolate mint ice cream, snow-capped with marshmallow-mint sauce, is an easy-to-make treat that will be popular the year round.

Chocolate Mint Ice Cream

WHEN YOU BLEND the rich flavor of chocolate with the fragrance of mint in a smooth ice cream, you have a dessert to talk about. Especially if you top it with a snowy marshmallow-mint sauce. They're easily made, too.

Here is the rest of the menu for a company dinner: hot consommé with tiny square whole-wheat crackers; pot roast with brown gravy; whipped potatoes; buttered carrots; quick-frozen or canned asparagus and plenty of coffee.

Chocolate Mint Ice Cream

1 pkg. prepared chocolate pudding	2 cups milk
¼ cup sugar	¼ tsp. peppermint extract
	1 cup cream, whipped

Combine pudding powder and sugar in saucepan. Add milk gradually, stirring constantly. Cook and stir over medium heat until mixture comes to a boil and is thickened, about 5 minutes. Remove from heat. Stir in peppermint extract. Cool slightly. Turn into freezing tray of automatic refrigerator, setting control for coldest temperature. Chill about one-half hour. Remove to bowl and fold in whipped cream. Freeze one hour longer, then return to bowl and beat with rotary beater until smooth but not melted. Return to tray and freeze until firm. Freezing time: three to four hours. Yield: one quart of ice cream.

Marshmallow Mint Sauce

½ cup sugar	8 marshmallows, cut in small pieces
¼ cup water	⅛ to ¼ teaspoon peppermint extract
1 egg white, stiffly beaten

Boil sugar and water until they make a thin syrup (or to temperature of 230° F.; syrup will not be thick enough to spin a thread). Remove from heat; add marshmallows; let stand two minutes, or until marshmallows are melted, pressing them under syrup. Pour syrup slowly over egg white, beating constantly until mixture is cool. Add peppermint extract in amount indicated. Yield: one cup sauce.

Combine chocolate pudding mix and sugar in saucepan; add milk slowly. Cook as directed on package.

For sauce, make sugar syrup; take from heat; add diced marshmallows; press under syrup until melted.

After freezing 1½ hours turn into chilled bowl and beat with rotary egg beater until smooth, not melted.

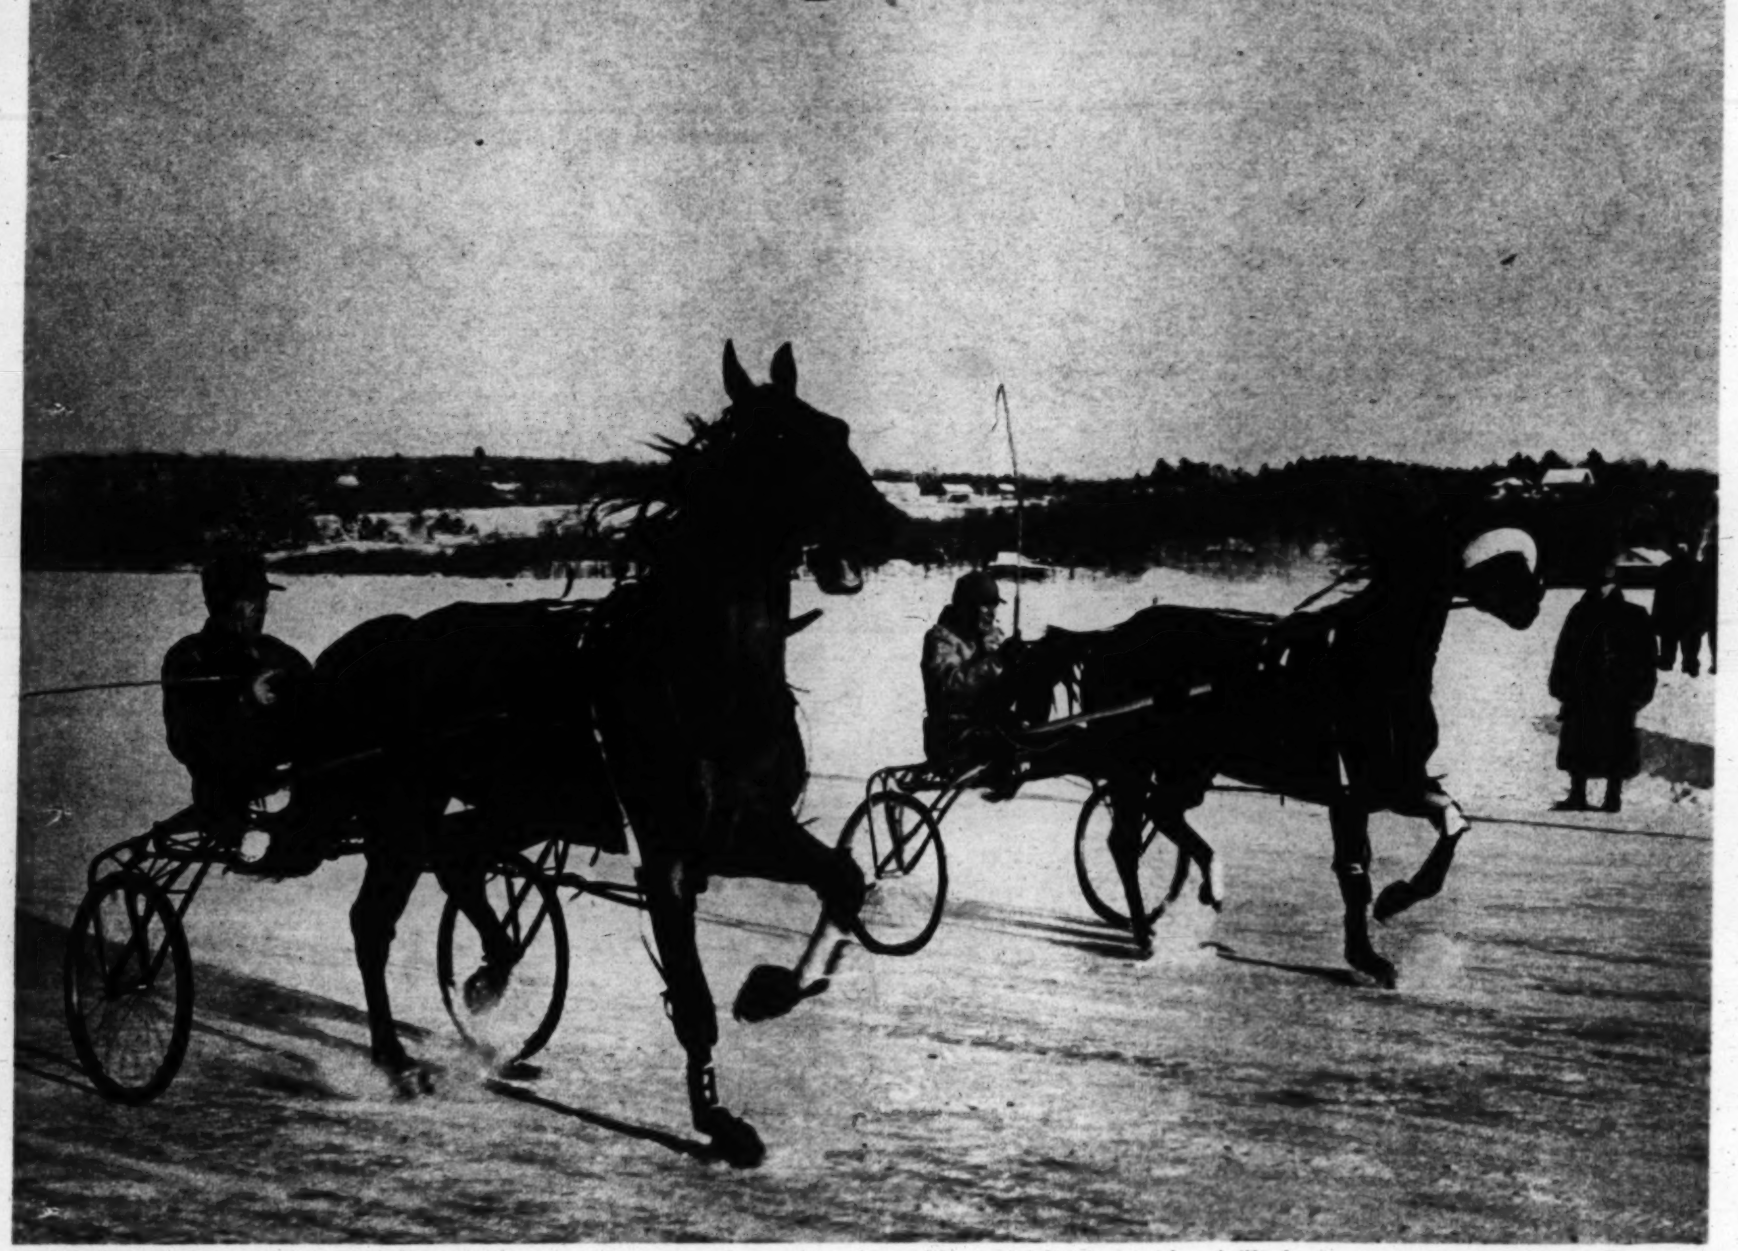
Sportsmen defy the cold

Harness Racing—On Ice!



Racing harness horses on the lightning-fast but treacherous surface of ice-bound Pleasant Pond provides thrills for hardy sportsmen of Gardiner, Me.

Trotters use frozen pond as course

THERE'S nothing new about racing horses in zero temperatures. Great-grandfather did it, for a modest side-bet and to provide mid-winter diversion, when a gentlemanly difference of opinion arose about the quality and speed of his own horse.

In Maine horses are still taken as seriously as they were in 1874 when the great trotting mare, Goldsmith Maid, ripped off a record mile in 2:14. And horsemen there have gone their forebears one better.

Instead of hitching a sleigh to a trotting or pacing horse and clearing a path through drifts in village streets, as used to be done, horsemen in Gardiner, Me., are racing their Standardbreds to regular sulkies on the ice of nearby Pleasant Pond.

It is definitely not a sport for armchair horsemen, or, for that matter, limp-spirited horses. Usually beginning in mid-January, when temperatures are hovering around zero, members of the Gardiner Driving Club carry their horses by van to the pond every fair Sunday and put on a meet.

In Gardiner, as in a few other Maine towns, racing begins when the ice is feet thick and when a quarter-mile straightaway can be marked out and cleared. During the two-month season single heats, two-out-of-three and three-out-of-five heat races are run. Usually entries are confined to horses owned by club members and matched by club officers. Occasionally horses from other nearby towns are entered.

With only one exception, the Gardiner harness race meeting resembles those of any Grand Circuit track. Times made by the horses for a quarter-mile are sometimes under 30 seconds. Spectators are charged "admission" of 50 cents for use of the snow-plowed road to the track. But there are no mutual machines. As in great-grandfather's day, however, differences of opinion can readily be arbitrated by a side-bet.

Every Sunday in January and February the Gardiner Driving Club members van their entries to the pond for an afternoon of racing in frigid temperatures. Blankets protect animals from cold when not running.

Blacksmith is always on hand to adjust shoes specially designed to prevent slipping on the icy course.

Starter drops red flag to begin race. Trotters and pacers are scored up and down quarter-mile track.

Owners' and drivers' competition is as keen in Gardiner as at any trotting track in the country. Since there are no purses and only small prizes for winning horses, emphasis of meets is on sport.

Joe Jones, sheet metal worker at Boeing Airplane Co. in Wichita, shows his wife and children one of the B-50 Superforts he's helping to modify.

Joe Jones met wife, Margaret, at airplane plant during war. Now they have daughter Nora, 3, and baby son Bobby, live in a four-room ground floor apartment.

Joe Jones, Planebuilder

He's back at the big Boeing plant, and glad of it

RECONVERSION for Joseph Isaac John Jones of Wichita, Kans., has meant the completion of a cycle. It has brought him right back to where he started at the beginning of the war, and where he left off when V-J Day finally came three and a half years ago. Once again he is working on Superfortresses at the vast Wichita plant of Boeing Airplane Co.

For many Americans the end of the war meant a general exodus from war plants and a shedding of uniforms. Along with his countrymen, Joe Jones made the transition. He did so reluctantly, though, for he had a genuine affection for the mighty silver B-29's he had helped to build.

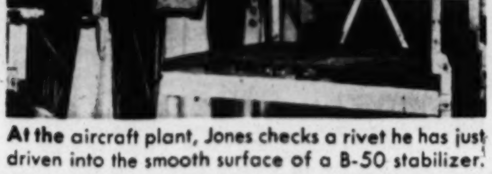
Joe tried his hand at several metal-working jobs. With his brother he opened a successful dry-cleaning establishment in his home town of Frontenac, Kans. But his heart was not in profit-and-loss, and he listened attentively last year to rumors about Air Force expansion which would involve Boeing at Wichita. "If they're going to be out there building those planes," he told his brother, "I'd like to be helping them." A short time after that, he was back at the plant as a sheet metal worker. Today he is one of the first 6,000 Boeing workers helping to modernize wartime B-29's.

Joe Jones was born in Frontenac 35 years ago. His parents died when he was a child, and his grandfather, William Delaney, and an aunt, Nora Delaney, raised the boy and his two brothers and sisters.

His Aim: To Build Planes

Throughout his boyhood, Joe, like many Americans, dreamed of airplanes. He had no visions of becoming a tycoon in the aircraft industry. He had a simpler ambition: to help build the ships so they would fly.

But before he finally landed the job he really wanted, Joe had his share of "rolling stone" employment. He worked on a soil erosion project, was a tipple hand with a coal company and even managed to get a year at the Teachers College in Pittsburg. Then came the war—and mass production of bombers. Joe got his chance to help build the biggest planes of all.



At the aircraft plant, Jones checks a rivet he has just driven into the smooth surface of a B-50 stabilizer.

Aircraft worker Jones makes a hobby of his work. At home he builds model of giant B-29 bomber, lets daughter Nora admire the results.

He has a wife, two children and a future

JOE JONES had made many tries at landing a job in an airplane factory, but the plants wanted only experienced men. Then, suddenly, a side door was opened for him when the Government offered to teach many facets of the trade at aircraft schools. Joe was one of the first to enroll.

Immediately after Pearl Harbor, Joe was classified by Army doctors as 4-F. Disappointed, Joe resolved to do his level best in overalls rather than uniform.

He was a foreman at the Wichita plant when Margaret Edith Sellers came to work for him as a shop clerk. They went out together for six months, then were married. Two youngsters, Nora Elizabeth, 3, and Robert Joseph, still an infant, now complete the Jones family.

Now, when he goes to work at the plant, he finds his new job much like his old one. He's helping to modernize the B-29's and B-50 Superfortresses, and is getting acquainted with the new B-47 Stratojet.

Joe Jones's rise from brake operator to assembly man, crew chief, jig helper, assistant foreman and finally foreman is not as glamorous as the careers of pilots who fly the planes he works on. Joe however, has inner satisfaction of doing precisely what he's trained to do and likes to do, and at the same time knowing that he's among the Americans who are keeping our aircraft industry the world's foremost.

Sunday afternoon drive is part of Joneses' regular schedule. They have a 1936 car, would like new one greatly.

In the evening, the James K. Daniels (he's a jig-builder at the aircraft plant) come in for a neighborly visit.

Joe and Margaret go dancing when employees' association has party—and when they get baby-sitter. THE END.

"SO DEAR TO MY HEART"

Luana Patten and Bobby Driscoll perform delightfully in this heart-warming story of an Indiana farm boy. But a black lamb with a mind of its own almost steals the show, particularly when the lamb slips over from real life into Walt Disney's clever animation. Songs by Burl Ives add charm to film's nostalgic mood. (R.K.O.)

"ADVENTURES OF DON JUAN"

Those who like costume drama with plenty of duels, love scenes and court intrigues will find that "The Adventures of Don Juan" has them all. Errol Flynn is dashing as the Spanish lover, and Ann Rutherford, with him above, is only one of the ladies who win his attentions. Co-starred is newcomer Viveca Lindefors. (Warner Bros.)

"THE FIGHTING O'FLYNN"

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who stars in it, calls this an "Irish horse opera," and he's right. It's a swashbuckling, pseudo-historical affair, set against an authentic Irish background with "The O'Flynn" (Fairbanks) in constant hot water. Almost singlehandedly, he frustrates the invasion of Ireland by Napoleon, wins a lady and a castle. Helena Carter and Richard Greene do well with their roles but the film really belongs to Doug, Jr., who carries on in the best tradition of his famous father. (Universal-International)

"LETTER TO THREE WIVES"

Wifely trio comprises Linda Darnell, Ann Sothern and Jeanne Crain (above), but film introduces a newcomer — Paul Douglas — who outdoes them all. (20th Century-Fox)

"WHISPERING SMITH"

Alan Ladd admirers (numerous as snowflakes in a blizzard) will cheer their hero in this color thriller. The plot isn't new, but railroad agent Ladd makes it live. (Paramount)

"JOHN LOVES MARY"

A good job has been done in transferring this comedy from stage to screen. Ronald Reagan and Patricia Neal as the leads are both romantic and confused. (Warner Bros.)

"ACT OF VIOLENCE"

For all who like their melodrama stark, here is a notably chilling film. Janet Leigh and Van Heflin (above), Robert Ryan and Mary Astor all give top performances. (M-G-M)

"CHICKEN EVERY SUNDAY"

This sentimental, homespun comedy stars Celeste Holm and Dan Dailey, who is wholly likeable in a straight role. Above: Alan Young, Colleen Townsend. (20th Century-Fox)

"SHOCKPROOF"

Cornel Wilde and his wife, Patricia Knight, starred together for the first time, make an attractive team. The screen story concerns a girl on parole; good melodrama. (Columbia)

It's Man Against Nature...Man Against Woman

—as two sisters trade their loves—in a desperate gamble for happiness during the greatest snowstorm in history!

Here is the passionate, revealing story of two beautiful sisters who forget about consequences and defy conventions when they think the great snow means each day may be their last! For twenty days and nights the great snow falls. It imprisons in one house Ruston Cobb; his neurotic wife, Nolla; his voluptuous, devil-may-care sister-in-law, Beryl; and her drifting artist-lover. "The Great Snow" is Ruston Cobb's story and the tense drama of his exciting fight for survival. But it is also the intimate picture of two sisters (different as dusk from dawn) who under the impact of shattered nerves and shattered morals trade loves in a last gamble for happiness.

"WHY DID I DO IT..."

..."Faithless under my own roof, before my children's eyes . . ." cries sensitive Nolla. But when each day may be her last, does she have the right to this last chance at happiness—with her own sister's fiance? Find the answer in "The Great Snow."

"Terrific zip,"—Clifton Fadiman

In an atmosphere of violence and jealousy, Cobb watches with distress his frigid and timid wife's surrender to her sister's lover—sees her grasp anxiously for the warm sharing of passion—but lets himself be drawn into a love affair with his sister-in-law. Yet before fate plays its final cards, all four are to find new meaning to life and a happiness they thought would never be theirs. Discover for yourself what happens in "The Great Snow"—$2.75 at retail in the publisher's edition. Yours FREE, together with that other great smash-hit, "Rampart Street"—yes, BOTH free when you mail coupon below. But hurry, please! It's first come, first served. Mail gift coupon below NOW!

"Who says we mustn't..." scoffs reckless Beryl.

"Not the man who makes the keys for my apartment." But Beryl's gay banter belies her yearning for the only man she's ever loved—her own sister's husband. You'll thrill to tense drama as fate throws them into each other's arms in the surprising climax of "The Great Snow."
